Mayor Buller May "Come Back"

His Worship Mayor Buller has announced his intention of retaining the civic reins of government for another year providing he is unopposed. The Mayor feels that he is entitled to a second term, but is not disposed to oppose the election of any one desiring to enter the field. In this connection the Times, without prejudice to other possible candidates, has to say that Mr. Buller's administration has been characterized by good clean clever work.

Teachers Convention

The County Teachers' Convention met in the Assembly Hall, Normal School, at 10 a.m. yesterday. President Broderick, Inspector, in the chair. Under head of general business the Association decided on motion of Mr. Lees, seconded by Mr. Thompson, that the teachers contribute one quarter of one per cent, of their salaries to the Red Cross Society. President gave very interesting and instructive address on Essentials in Teaching. Misses Carter and Edgar gave report of O.E.A. Convention in Toronto.

Yesterday's Police Court

At yesterday's police court James Huff was charged with having been drunk in a public place. He "guessed he was drunk all right." James paid the usual $2 for his fall from the water wagon. The young man, Fred Piper, was discharged, for lack of evidence, in the case of Margaret Lela Duncan, with whom he had been living on Brock street. A local shoemaker pleaded guilty to having been drunk and consented to be put on the blacklist.

Banker, Building and Sheep.

A few days ago an East City girl, who is one of Peterboro's society ladies, accompanied by a young lady residing in the centre of the city, were joy-riding in the township of Smith. Their car was followed by a fancy bull-dog. The dog "worried" a sheep belonging to one of the richest farmers in Smith. The ladies, seeing that the sheep was likely to die, drove to the farmer's residence and said "Our dog has killed one of your sheep. How much is it worth?" The farmer answered "Well, I sold some 'culls' from my flock this morning at $8 a head. Some of my sheep are worth more and some less. I'll take a chance on the sheep for $9." The ladies promised to send a cheque next day. In the meantime one of the ladies went to a local bank manager and told of the occurrence. The banker wrote to the farmer asking him to call. When the farmer arrived at the bank the manager started in by saying "You want $9 for that sheep. I suppose you want to keep the skin and 'skin' the ladies?" The farmer replied, "If you will come with me to my Bank I guess I can show you that I have as much to my credit as you have." The result is still pending, as the farmer's sheep was "running at large on the roadway."

GIRLS! THICKEN AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice soft, hair and lots of it. Just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over the scalp —Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments —a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

Van Horne

◆◆◆◆◆◆

BY A FELLOW ARTIST

IT is hard to describe Sir William Van Horne in fairly moderate language. One finds superlatives cropping up all the time, for there is nothing average about this modern Leonardo da Vinci, this man of many parts, this universal genius.

My first impression of him was that of a man full of strength and kindness, with a tremendous tolerance and understanding of human nature. Then one after another of his different sides appeared as conversation took a wider field, and when I left him I was marvelling at his personality.

Not that Sir William was what one would call a handsome man, though it was hard to judge what he may have been in his youth. But his extraordinary sympathy and understanding of all things beautiful from the effect of all natural scenes to the most exquisite of man-made objects, gave one the impression that here was a man who knew.

The highly trained scholar and overcrammed college youth is not really an interesting person, his knowledge does not seem to make any others better, but the wide knowledge of a man of Sir William's experience given out through his magnetic personality must have had a tremendous effect on all with whom he came in contact.

I went first to see him in order to get his permission to make a sketch of him in black and white. I will admit I had just a little bit of fear for I was told Sir William was an "Empire Builder," and the man more or less responsible for the great Canadian Pacific Railway. I felt for a moment that I was going to meet the man who laid the rails from the Pacific to the Atlantic—who operated the trans-Pacific ships from Vancouver to the Orient, and the trans-Atlantic from the Maritime coast to the British Isles. It was a great joy when he came slowly into the big drawing-room with a genial smile and an apology on his lips for keeping me waiting—then I knew my request would be granted. His first words were, "Now what can I do for you?" And on my stating my request, he immediately replied in the affirmative with none of the "shilly-shallying" of lesser men who might wish to pretend that they are much too important to give up any time to such an unimportant person as an ambitious artist. He at once fixed a day and hour and it was with great delight that I started on the sketch in his own studio, a wonderful room full of curios and "objets d'arts" from all countries and of all ages. The inevitable cigar was in his mouth most of the time, but every now and again he would take it out and say, "You will tell me when I am to stop smoking, won't you? May I have another puff?" Being an artist he could understand how one felt and his chief idea was to make it easy as possible for a fellow artist.

Without touching on personal experiences I may say that I have met some of the greatest men of the age, politicians, artists, explorers, musicians and writers; but among them all he stood out in strong relief. He was so essentially human and never was there the slightest hint of trying to show off his power and knowledge, a failing one sees often amongst the world's favourites. His love for his little grandson was one very noticeable trait in his character, and amongst his own paintings one of a group of "Teddy Bears" on a good sized canvas painted—so says the inscription at the wish of "Little William."

His work, his different interest and talents are widely known and perhaps he is best described as "cosmic" for he seems to be made of all this earth's elements and spiritually in touch with all that makes for progress.

GERMANY SEEMS PANIC-STRICKEN OVER SUCCESSES OF ADVANCING ENEMY

Russia's Ever-Increasing Armies Give Berlin Serious Food for Thought--Papers Forbidden to Publish Alarming News. Influential Weekly Suppressed for Daring to Criticize Turkey's Belligerent Policy. And all This in Kultured Germany

Berlin, Nov. 13.—Warning that circulators of false news which tends to alarm and make the public uneasy, will be imprisoned for one year has been issued by the military authorities.

The warning came from Gen. Von Der Tann at Munich. It followed the confiscation this week of Maximilian Harden's paper, Die Zukunft (The Future). The publication was suppressed because of its criticism of Turkey's entrance into the war.

Russian pressure is now being along the entire frontier. The advance is being made with ever-increasing forces. The German border force has repulsed a detachment of Russian cavalry at Kalisz, 60 miles from Breslau, but over the Russian side of the border. There is every indication that the renewed activity is in much greater strength than the advance which was made soon after war was declared, and which was completely repulsed.

The above despatch, transmitted via London was passed by the British censor, Coming from Berlin the references to the tremendous Russian advance are highly significant. The suppression of the weekly Die Zukunft, on the pretext that its news was false, and the warning against making the public uneasy, is probably a precaution taken with a view to suppressing the tales of disaster which refugees from the east are undoubtedly carrying into the heart of Germany.

Harden is regarded as the most potent force in German journalism Prince Buelow having remarked that he never misses one of this man's articles. The New York Evening Post says: "There is scarcely a politician in Germany who does not eagerly grasp at the latest number of Harden's periodical. Harden has never called on a minister or archancellor, but high functionaries frequently come to see him at his villa for the purpose of obtaining his judgment on important political problems." His power in Germany may be judged from the fact that, single handed, he overthrew the all-powerful favorite of the Emperor, Prince Zu Eulenburg.

The Future is read all over the world in diplomatic circles and, according to one authority, "many a diplomat has read his official obituary on the pages before he knew he had ceased to exist." That is the sort of paper which German fear of a panic has suppressed. Remembering that Harden was the mouthpiece of Bismarck and has friends of tremendous influence, interference with his publication speaks volumes as to Germany's fear of panic among her peoples.

THE KAISER SAYS 'GO ON' AT A SAFE DISTANCE OF 60 MILES FROM BORDER

London, Nov. 13.—Emperor William has established his headquarters, at Coblenz, according to the correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company at The Hague. He is being guarded by armed airships.

This information reached The Hague in a telegram from Berlin which reads as follows:

"Emperor William has now established his headquarters at Coblenz and he has invited his five daughters-in-law and his sons, including the Crown Prince, to come to Coblenz, and visit him. Two Zeppelin airships armed with machine guns, are continually circling over his Majesty's private apartments."

The Berlin Statement.

Berlin, Nov. 13.—German military headquarters today gave out an official announcement as follows:

On the branch of the Yser Canal at Nieuport our marines have inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, and we have taken 700 prisoners. During our attacks on Ypres, which have progressed favorably, another 1,100 prisoners have been taken.

Fierce French attacks to the west and east of Soissons have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

On the East Prussian frontier, at Eydtkuhnen, and also further south to the east of the outlet of the Mazurian lakes, fresh battles have developed, but no decision yet has been reached.

What it Really Means

The above statement read in the light of the Paris announcement can be compared to the dog whose bark was worse than his bite. In the first place the Germans did not start out with the expectation of doing much defending of the Yser and if the allies have only lost 1,800 prisoners in the fight they must have guarded their lines with amazing success. The French attack at Soisson was "repulsed" after they had gained several new lines of trenches where an inch is as good as a mile."

German Desperate Attempts to Cross the Yser Canal Fustrated

Force of Foe's Drive in Attempt to Reach Dunkirk and Calais is Apparently Spent. The Position Around Ypres Unchanged. Snow Falling in the Vosges Heights Hampers Movements. Fired by British Example New French Troops are Gradually Pressing Forward

PARIS, NOV. 13.—THE FORCE OF THE GERMAN DRIVE IN AN ATTEMPT TO BREAK THROUGH THE ALLIES' LINES AND REACH THE COAST CITIES OF DUNKIRK AND CALAIS, IS APPARENTLY SPENT FOR THE TIME BEING AT LEAST. THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE ISSUED FROM THE WAR OFFICE THIS AFTERNOON DECLARES THAT THE VIOLENCE OF THE FIGHTING FROM THE COAST TO THE LYS RIVER, THROUGH DIXMUDE AND YPRES, HAS DIMINISHED. ALL THE ATTEMPTS OF THE GERMANS TO CROSS THE YSER CANAL HAVE BEEN FRUSTRATED. THE POSITION ABOUT YPRES IS UNCHANGED, WITH THE ALLIES STILL HOLDING THEIR POSITIONS. THE FRENCH HAVE OCCUPIED TRACY LAVAL, THE STATEMENT DECLARES. SNOW IS NOW FALLING IN THE VOSGES HEIGHTS AND OPERATIONS IN THAT DISTRICT HAVE BEEN HAMPERED.

PARIS, NOV. 13.—WITH THE FIGHTING FROM YPRES TO THE SEA CONTINUING WITHOUT DECISIVE GAINS FOR EITHER THE ALLIES OR THE GERMANS, WHO ARE ENDEAVORING TO HAMMER THEIR WAY TO THE COAST, A DISTINCT RENEWAL OF OFFENSIVE TACTICS WAS EVIDENT TODAY ON THE ALLIED RIGHT ALONG THE AISNE.

THE OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE REPORTED A REPULSE OF A COUNTER ATTACK LAUNCHED BY GERMANS UPON THE FORCES WHICH HAVE RECAPTURED CHAVONNE AND SOUPIR. THIS POSITION, NORTHEAST OF SOISSONS, IS NOW OCCUPIED BY FRESH FRENCH TROOPS, WHICH REPLACED THE BRITISH FORCES ENGAGED IN HOLDING THE GERMANS IN CHECK ON THE WEST FIRED BY FRIENDLY RIVALRY TO SURPASS THE BRITISH IN THE OPERATIONS IN THE AISNE DISTRICT THE NEW FRENCH TROOPS ARE GRADUALLY PRESSING FORWARD. IT IS EVIDENT THAT BOTH GERMANS AND THE ALLIED FORCES IN THE WEST ARE BECOMING WORN BY THE LONG STRUGGLE FOR THE POSSESSION OF A LINE TO THE COAST. FOR THE PAST WEEK VIOLENT ASSAULTS BY THE GERMANS HAVE BEEN IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWED BY ONE OR TWO DAYS DURING WHICH THE POWER OF THE ATTACK WAS GREATLY DIMINISHED.

BRILLIANT BRITISH DEFENCE OF YPRES WINS ADMIRATION OF WORLD

Thousands Upon Thousands of Germans Advance to Annihilation by the "Contemptible Little Army"--Glorious Defence by British Will Go Down to History as one of the Great Events of the Whole War. Each Move of German Infantry Broken to Pieces

London, Nov. 13.—The official Press Bureau issued the following statement last night:

"The operations during the last few days have consisted mainly of fighting to the north of the Lys, where the points of interest were at first on the line of Hollebecke, Wytschaete and Messines. There have also been severe encounters on the line from Zandvoorde to Fretimbein.

Allies Capture Machine Guns.

"The character of the fighting has been one of frequent and vigorous infantry attacks from the Germans, accompanied by heavy shell-fire, alternating with equally vigorous counter attacks, the general result being the maintenance of our lines, with considerable losses on our side, but with still heavier losses on the other. Six machine guns and over 100 prisoners were taken by us on the 8th.

"The allies' strength has been constantly maintained by reinforcements. Latterly the stress has been in the neighborhood of Gheluvelt, to the north of Ypres, and at Dixmude.

A Continual Bombardment.

"The German artillery fire was practically a continual bombardment intended to pulverize the defence preparatory to the advance of the infantry. In the centre the struggle has been at Ypres, the defence of which will certainly be reckoned in history as one of the most striking episodes of the British army.

"For more than three weeks the position, which projects like a bastion into the enemy's lines, has been under a rain of shells which has hardly ceased by day or night. During this time the enemy has poured successive waves of infantry against it only to see them break to pieces, one after the other."

GERMAN RETREATING ARMY IN EAST REPORTED IN A MISERABLE CONDITION

London, Nov. 12.—A despatch from Petrograd states that the Germans are now in retreat from Kiandom along a line to Rashayon and towards Klugunsko. The Germans present a miserable appearance. Some have neither shoes or overcoats, and the prisoners report a deficiency in food and war supplies. Important engineering works are now going on in the Metow region in preparation for the mounting of heavy German artillery for new defensive positions

GERMAN SUBMARINE SUNK BY A FRENCH TORPEDO BOAT OFF DUNKIRK

London, Nov. 13.—A special from Dunkirk states that a French torpedo boat sank a German submarine off Westende, Belgium. The submarine, it appears, was trying to torpedo a French warship, when the latter's commander caught sight of her periscope, put on full speed, and charged down on the enemy, which disappeared. A large quantity of oil then rose to the surface, marking the spot where the submarine sank.

DR. SMITH FREED IN WIFE MURDER CASE

Springfield, O., Nov. 12.—The final chapter in the most sensational criminal case in the history of the local court was written today, when an entry was filed quashing the indictments which charged Dr. Arthur B. Smith with the murder of his first wife Mrs. Florence Cavilear Smith on March 4, 1912. Smith was arrested in Boston on October of the same year, following his marriage to Miss Mabel Merchant of Newton Highlands, who was a nurse in a local hospital at the time. His two trials resulted in disagreement by the juries.

The first Mrs. Smith died as the result of digitalis and aconite poisoning. The causes of death were considered natural for a time, until certain actions of Dr. Smith caught the attention of the authorities and a watch was set on him. He went east and shortly after was married to Miss Merchant, whom he has previously known. He maintained his innocence throughout, and insisted that the prosecution was instigated by relatives at his first wife, because of his second marriage so soon after the death of Mrs. Smith.

The trial attracted much attention from the start, the state engaging special counsel to try its case. In both trials, however, the jury failed to reach a verdict. The last trial kept the jury out for 44 hours before its members returned to the court room and announced that they could not render a verdict.

The 73-year-old mother of the defendant was of material advantage to his case, coming to his assistance with both wealth to engage brilliant counsel and with testimony that made a marked impression on the impression on the juries. After the second trial Dr. Smith was released on a bond of $10,000. He left Springfield and is now employed in a drug store in Cleveland.

CALL FOR 150,000 CANADIANS AT THE FRONT BY THE END OF YEAR 1915

With 40,000 at Home Under Arms, This is Ottawa's Military Programme--British Parliament Consents to Recruiting Another Million Men--British Empire is Very Serious in the Task of Crushing Prussian Militarism at all Cost

Ottawa, Nov. 13.—The announcement from London that great Britain proposes to put an army of two million men in the field undoubtedly means that a corresponding big effort must be made by Canada during the next year to maintain a steady and even increasing flow of Canadian fighting men towards the firing line in Europe. It is estimated that if the war is still in progress a year from now, Canada will have an army of approximately 150,000 men in the field. In government and military circles here it is stated to-day that Canada is prepared for an indefinite period to send forward men as fast as they can be armed and equipped and that it will not be a matter of one, two or three contingents but of sending forward a continuous stream of reinforcements so long as they are required to accomplish the decisive defeat of the legions of the Kaiser.

London, Nov. 13.—England was staggered to-day by an official announcement from Premier Asquith stating that the British casualties in the war to date are 57,000 killed, wounded and missing. With this toll paid in the fighting so far, more men are to be rushed to the front. A supplementary estimate from the war office to-day declared that with one million more men the total British strength of all ranks would be 2,186,400.

Recruiting has increased to a great extent during the last week. It is said that Premier Asquith will formally seek the sanction of Parliament for the raising of the one million additional troops.

The statement of the premier placing the casualties at approximately 57,000, was written in reply to enquiries from members of the House of Commons.

AUSTRIA REPORTED SEEKING PEACE QUITE INDEPENDENT OF GERMANY

New York, Nov. 13.—In financial circles credence is given to a ticker report that within the last two or three days Austria-Hungary has asked a powerful neutral State to ascertain from the allies which terms they would be willing to grant to that country in the event of its entering into negotiations for peace independent of Germany. It is supposed that it may have been on account of his knowledge of such overtures that Premier Asquith in the British Parliament the other day intimated that the war might end sooner than was expected.

KAISER WOULD SELL.

Geneva, via Paris, Nov. 13.—Emperor William is offering his marble palace, the Villa of Achilleion, in Corfu, for sale. It was built in 1890-91 for the Empress Elizabeth of Austria at a cost of $5,000,000 and has since been improved. A syndicate of Germans and Swiss hotelmen wished to buy Achilleion a few years ago but they were outbid by the Emperor.

The Emperor's decision to sell the place it is stated, is the result of the uncertain attitude of Greece towards Germany and Austria. It is said he fears confiscation of the palace if Greece joins the allies. A Swiss syndicate has been given an option on the place at a low price.

The Villa of Achilleion, which is in the Italian renaissance style, was purchased in 1907 by the Emperor of Germany. The gardens are open to visitors. At the back of the villa are a peristyle and three terraces with a large number of statues, and among them, on the outermost terrace, is a "dying Achilles" by Herter.

The large park descending towards the sea in terraces, contains a small temple with a seated marble statue of Heine, the poet, by the Danish sculptor Hasselriis. The villa was erected by the Italian architect Rafaelo Carito.

GHENT TO PAY $50,000.

Amsterdam, via London, Nov. 13.—The new Governor of Ghent, Gen. Von Manteuffel, has hoisted the German flag over the Town Hall and imposed a war levy of $50,000 for the pay of the officers and soldiers. He insisted that the levy must be paid by noon today.

How To Peel Off a Weatherbeaten Face.

It's really a simple matter to renovate a face soiled by dirt, wind or by cold. Ordinary, mercolized wax, used like cold cream, will transform the worst old complexion into one of snowy whiteness and velvety softness. It literally peels off the outer veil of surface skin, but so gently, gradually, there's no discomfort. The worn-out skin comes off, not in patches but evenly, in tiny particles, leaving no evidence of the treatment. The younger, healthier, underskin forming the new complexion is one of captivating loveliness. One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any drug store, is enough to remove any coarse, chapped, pimpled, freckled, faded or sallow skin. Apply before retiring, washing it off in the morning.

Many skins wrinkle easily with every wind that blows. An excellent wrinkle-remover, because it tightens the skin and strengthens relaxed muscles, is a wash lotion as follows:—Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, one-half pint. This gives immediate results

Wellington Campaign Plans

The map found on a captured Uhlan marked with the prearranged marches of the German troops reminds one that Wellington distrusted fixed plans of campaign. Asked on one occasion how he managed to capture Napoleon's marshals one after the other, he replied: "They planned their campaigns just as you might make a splendid set of harness. It looks very well, and answers very well, until it gets broken and then you're done for. Now, I made my campaign of ropes. If anything went wrong, I tied a knot and went on."

Fire Insurance in Canada

BURIED BILLIONS

Much Money Spent in Draining Lake in South America

For hundreds of years the belief has prevailed that gold dust and gems to the value of $5,600,000,000 lie buried at the bottom of the sacred lake of Guatavita in Colombia, a territory once occupied by Indian tribes renowned for their fabulous wealth.

The aboriginal Indians of that locality had a custom of casting all their vessels and ornaments of precious metal into the waters of the lake as offerings to their gods, and the knowledge of this custom led to the belief that has been handed down through the ages that it was the burying-place of fabulous wealth.

For centuries, almost ever since the country was first discovered, travellers and explorers have engaged in various expeditions in search of this territory, and many attempts were made to drain the lake, without success. The Spaniards were just on the point of succeeding in the task of draining the lake after years of hard work spent upon it; but when they were half-way through, the sides fell in and years of work were wasted. In 1900 an English company undertook the work. They proceeded to drain it by digging a tunnel through the adjacent mountains, bringing it below the level of the surface of the water.

The lake was not emptied until 1903, but it kept refilling on account of the heavy rains and the presence of springs. A number of jewels and ornaments found in the mud of the lake bed seemed to indicate that the search for hidden treasure was to prove successful. Then the mud dried hard and fresh difficulty was thus encountered. The engineers continued operations, but no further treasure came to light.

After an outlay of some $75,000 it was decided to abandon the hunt.

GOLF BALL MAKER

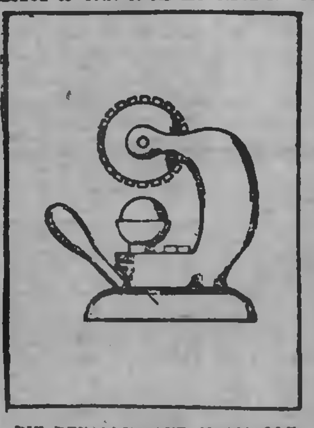
An apparatus for imparting to golf balls their peculiar pock-marked complexion has been designed. Arising from a metal base is a metal standard with an overhanging and bifurcated arm. In the bifurcations of this arm a rotary die is pivoted. Directly below this die is a vertically moving plunger that is operated by a little lever at the side and that has a spring attached to control its movements. On top of the plunger is a cup into which a golf ball is placed. By pressing down on the lever the plunger rises and the ball is pressed against the die. The force of the impact is sufficient to set the die revolving and it continues to revolve as the ball rises against it. This has the effect of turning the ball around in the cup so that it is stamped around its entire circumference.



DIE REVOLVES AUTOMATICALLY.

Laying a Ghost

When we hear of anybody having seen a ghost our first impulse is to explain the matter away. There are more explanations of supernatural visitors than records of their visitations. We are not allowed to believe in ghosts, says the "Medical Press and Circular." A certain house was haunted in the best sense of the word. Horrid shapes and shrieks and sights unholy were its nocturnal lot. The inhabitants enjoyed a pleasantly terrified notoriety, and the reporters exulted. Enter a sanitary inspector. He found a defective flue which flooded the house with a malodorous mixture of sulphurous oxide, carbon monoxide, and other ingredients. The haunted inhabitants were suffering from a chronic intoxication that affected their bodily health and their imagination.

Advance in Lighting

Since the introduction of the incandescent lamp, over thirty years ago, the art of illumination has been as apt an example of meritorious study and its fruits as the world has had. From time to time during the interval from the great Edison discovery of the property of carbonized filament, up to the present, many additions of great utilitarian value have transformed the electric lamp from an experiment into a commodity upon which is dependent the health, comfort and general advance of civilization, and the commercial advantages of which alone have rendered possible an indeterminable production from accelerated industry.

WOLVES AND BUFFALO

Extermination of Wood-Buffalo Threatened by Wolves

Investigations carried on by the Forestry Branch of the Dominion Government have proven conclusively that several large herds of wild buffalo are still to be found in the hilly country on the northern boundary of Alberta, in the neighborhood of the Slave River. A party working under the direction of A. J. Bell, the Government agent at Fort Smith, made a study of the habits, and obtained photographs of these buffalo, which are identical in appearance with the former buffalo of the plains, the remnants of which were forced to seek shelter in the timbered fastnesses of the north.

These wood-buffalo, when fully grown, are able to defend themselves against their natural enemies, but in the winter, before the young yearlings have attained full strength, they frequently fall victims to the timber-wolves. Bands of these wolves hover around the flanks of the buffalo herds as they pass in single file from one feeding-ground to another, waiting for the opportunity to cut off a young animal and drive it from the beaten trail into the deep snow, where it is unable either to escape or to defend itself.

Partly eaten carcasses were found by the investigating party, which clearly indicated that the wolves were the cause. These great timber-wolves are of large size, and are very numerous in this region, where they menace the existence, not only of the wood-buffalo, but of other game as well. The Dominion Government already offers a bounty of twenty dollars apiece for their destruction, but so sparsely inhabited is the region, and so clever are the wolves in avoiding traps, that the present bounty has had little effect in reducing their numbers. It is possible that the Dominion Government will raise the bounty here to forty dollars in the hope of ridding the regions of these pests and of preventing the extinction of the last wild bison in existence.

USES FOR SAWDUST

A Former Waste Product is Now Extensively Employed

Not so very long ago about the only real use anyone had for sawdust was for packing ice. That was when small local saw mills were more common, and the amount of this form of waste wood was, or at any rate appeared, comparatively small. Now, when the tendency is to consolidate these into large mills with a capacity of several hundred thousand feet of lumber per day, the daily waste in sawdust is seen to be enormous and much experimenting is being done to discover new methods of utilising it. Perhaps the most promising venture in sawdust utilization in Canada is the manufacture of ethyl (or grain) alcohol. The sawdust is treated with sulphuric acid under suitable conditions, resulting in the formation of sugar, which is then fermented to produce alcohol. Several plants have been erected to produce alcohol from wood in this manner, and, though there are some difficulties still to be overcome, the ultimate success of the process on a commercial scale is assured. Sawdust has been successfully manufactured into briquets for fuel for a considerable time in Europe by a very simple process. The shavings and sawdust are first steam-dried, the water contained in the wood being thus evaporated and the resin almost liquified. The sawdust is then compressed under heat into briquets of the desired size, the contained resin acting as a binder. A firm in Vancouver is engaged in a similar line of manufacture, the sawdust being compressed into a cylindrical tube where it is cut into short lengths by a revolving knife, emerging in the form of small round briquets. These briquets are clean to handle, easy to kindle, and leave very little ash. In England sugar is manufactured on a commercial scale by treating sawdust in closed retorts with weak sulphurous acid under high pressure. In Austin, Texas, also a plant is being built to manufacture stock food from sawdust, by a somewhat similar process. The tar, pitch and turpentine are removed from the sawdust leaving only sugar and fibre to which is added forty per cent. of cottonseed meal. The mixture is sold for fattening cattle. Two and one-half parts of clean sawdust mixed with two parts sand and one part cement make a warm long-wearing and sound-proof floor, to which carpets can be tacked with less injury than to a board floor, and which has the advantage over a cement floor in being more elastic. These qualities should win an extensive use for this form of flooring, which has the additional advantage that it can be stained to harmonize with interior finishings by the addition of color to the mixture while in a semi-liquid state. The sawdust of certain kinds of woods is used in considerable quantities by manufacturers for metal polish, for packing, for meat curing, for making safety explosives, and composition novelties, and for fibre and pulp manufacture. Patent cleaning powders for use on carpets and rugs consist principally of sawdust, lightly moistened by some cheap mineral oil.

Poor Stock

No dairyman should be satisfied with cows that produce much less than 200 pounds of butter fat per year. Use the Babcock test and dispose of the poor stock.

Saving Labor

In these days of high-priced farm labor or no labor at all, a little gasoline engine that costs around $100 will do more work than three hired men.

A mixture of slaked lime, linseed oil and cotton fibre is used in some sections of Turkey as a substitute for cement.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the [illegible]" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 136.

Mary's Fine Clothes.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

ANOTHER month sped by, in which I grew thinner and my appetite failed, and then came the domestic accounting with my wife which I had grown to dread.

Check book in hand, I sat down one night and began to pore over bills. This time my wife had not borrowed money from her mother-in-law and I was saved that shock. The bills, however, were exorbitantly high. I checked them off, slowly, and raised my eyebrows at the end. My plan to share any surplus with my wife at the end of the month was growing ironical. This month there was nothing at all left. Instead, we had a deficit of [illegible] cents. I spoke of it.

I had expected Mary to dissolve in tears the instant she discovered there was no money for her, but, instead, she went on with her sewing.

"That's all right, Peter," she said generously, "I don't mind in the least this time. If you're satisfied, I am."

"I'm not satisfied," I said slowly, "not in the least—for the bills are beyond reason and I needed a suit badly, but I've simply got to be content. This drug bill is positively scandalous. We've used enough drug store stuff to heal a regiment of sick and wounded."

"You must remember," she said, with a peculiar air that I did not then understand, though I understood it well enough a little later, "that the winter months are bad for colds and, then, we've filled so many prescriptions there for your nerves—and—and—"

"If I've used up this amount of nerve medicine," I said decidedly, "it's up to me to depart for a sanatorium or a morgue. The worst old hypochondriac in existence couldn't have used more."

"Well," said Mary brightly, "let's not worry about that. If the medicine does you good, Peter, it's certainly all in a good cause, isn't it?"

Fool that I was, I thought this decidedly decent of Mary and let it go at that.

As the weeks filed on I noticed that, despite this monthly deficit, my wife seemed always to have money and she seemed always to have clothes. No thinking man lets a situation like that get by him without question. Mary appeared one evening in a silk thing of exquisite fineness and lustre and I wheeled and put the question:

"Mary," I said, "your mother isn't giving you clothes, is she?"

Mary flushed scarlet.

"Indeed, no, Peter," she said. "Mother says she wouldn't dare give me a thing after the way you went over there and scolded and bullied before, just because she lent me a little spending money."

"How did you get this dress, then?" I demanded. "There has at no time been money left from our monthly bills for you to buy it."

"I—I found a place," she said after a while. "Oh, Peter, why do you bother? If I get things without bothering you and—and the bills are no worse—why don't you let me go ahead and do it?"

Now I offer as my sole excuse my tense irritability and my shattered nerves. For one wild instant a horrible suspicion flashed in my face and I seized my wife's hands in a grip of iron.

"Mary," I said, "tell me, for God's sake, where did you get that dress?"

Thank God my wife has an innocent mind. She did not get the brutal suspicion in my face. She began to cry.

"Why, why, Peter," she said. "I—I found a place where women may buy plumes and coats and dresses and everything, simply by paying a dollar a week. I think it's wonderful. I've been doing it for some time. That's why I keep looking so nice."

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have been going out quite a number of places (theatres, skating, etc.) with a man 17 years my senior—my age is 18. This young man told me he thought a lot of me; I also liked him very much, but he couldn't be depended on as he was quite a fabricator.

We parted good friends some months ago, and recently a young man (intimate with my friend) called at my home and took me to a concert and to the rink occasionally. One night—getting somewhat confidential—he told me (after my promising not to repeat it) that my old friend told him most terrible things against my good name (which were very untrue). Will you please tell me what I should do under such circumstances? I would consult a lawyer if it were not necessary to tell who told me, as it would undoubtedly mean the loss of the second young man's position. Thanking you very kindly for your trouble,

AN ORPHAN.

I DON'T see that you can do a thing, dear Orphan, except get rid of the acquaintance of both the young men in question just as soon as possible.

If the first one is, as you say, a fabricator, and if you believe that he has said untrue things about you, all you can do is to cut his acquaintance—with as little fuss as possible. Don't have any row with him—don't make yourself conspicuous—just treat him with marked coldness the next time you see him—and after that when you meet him—be looking the other way. He'll know what is the matter, without your saying a word about it—his conscience will tell him.

The other man is a silly gossip and a [illegible]—he must be lacking in delicacy of feeling, to say the least, or he would never repeat such a thing to you. He's as bad, or almost as bad, as the first one.

Do you like snakes? If you met a snake in the meadow—would you stop to see whether it was striped or checked—or would you run just as far as you could, just as fast as you could—and let it go at that?

The moment a man begins to hint that he has heard something against a woman's reputation, the only thing that woman, or any other woman can do, is to run—just as fast as she can—just as far as she can. Start running this very day, little girl, and don't stop till the two miserable sneaks are both entirely out of sight—as far as you are concerned.

Don't cry over it, don't be morbid about it; you can't help it if there are snakes in the world, can you? Men of that sort are just human snakes, and that's all there is to it.

Don't think of bringing a law suit or of getting anybody else involved in the matter in any way whatsoever. You can't handle a delicate rose, and throw it from one to another without killing the flower. A girl's reputation is as delicate and as easily injured as a rose; don't let any one handle it from one to another.

You may have one friend, some elderly, or at least some discreet and sensible married woman, whom you can trust to help you in this matter. [illegible] you what to do if things become at all complicated.

But be sure of her real friendship to you, and of her real discretion before you whisper one syllable even to her.

"She said" and "he said," "I think" and "I wonder"—how many reputations have been shriveled to nothing under the hot blast of gossip that began by being merely—"friendly interest."

Don't wait a minute to get rid of those two men, little "Orphan," and keep the whole affair to yourself if you can possibly do it.

Your real friends know you for what you really are, and nothing that any [illegible] else can say about you will really hurt you. Remember you are probably not the only one who knows them for what they are.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

Smile Awhile

His Part.

ONE day, while "mushing" along over a rough Alaska trail, a forest ranger met two young squaws and two emaciated dogs. Each squaw and each dog was bowed down under the weight of a heavy pack. They passed silently, and in a few minutes the ranger came upon a rascally old Indian friend of his sauntering slowly along, absolutely unincumbered. After exchanging greetings he asked: "How is it, Stickleg, that your wives and your dogs are so heavily loaded and you carry nothing at all?"

Stickleg gazed a moment as if in surprise at such stupidity, then straightening his fat figure and tapping his forehead, he explained in dignified tones:

"Me all time think!"

A Reason.

A. B.—When I was young they called me Archie—
T.—Yes?
A. B.—And now Archie-bald!

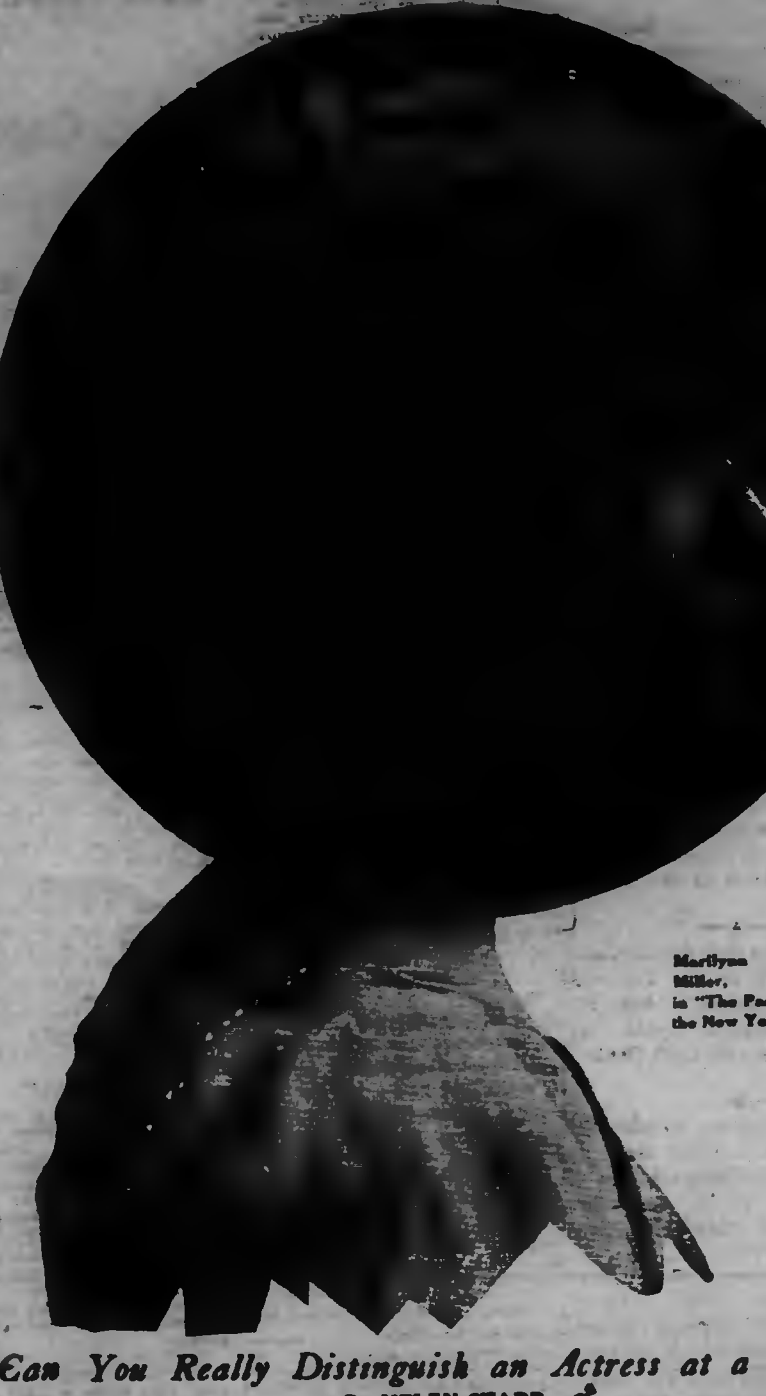
The Only Effect.

THE old judge, a great lover of house plants, had compounded a liquid fertilizer and presented the widow next door with a large bottle of the mixture. Chancing to call a week later he peered earnestly at the geraniums in the window and inquired:

"Madam, have you noticed any particular effect since using my fertilizer?"

"No, judge," broke in the young daughter of the house, "nothing as yet but the smell!"

RECOGNIZING AN "ACTRESS"



Marilynn Miller, in "The Passing Show," at the New York Winter Garden.

Can You Really Distinguish an Actress at a Glance?

By HELEN STARR

A ONE-RING circus, a horse and dog show and a travelling "rep" were the only legions of histrionic art that my friend Mrs. Hezekiah Hill had ever seen. She had long planned to descend on Broadway and see a real actress, for [illegible] magazines had taught her they were startlingly beautiful, and that Broadway was their leisure time rendezvous. She would move in their midst and hobnob with them "en passant."

Of course she could distinguish an actress at a glance. The victim's hair would be of peroxide gold or the dye-dipped hues of night. Her lips and cheeks would reflect the August sun's rays, and her lashes appear lustrous and curling. In addition, she was doubly certain an actress would wear colors which vied with those of the Spanish girls on cigarette boxes.

But during her two weeks' stay in the metropolis Mrs. Hill could not distinguish a real actress on the street. She saw them when she paid admission to the box office, but outside the theatre—never. Disappointed, she returned home, feeling that the region of white lights was not as bizarre as she had hoped it might be.

Not that she had made a blunder concerning the fact that actresses are often compelled to walk on Broadway, but she was not aware that they are coming to look just like other women. It would be hard to distinguish the debutante daughter of a bank president from the petite dancer, who also happened to possess patrician features, nor is it easy to recognize the statuesque leading lady of stock when a handsome and cultivated club president stands by her side in a shop. The school teacher or librarian is more readily distinguished for certain features of type than the actress of today. The profile of Marilynn Miller, shown above, is not unlike the outline of brow and nape in portraits of Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

Tendencies among professional women of the best companies have swerved toward simplicity. Good taste in the arrangement of the hair and the careful selection of dark, distinguished street costumes go with an earnest desire to remove any semblance of a make-up which was put on because it was necessary before glaring footlights.

Arrogant manners have been superseded by quiet voices and a modest demeanor. The life has its trials—perhaps more violent disappointments and meteoric changes from luck to ill-fortune than in any other profession. Yet the women are optimistic, characteristically sweet-tempered and buoyant in spirit.

If Mrs. Hill had dropped into one of the clubs where professional girls live, or taken luncheon at the Rehearsal Club during the noon hour she would have seen a host of bright, pretty girls chatting about their work like a group of college maids or an enthusiastic coterie of society girls exclaiming over a new blouse. The type of young ladyship in the city tends to be much alike.

MENU.

Rocky Ford Cantaloupe
Consomme of Tomato Andalouse
Cold Egg Henriette
Brook Trout a la Nage
Petit Pate Parisien
Jumbo Squab Argentine
Salade Nationale
Ice Cream Cherry Pie

RECIPES FOR THE MENU.

Consomme of Tomato Andalouse.

This delicious soup is made of a strong consomme of beef and chicken mixed with vegetables. Measure your stock to the number of dishes desired, then add finely prepared onions, carrots, bay leaves, peppers, thyme and plenty of celery. Put upon the fire, and when it is nearly cooked add plenty of fresh tomatoes well cut up. Let it boil for half an hour, take it from the fire, strain and set it aside to grow cold. It must be in jelly with a pink color.

Cold Egg Henriette.

Take a hard-boiled egg and stuff it with a mixture of anchovies, celery and mayonnaise and a bit of the cooked yolk well seasoned. Put the egg in a small oblong crustade upon a bed of mayonnaise and decorate with whipped cream.

Brook Trout a la Nage.

In a stock of onions, celery, parsley and a little white wine that has been boiled together for a few minutes place a brook trout and let it boil for 10 minutes. Take it from the fire and let the trout lie in the gravy until cold. Then place the trout on a deep dish. Clarify the stock with the white of an egg and add a little gelatine, then put it over the trout. The stock will then jelly and the trout will appear as if swimming through the water.

Petit Pate Parisien.

Take the dark meat of a tender chicken, mix it with some well seasoned sausage meat, then add some ham cut in small square pieces to which add the white meat of the chicken cut the same way. Put this into a mixing dish and add fine herbs to taste. Now take your individual pate paste shapes and fill them with the chicken, cook slowly, and permit the pate to get cold before serving.

Jumbo Squab Argentine.

Take a small squab and place it in a pan with some vegetables to cook easily, then prepare your stuffing to which you should add the liver chopped fine. When the squab is well cooked make a little gravy with stock and the vegetables cooked with the squab and add a little sherry to the sauce.

Now cut the squab in two and place the two halves in a deep dish, garnishing it with some asparagus tips or new peas. Then when it is cold pour over it your strained gravy, which should set in jelly. If the day is very warm add a little gelatine to the gravy to make it jelly.

Salad Nationale.

Take as many tomatoes as there are guests and hollow them out, then cut sufficient corn from the cob, which mixed with paprika mayonnaise will stuff your tomatoes to overflowing. Decorate each tomato with green peppers cut in squares and serve on a leaf of lettuce.

ODD AND INTERESTING FACTS

A charity forgotten in chancery has been brought to light after the lapse of nearly half a century by the charity commissioners. A Mrs. Elizabeth Skirrow, in 18[illegible], bequeathed $500 to establish weekly pensions of $1.25 for widows 60 years old afflicted with cancer. The case came before the court of chancery, and in 1848 a scheme was made for the charity, the trust fund being paid into court. The dividends on the fund ceased to be applied in 1866. Steps are now being taken to revive the charity. With the accumulated dividends the fund totals [illegible].

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Nearly All "Fits" Are Forms of Epilepsy

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

DO ducks have fits? Perhaps some gifted observer, who originated the expression, "Don't have a duck fit," saw one. Men and dogs, however, do have fits. No doubt all animals do. Be that as it may, there are "fits" and "fits." The maladies which exhibit symptoms known colloquially as "fits" are, in ninety-odd victims in the hundred, epilepsy of one sort or another.

Convulsions, or fits, are muscular explosions of the human frame, which are shot out like radio-telegraphic series of flashes from a central station—the brain or spinal marrow—through the nerve twigs and throughout the affected parts.

"Falling sickness" is an ancient designation of these convulsive seizures and epileptic eruptions. They are often so called because the sufferer falls over in the major forms of the ailment. Shakes and shivers, rolling eyes, saliva drivelling from the mouth, streaks of blood on the lips from biting the tongue, unconsciousness for a minute or more, then sleep for several hours, are among the striking phenomena of epileptic fits.

"Petit mal" and "grand mal" are French terms which have crept into English to distinguish the lesser from the more severe types of convulsions. In "petit mal" the victim may not fall, and only have a momentary fit of absent-mindedness or abstraction. While thus for an instant mentally at sea, he may throw an inkstand or a rock at his best friend and work untold injury.

The more severe kinds of fits are characterized by absolute loss of consciousness, except in the variety due to accidents or injuries to the brain. This is called Jacksonian epilepsy.

There are a number of fraudulent "cures" for fits and epilepsy. None of these have borne out the claims made for them.

Each patient subject to convulsive spells must be treated by physicians as a law unto himself. Much may be done for them. Women so affected should consult a skilled specialist on feminine ailments.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

Vinegar heated to the boiling point will soften paint brushes that have become dry and hard.

A teaspoonful of lemon juice in a small cup of black coffee is a safe remedy for bilious headache.

A tiny pinch of carbonate of soda or salt added to milk as soon as it arrives will help to preserve it from turning sour.

One ounce of Epsom salts added to a gallon of water makes an excellent rinsing mixture for colored blouses and washing dresses.

To stop hiccough, give the patient a teaspoonful of granulated sugar and vinegar. If this does not afford instant relief, repeat the dose.

Colored handkerchiefs should be soaked in cold salt water for a short time before they are washed. This will prevent the colors from running or fading.

Vegetable and fruit stains on the fingers can be removed by dipping the fingers in very strong tea for a few minutes and then washing them in clear, warm water.

If you are annoyed by flies in your bedroom, soak a sponge in oil of lavender, and tie it to the top of the bed. Flies hate the smell of lavender, and will not approach it.

To clean lamp glasses hold them over a jug of boiling water until well steamed, then polish with a dry duster. It is far less trouble than washing, and the glasses very rarely break.

Needles and pins will never rust in a cushion filled with coffee grounds. Rinse the grounds in cold water, spread on a sheet of paper to dry thoroughly, and then stuff the cushion.

Eucalyptus oil will remove grease stains from any kind of material without injuring it. Apply a little of the oil with a clean piece of flannel, and rub the material gently until the stains disappear.

To make glassware glisten, wash the glass and rinse in hot water, then plunge into cold water into which a handful of starch has been dissolved. Drain the glassware on towels until perfectly dry, then polish with a dry cloth.

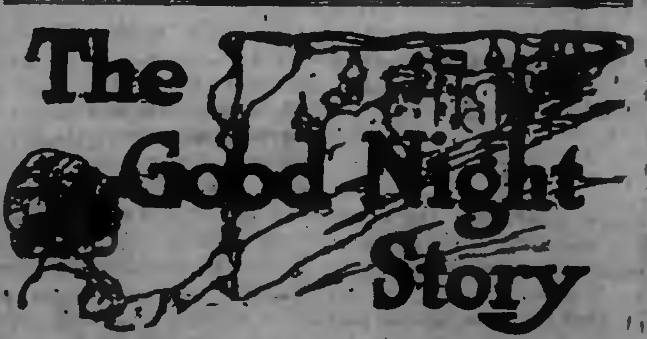
A simple method of making iron work proof against rust is to heat it until it is almost red hot, and then brush it over with linseed oil. This makes a varnish which, unlike ordinary paint or enamel, does not chip off.

When frying steak, do not cook one side first, then turn over and fry the other. Just harden for a second or two one side, and then turn over and start frying the other, and you will find what a juicy steak you will have.

New potatoes are very much improved and have a delicious taste if boiled with a lump or two of sugar along with the mint. Two lumps of sugar to a pound of potatoes give excellent results, rendering them firmer and more appetizing.

A good hint for those who do their own paper hanging is to apply the paste to the wall instead of the paper. Amateurs will find it much easier to match the pattern, and the paper is less liable to tear by following this method, besides saving time and trouble.

It is a good plan in darning stockings to hold the darning wool for a minute or two over the spout of a kettle of boiling water. This shrinks the wool, and when the stockings are washed there is no fear of mended parts shrinking, and so tearing away from surrounding parts, so that the stockings last much longer.



The Good Night Story

The Magic Tree

By VERNON MERRY

THERE was once a very little girl to whom her mother and sisters gave all the hard work to do, and she was very unhappy. One day when she was out in the fields tending the goats she cried so very hard that a fairy came and spoke to her. She told the good fairy why she was crying and the fairy said:

"Never mind, you need not be hungry any more. Whenever you wish to have something nice to eat just say these words:

'Little goat, if you are able,
Come and deck me out my table.'

Just you try it."

So when the good fairy had gone the little girl spoke the words, and, instantly, a fine table appeared on the grass laden with good things to eat. The little girl ate all she wished and then the table disappeared.

But that was not the end of her troubles for her sisters found out why it was that she was never hungry any more at home and they killed her goat because they were jealous. But when the little girl cried that day in the fields the good fairy appeared again and told her to take the goat's body and bury it in front of her door.

This the little girl did, and next morning when she looked out there was a tree of silver and gold nodding at her. Of course her sisters tried to pick the golden apples, but the tree would not let them. It gave its fruit only to the little girl.

While she was picking the apples along came a handsome knight, who asked for one. The little girl had a kind heart, so she gave the knight the most beautiful apple she could find. Her kindness pleased the handsome knight so much that he married her, much to the envy of her sisters, and took her away with him to his great castle.

The sisters consoled themselves with the thought that they still had the tree, but they were mistaken. For the next morning when they woke up the [illegible] was gone, and when the little girl woke up she found that it had follow[illegible] and was growing in front of her castle.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

The Y.M.C.A. City Bowling League has arranged the following schedule for the present week. The full schedule together with the results of the games bowled this week will be published on Monday.

Schedule for week Nov. 9-14.
3-Man Teams.
Tuesday Nov. 10—Harriers vs. G. E. Eng. Dept. Umpire, Hardill.
Wednesday Nov. 11.—Belmont Club vs. Gladiators. Umpire, Bishop.
Thursday Nov. 12.—Beginners vs. C.G.E. Shop. Umpire, Cairns.
Friday, Nov. 11.—[illegible] vs. Unknowns.

Alleys will be ready 8 p.m. Games called not later than 8.10 p.m. A.B.C. Rules to govern.

There was a great deal of interest manifested in the game last evening between the Harriers and the C.G.E. The game being won by the engineers at a pretty good margin. There are one or two teams considering entering the league so bowling should prove a very popular past time with many business and professional men this season.

New pins and new balls have been ordered for the alleys and it is proposed to keep the bowling equipment in the best possible condition.

COURT DISMISSES $14,000,000 SUIT ON FRISCO SYSTEM

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 12.—The suit to receive $14,000,000 from directors and former directors of the St. Louis & San Francisco railroad was dismissed by the Federal Court here today.

The dismissal of the suit, filed by the receivers, is part of the plan of the receivers to part of the plan of the receivers to disclaim liability of the Frisco railroad on a $26,000,000 bond issue of the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico railroad.

The situation was outlined in the federal court today by Loomis Johnson, attorney for the receivers. He announced the dismissal of the suit would not preclude the filing of a similar suit, and that such a suit might be refiled after the liability of the Frisco on the $26,000,000 bond issue had been determined.

The receivers desire to contest the liability of the $26,000,000 bond issue, and felt that to do this effectively they should dismiss the $14,000,000 restitution suit against directors and former directors. It was felt the receivers could not consistently claim the road was not liable for the bonds if they claimed that the officers of the road had exceeded their authority in making the purchase of the St. Louis, Brownsville & Mexico road, which included a guarantee of the bond issue were illegal there was nothing to restore to the Frisco on the part of the directors.

Xmas Seals Again This Year

The little Xmas Seal will be with us again this year. A new design gas just been approved by the Postmaster-General, who agrees to their use, but on the back only, of all mail matter. The design is appropriate to prevailing conditions, showing a little Angel of Peace over the earth, and bespeaking goodwill for the consumptives in need.

The first order for three million seals is already being turned out. It is expected that further large supplies will be needed before the Christmas season is over.

The Public and Separate Boards of Education in the City of Toronto have approaed of the Seal being sold by the children of the city schools, as in former years. The National Sanitarium Association, who organize the campaign, look upon the rising generation as one of the greatese factors in the ultimate success of the crusade against consumption, and believe that the education gained by the co-operation of the children, in selling the Seals, and by their absorbing the literature sent out in connection with the campaign, is one of the greatest benefits which could be conferred upon the children.

Orders to the value of many dy been received for the Seals. hundreds of dollars have alrea-

More patients than ever before — some two hundred—are to-day being cared for at the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives. The need of money from the Xmas Seal Campaign is reported to be more in the history of this instituturgent than at any other time ion.

Orders for Seals should be sent to The National Sanitarium Association, 34 Ross street, Toronto.

Japan Mistress of the

No matter how the others fare, real fruit is certain to be Japan's share in the war of the Ten Nations. Already she has it. When the little German garrison ran up the white flag at Kiao Chow last Friday the event marked a new epoch in the world history. It made the island kingdom Mistress of the Far East. Generations will come and go before the crown, if ever is taken from her.

What, however, is more amazing is that Europe should have created the situation by which she so easily has realized her ambition.

When Japan went to war with China in 1895, no one suspected her potential reserve of power. Few foresaw the ease and speed with which she humbled her huge adversary.

If Europe then had kept its oar out, much subsequent history would have been differently written.

Japan might not have had to fight Russia for her place in the sun; the myth of Russian invincibility might not have been exploded; Germany might have been less hasty in declaring war on the Slav in this year of our Lord; the Kaiser might not have suffered th? mortification of striking his colors to the Yellow Man, and Japan might not have had to wait nineteen years and sacrificed so many millions of treasure and so many thousands of brave men for the price which the ending of the Kiao Chow siege gives her.

European interference in the making of the Shimonoseki treaty paved the way for the spheres of influence which Russia appropriated at Liao Yang England at Wei Hai Wei, and Germany at Kiao Chow.

But the effect was precisely the reverse of what the three great Powers expected. It did not cow Japan. She swallowed her pride in the fact of superior numbers and yielded her own demand for Chinese territory. solved the greater to make herself the dominant power in the But in so doing she only re-East.

She drove out Russia at the point of the sword. England played the game more skillfully and went without forcing, making Japan her friend at the same time.

Germany, however, stayed. Her world prestige as the most powerful of individual nations, her incomparable war machine, the wonderful development of her navy, her commercial greatness, her financial resources, plus her conviction that none could challenge the imposition of her will, doubtless made her feel that, when she came to grips with Japan Teutonic power could accomplish that in which Slav failed.

But the great struggle Japan looked forward too has proved no struggle at all. Thanks to the war in Europe she gets at a trifling price what otherwise she might have won only at a staggering cost.

So Russia, England and Germany now are all out of the East, none with her own leave, and Japan's sway there is presently unchallenged. It may never be.

If Germany could survive victoriously the shock she is now resisting her power and prestige would become so great that national pride might impel her to undertake the task of avenging the humilation Japan has imposed on her.

But the odds are so heavily against her for anything better better than a draw there, that the world will probably hail Gen. Von Waldeck's surrender of Kiao Chow as foreshadowing for generations to come undisputed Japanese control in the Eastern sphere.

Lame Back Streagthened Stiffness Taken Right Out

Was Relieved in An Hour, and Cured in a Night

A lame back? Quite unnecessary. All you have to do is to rub on Nerviline. It's simply a wonder for backache—relieves after one rubbing. "Nothing possibly could cure an aching back faster than Nerviline," writes Mrs. Arthur Kobar of Lower Chelsea, N.S. "I caught cold, and was so prostrated with pain I could not bend over. We always have Nerviline at home, and I had the painful region rubbed thoroughly with this grand liniment. At once the pain departed. The lameness was rapidly reduced and in an hour I was able to be about my housework. I was rubbed again just before retiring, and awoke as usual in the morning without a sign of my back trouble."

There is no sort of muscular pain that Nerviline won't cure quickly. Thousands swear by it for rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica and lumbago. It sinks to the core of the pain —right through muscle, tissue and nerve—it penetrates where no oily greasy liniment can go and invariably cures quickly. If you have an ache or a pain anywhere—use Nerviline—it will cure you. Family size bottle, very large 50c; trial size 25c. at all dealers.

GREAT SWIMMERS

The Channel Attracts Many But Few Get Across

Long-distance swimming is a sport that has been almost monopolised by the English. Practically all the great distance swimmers have been born on the British Isles, with the exception of the three noted women experts, Miss Kellerman, of Australia; Rose Pitinof, of Massachusetts, and Madame Isacesca, of Vienna. And the goal of every long distance swimmer's ambition is, of course, to swim the English Channel.

The water in the English Channel is ten degrees warmer than that of the North Atlantic, and while a swimmer is apt to become numbed from his long immersion, as a rule he has not to desist from this cause. To swim the English Channel demands the utmost powers of endurance, a thorough knowledge of the course to be followed, and a slice of luck. When Webb crossed, the channel happened to be as calm as a lake, and when he was beginning to feel the effects of the heat a cool breeze sprang up and refreshed him. Burgess, too, was favored by a calm sea, and water at a temperature of 66 degrees. Both Webb and Burgess were accompanied by friends and advisers in boats, and without a pilot it would be madness for anyone to attempt the swim. Photographs taken of Burgess at the time show him floating on the water while he studied a chart held by one of his friends over the side of the boat.

Webb's feat was accomplished on August 25, 1875, and followed an unsuccessful attempt by 13 days. Webb was in the water nearly 22 hours, and was at the point of exhaustion when his feet touched bottom on the French shore. A party of friends rushed out and carried him to land. He was the hero of the hour in both England and France, and gifts were showered on him. Captain Webb lost his life later on in an attempt to swim the Whirlpool Rapids at Niagara. Burgess, who crossed the channel a couple of years ago, is a Yorkshire man, now a resident of France. He covered the course in 22½ hours. It was Burgess' thirteenth attempt in eight years. On two or three occasions he was close to the French shore, but was swept away by the tide. In 1908 he was only half a mile away from the coast. All told, there have been 82 attempts by 24 different swimmers to cross the English Channel.

A NEW MOVE BY GERMANS IN FLANDERS

London, Nov. 12.—A despatch from Sas Van Gent, Holland, dated yesterday, says:

German engineers today dynamited bridges across the Leopold Canal at Dalgerhoeke, Stroobridge, St. Laurent, St. Jean, and Watervliet, all places in the northwestern part of East Flanders, near the Dutch frontier. The Germans also threw a nu-leading to the Holland frontier. Ember of large trees across the roads trenchments are being thrown up and barbed wire entanglements erected and all roads leading into Holland are blocked. In this way the flight of peasants which recommenced on November 8, is made probable impossible and the Province of West Flanders is entirely out off from the world. Since this morning the customary roar of heavy cannon has been lacking.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the Reuter's Telegram Company telegraphs the following:

"Sluis advices indicate that the Germans continue to blow up bridges and that among the structures so destroyed is the bridge near Heyst, in West Flanders. Sentries are guarding the railways from Bruges to Ghent, from Courtrai to Ostend, and so forth.

The allies continue to occupy Ypres but shells falling in town yesterday killed two children. Aeroplanes are reported to have dropped bombs, which damaged the church and town hall and set fire to several other buildings.

"The Kaiser, in journeying through Flanders, visited Courtrai and expressed his satisfaction to the municipal authorities for the manner in which the German troops are quartered.

"Fom the Nieuport zone only feeble gunfiring was heard on Wednesday.

"Train loads of wounded are continuously being transported from the battle line."

INCONSPICUOUS CLOTHING

Dark Blue and Green Can be Seen the Farthest

Some curious and rather unexpected results have followed experiments in Europe for the purpose of determining what color in a soldier's uniform is the least conspicuous to an enemy. Of ten men, two were dressed in light grey uniforms, two in dark grey, two in green, two in dark blue, and two in scarlet. All were then ordered to march off, while a group of officers remained watching them. The first to disappear in the landscape was the light grey, and next, surprising as it may seem, the scarlet. Then followed the dark grey, while the dark blue and the green remained visible long after all the others had disappeared. Experiments in firing at blue and red targets, according to same experiments, proved that blue could be more easily seen at a distance than red.

It may be that khaki, which is the fashionable color now for army uniforms, will have to give way to grey, for in these days of long-range weapons inconspicuous clothing is vitally necessary for soldiers.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $60,000: This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs —all young foxes— good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company re retaining $80,000 worth of stock for themselves $20,000 worth has already been disposed of, leavinb $200,000 to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent., in stock in 1914. "The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say:— "We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 3 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($45,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $90,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after there will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs, shipped from Prince Edward Island ranches to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

Average — £284,16.10 or $1385.98 per skin.

These figures may be verified by enquiry to Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Company, 64 Queen Street, London.

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each; 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st, 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four foxes this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain English what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business— and then judge for yourself to have been paid by some of the Charlottetown daily newspapers.

GERMAN SPY TRIED TO BLOCK SUEZ CANAL

Chicago, Nov. 12.—Charles A. Inglis, the Chicago man whose American passport was found on the person of Carl Hans Lody, executed in the tower of London as a German spy, today told how he lost the paper in Berlin. is story implicates the German Foreign office and is being investigated by the State Department at Washington.

Inglis, who returned to his home here a few days ago, after a prolonged sojourn in Europe, was caught in Berlin when the war broke out. He took his passport to the German Foreign Office to have it approved. He handed it to a clerk, expecting in due course of routine it would be returned to the American Embassy. It failed to reappear, however. At the Foreign Office he could obtain no trace of it and after considerable delay he got a second document, which went through without a hitch and by means of which he was able to leave Germany.

Mr. Inglis declined to comment on the matter. The paper contained a description of Inglis which it is said also covered the features of the spy.

SUDDEN DEATH OF FORMER LOCAL LADY

Yesterday evening the telegraph wires flashed a message that threw a marked air of gloom over such members of the community as heard the news. This was a message from Guelph to the effect that a former Peterboro lady, Mrs. Judge Hayes, died suddenly in that city. Mrs. Hayes' maiden name was McDonald. She was born in Toronto. The sympathy of the whole city will be extended to Judge Louis Hayes who was some months ago appointed County Judge with headquarters at Guelph. A sad feature connected with Mrs. Hayes' death is that a young son of her's was to be sent yesterday to the Grove School at Lakefield. The late Mrs. Hayes was well known in this city where she had a large circle of friends. She was a consistent member of St. Peter's Cathedral congregation. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

The statement of Captain Talboys, a pearler, of Broome, Western Australia, that the experiment of working luggers with white divers had been a failure, and that the majority of the divers brought out from England were either dead or paralyzed, has been contradicted flatly by divers. With the exception of two, all were, they said, very much alive, and were at present at work in different ports of the State.

AUSTRALIAN'S VIEW OF CANADA'S GAME

Lacrosse Player of Antipodes Discusses the Game as Played Here and Elsewhere

An interesting article on lacrosse appeared in an English journal and in it J. S. Hutcheon, an Australian player and expert, gave his view as to the reasons why Canadians surpass teams of other nations in their ability to win games.

His first assertion is that the Canadians excel at stick-handling. He says: "The Canadian style appeals to me as the logical result of the existence of superlative stick-work throughout a team; speaking broadly, neither of the other nations has yet quite reached this stage. This stick-work alone does not by any means make Canada invincible, yet it has brought in its train such a closing up of the vulnerable points on the field as enormously to increase the difficulties of a team which clings to the old style of open play."

It is to the Canadian defence, however, that the writer gives the credit of making the teams superior to those of England and Australia. He describes it as follows: "It is mainly by reason of the wonderful defensive work exhibited that I imagine Canada would still preserve the right to hold the international championship. 'Marking' a man in the ordinary accepted sense, is considered of minor importance, but the opposing attacks almost invariably find a cluster of defence men in front of the goal-keeper, at least one of whom stands an excellent chance of intercepting a shot from any angle."

Follow Canadian Lead

While the Australian sees the advantage of the Canadian method of defence, he suggests that the games played close on the nets are less spectacular than the old open kind of play. It appears that the Australians have taken a hint from Canada and now back in front of the goal keeper and wait for the attack. They cannot play as close in as the Canadians, however, because they are not, as a whole, such adept stick-handlers. Speaking of the Australians, he says: "We work back to goal as far as we possibly can, but until our defences attain to something like the Canadians' really wonderful powers of interception and gaining possession of the ball, we shall have to make the enemy begin to fight further out than the Canadians do."

According to the critic, the English still do a large amount of playing at centrefield. He believes that this passing and checking game at centre makes the lacrosse prettier to wacth, opening up the game, and distributing the interest over the field. He rather regrets the fact that the "highest efficiency cannot go hand in hand with the greatest attractiveness."

Armored For the Fray

The first thing that struck Mr. Hutcheon when he saw a Canadian team play was the amount of padding worn by the men. He describes them as being wrapped up in layers of cotton wool as though a journey to the Arctic regions were contemplated. He tells how a Canadian said to him: "You fellows want to roughen up your game a bit. It will improve it." Mr. Hutcheon was rather surprised at this, for he says. "We had not considered our play to be under the slightest suspicion of being gentle, an opinion in which one is confirmed after seeing the English at work."

He found the reason for the padding not only in the ruggedness of the game, but in the method of the attack. In Australia and England, where the defences fight every inch of the way from midfield, the home players do not get into such close quarters. Speaking of the close work in which the Canadian home players specialize, the Australian writer expresses the following opinion: "Canadians believe in carrying on their attack at distances of something like ten yards or less from one another, and they understand how to make a combined rush on goal without getting in one another's way or crowding. With their fearful and wonderful padding, too, most of their home players attempt a good deal of dodging."

SILKEN BANK NOTES

A Possibility of the Future, a Woman's Invention

It is possible that before long all bank notes will be printed, not on paper, but on silk of a particular shade. It is by means of photography that most clever bank note forgeries are effected. An English concern held a private demonstration when Mrs. Ernest Hart explained a new process she invented for waterproofing fabrics without rubber and dyeing them in the same operation. By utilising this process linen, cotton, or other material can be put into one end of a machine white and brought out a few minutes later colored, waterproofed, and dry! Each machine treats 480 yards in a day, and the materials produced are useful in hundreds of trades, from building aeroplanes to bank note making. As regards the latter, the material produced is of such a color that it cannot be photographed.

An Appeal to the Intelligent Investor!

Does a logical presentation of a good investment interest you? Do you believe there is an oil in commercial quantities in Alberta? If you are alive to the situation you do. Then it will pay you to investigate our proposition and our holdings.

Please Read Carefully and Note!

THAT Oil authorities are agreed the Alberta Oil Field is of an anticlinal formation. It has been fairly accurately ascer-tained in what general direction these anticlines run. Geologist B. W. Dunn chose wisely in the selection of the now famous Monarch well. WINDSOR OILFIELDS, LIMITED, has holdings located close to the Monarch.

THAT Cunningham Craig, one of the world's most eminent geologists, selected the site of the Mowbray-Berkeley well. Stock in that company is not offered at any price. We possess acreage adjoining the Mowbray-Berkeley (Section 12, Township 23, Range 5, West of 5th). If a strike is made at the Mowbray-Berkeley what will shares in our company be worth?

Our holdings consist of 1380 acres, carefully selected and judiciously spread over the entire oil field.

ABOUT WOOD-FILLERS

The Man Who Works About the Home Needs This Information

Open-grained woods require paste filling, being "hard woods." The varieties most in use are ash, beech, butternut, baywood, black walnut, chestnut, elm, mahogany, oak and rosewood.

Close-grained woods such as bass, cedar, redwood, gum, poplar, spruce and whitewood are filled with liquid fillers, being soft woods.

There is another group of woods that occupy an intermediate place, though they might properly be classed with the close-grained woods, namely, birch, cherry, circassian walnut and maple. They are sometimes filled with paste filler, sometimes with liquid filler.

Chestnut and some oaks are very open-pored and not only require filling but often two fillings and a stiff paste. The purpose of the paste filler is to fill up the openings in the tissue of the wood, the liquid part of the filler saturating the tissue and so to some extent preventing the wood robbing the varnish coat and occasioning pinholing, etc. For this purpose it is best to sometimes apply a coat of liquid filler over the paste filling, and in some instances another coat of paste filler over the liquid is best. In any case the idea is to form a hard and impermeable foundation for the varnish coats that are to follow.

A filler should be colored to match the wood; but should be made a shade or so darker. The following is a very good formula for making a paste filler: Mix two parts of best coach japan and three parts of raw linseed oil, both by weight. To this liquid add enough finely pulverized silica to form a stiff paste. The mass needs to be thoroughly mixed.

A white liquid filler is sometimes desirable, and the following is a good one. In one gallon of raw linseed oil put two pounds of pale powdered resin, and place in a suitable vessel on the stove until the resin has melted, stirring meanwhile. Then remove from the fire and add one pint of white japan dried and two quarts of turpentine; stir well, then set aside to cool; when cold, stir in eight ounces of corn starch. After which thin with turpentine and pass it through a strainer.

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS

Most of Them Merely Glass Balls With Lustrous Coating Inside

The industry of manufacturing artificial pearls has developed enormously of late years, both in extent and in the remarkable degree of perfection which these imitations of the natural gem have attained, some of them almost defying detection save under the close scrutiny of the keenest experts.

The simplest forms are uniformly spherical and are merely glass balls blown by means of tubes of varying sizes. More ingenious and more natural-looking are the irregular pearls or perles goitreuses. To produce these the workman sometimes merely touches the ball momentarily with the end of a redhot tube, thus melting the glass at the point of contact and drawing it out irregularly. In other cases he touches one spot or another of the ball to a flame, at the same time blowing gently in the tube. The ball is pierced by two holes, one of which is caused by the breath of the workman, and the other by the hollow in the tube at the moment when this is detached from the pearl by means of a slight tap.

These balls are then merely coated inside with a preparation known as "essence of the Orient." This, despite its elaborate title, consists merely of pure water holding in solution the scales of the little fish known as the bleak-fish. The operation consists in the sucking of the liquid into a tube drawn out to a fine point and then blowing it into the glass bead, which is then given a rotary motion to spread the coating evenly.

The beads when coated are placed in a sieve whose bottom is covered with parchment and shaken incessantly till dry. Finally they are filled with wax so as to be less fragile and a little heavier.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

WAR WITH INSECTS

Campaign is Carried on in a Number of Countries

The greatest war that is going on at the present time is not a war in which both sides are men. It is not a war in which rifles or cannon play a part. The biggest battles of to-day are with a much smaller foe than man. They are battles with insects.

Although unknown to many people, these battles in which men and insects are the combatants are adding a new chapter to the history of the world.

South Africa is one of the greatest of these battlegrounds. There hostilities are being carried on relentlessly. Locusts are one of the enemies in South Africa. As soon as there is a swarm of locusts, news is flashed to the Department of Agriculture at Pretoria. As a result a battle ensues with sprays of arsenic instead of rifles. The locusts, due to these battles, are being rapidly exterminated.

On the west coast of Africa a great campaign is taking place against a close relative of one of our own foes, the mosquito. In Africa it has been definitely established that the mosquito is the transmitter of three most terrible diseases—malaria, elephantiasis and yellow fever. If a man is bitten only once by a mosquito there may develop any one of these horrible diseases. The same methods are being used against the African mosquito, as they are using in the United States in a civil war against the mosquito. Hundred of ponds are being drained and other bodies of water are being covered by a thick oil.

A little fish known as the "million" is the weapon used in the great battle against the mosquito in West India and the Hawaiian islands. This little fish is a natural enemy of the mosquito. The beneficial work of the "million" was first noticed at Barbados, whose lakes and streams were full of this small fish. Barbados did not suffer from the scourges brought by mosquitoes, but the adjacent islands, where the "million" did not live, suffered greatly. This suffering is diminishing since the introduction of the "million" into all ponds and streams that cannot be drained or covered with oil.

In the Panama Canal Zone the conflict between man and insect has been remarkable. Man has won all of the battle. Yellow fever in all of its horror, a direct result of germs carried by the mosquito, has been driven away from Panama by a successful war on the pest.

Another pest on which a great onslaught is being made is the tsetse fly. The record of this insect is but little less terrible than that of the mosquito, for among the diseases it carries is the sleeping sickness, for which there is no cure and which has swept away whole communities. The tsetse has killed more than 200,000 in the Uganda protectorate alone. The tsetse fly is being fought by burning bushes around the margins of rivers and ponds and around cities and encampments. The men of Africa are wearing a sort of a sticky flypaper on their backs in the lands where the tsetse fly swarms, and millions are being attracted and killed by this method.

The United States and Canada have already made great progress against the fly and the mosquito, whose dangers have just been recently realized.

The war against these terrible tiny foes will not only make civilized countries more healthful, but will vastly improve life and conditions and open up to civilization part of the tropical and semi-tropical countries.

THE OWL TO FLOURISH

Bounty on Big Horned Species Removed in West

No more bounties will be paid by the British Columbia Government for the destruction of the big horned owl. This owl is supposed to be very destructive of game birds, and this may have been the case in the past, but the rabbits have now come back and the big horned owl finds himself once more in a land of plenty. As he is said to even prefer rabbit to grouse, there is no longer any particular object in having him destroyed.

The bounty, which was two dollars per owl, proved unexpectedly expensive, $15,000 being paid out in a few months. Some enterprising hunters are said to have made as much as a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars a month from this source. Moreover, the government is convinced that a certain amount of fraud was practised and that the harmless little horned owl has frequently been made to do duty for his big horned cousin at two dollars per head.

How People Feel
When They Have Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ⅛ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Further information free. Send stamped envelope, telephone Parkdale 4830 or call at 167 Dundas street, Toronto. Open from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

VARIATIONS IN MILK FAT

They Show That Cows Should be Tested at Frequent Intervals

Frequent experiments have shown that one single test of a cow's milk is not reliable as an indication of what percentage of fat her milk normally contains. A great many well known causes affect the test, also some causes that are unknown at present even by the closest students. This "variation in the test" is one of the puzzles of the cow's individuality, and because of these puzzling variations it is advisable to take composite samples at intervals so as to ascertain the average test.

Some painstaking investigations at one of the dairy research stations in England, with seven cows for two days, even covering such details as a separate test of eleven successive pints, three times a day, from the four quarters of the udder, show that while thirty pounds of milk per day was 3.6 per cent., the variation was all the way from only six-tenths of one per cent. up to nine and a half per cent. of fat.

This is clear proof of how misleading one single test may be. If the real earning capacity of each individual cow is to be computed, it must be on the basis of her annual production of milk and fat less the cost of feed; regular weighing and testing give that knowledge which every factory patron should have of each cow he keeps.

The Sheep Pays

Money invested in sheep will nearly double itself in one year, since the fleece will pay for the feed and care of the sheep, and the lambs, often two per ewe, are the profit. It is estimated that ten sheep may be kept where one cow may, and the risk is much less. It may be said that the sheep always carries her pocketbook with her. If she dies, her pelt or fleece pays her funeral expenses. If she lives, her wool in the spring and her lambs in the fall pay double revenue. No other stock pays as large a percentage of clear profit on the money invested. Nothing else will build up a rundown farm as quickly as a flock of sheep. While pasturing, the sheep's manure is distributed about so evenly that no manure spreader could equal the sheep in its work.

Poultry Industry

The value of the poultry industry to New Zealand was stated at a conference of poultrymen to be two millions sterling per annum, this sum changing hands for products, produce and materials in order to keep the industry going. The average price of eggs and table poultry was fully 50 per cent. higher than it was ten years ago. Five years ago they could count on one hand the number of persons engaged in poultry farming for a living. Now they could be numbered by the score. Farmers too, were giving poultry their attention, since they were realizing that the high prices received for eggs and table birds made the keeping of poultry a valuable adjunct to farm pursuits.

THE CANADIAN INDIAN LONG MISUNDERSTOOD

Much Uncertainty as to His Origin—Redman of Early Days Was Not Bloodthirsty Savage

Scholars have not yet reached any definite conclusion as to the nature of the progeny of which the Canadian Indian is a type, writes "Transoceanum" in The Toronto Globe. Theory has it that he is of the same strain as the Mexican and Peruvian of the period previous to the Spanish conquest. This fact has been established beyond a doubt, however, that the Indian of tropical temperament and habits belongs to a totally different race to the sub-Arctic Eskimo, who in all probability migrated from Northern Asia. But of the original home of our Indian no one is certain. There is indeed some evidence that points to the Mediterranean region. If we assume the veracity of this evidence we must then conjecture that the entire root of the race of man was seated in the eastern Mediterranean, and that the body of water that now separates what we call the new world from the old did not exist. Anthropologists and geologists cannot agree on this point. And to us it seems preposterous that the human type grew up before such huge and necessary bodies of water as the Mediterranean and the Atlantic existed.

Be this as it may, the Canadian redman has undoubtedly been wrongly named owing to the fact that the first discoverers of the North American continent thought they had reached their objective—India. Accordingly they called the strange people with whom they came into contact Indians. Ever since that period the Canadian Indian has been more or less stigmatized equally with the ferocious creature of the more distant wilds written of by novelists. The white man regarded Indian habits and customs as absurd. The Indian in his turn marvelled at the appearance and actions of the white man. The European, with the contempt that comes from intellectual growth, believed that the Indians were mere animals preying on territory fit only for the white man. But the fact of the matter was they were very human animals.

Prior to the occupation of America by the European there were not prevalent the treacherous butchery and brutality that is too often connected with the Indian. True, the redmen had their struggle for existence, their tribal conflicts and their battles for the protection of common rights and property. But was not Europe continually in the toils of war arising out of more petty and personal reasons? I claim that internecine strife never flourished to the extent that it did in Europe. I stand aghast at the atrocities that were committed in Europe when myriads of lives were sacrificed to the bonfire, the gibbet and the thumbscrew by both individuals and the State. Tradition was the Indian law, and how devotedly did the Indian abide by it! Seldom was it necessary to punish one of a tribe. We must excuse their crude methods, seeing that they dwelt in a wild and rugged country, and amid an environment conducive to emotional development.

The Indian of Canada was a born artist, because, as William Morris says, he took pleasure in the doing of his work. Who to-day is not astonished at the skill that lurks in the Indian carvings of bone and stone, their birch-bark canoes and their handwork in straw? They were hedged about by very few conventions, and they expressed themselves wholeheartedly in their own crude way. We may laugh at their songs and dances, but we must remember that one did not sing or dance at another's behest, but all as one, according to the dictates of their own desires to do something that pleased, to express their emotional natures in action. Crude as we may regard these forms of expression, they were true, and true expression is art. How else, in what better way, could they express themselves, a people that were alone with nature? In reading the translations of the long speeches of the Indian chiefs we now find that they had an innate and a remarkable ability for oratory, and even the addresses of the tactful Frontenac cannot rank with the Indian masterpieces.

What is a Heifer?

The question is sometimes asked as to the exact age or condition necessary to transform a heifer into a cow. This is really rather a hard question to answer with finality, but in a prize list from the agricultural society at Johannesburg, South Africa, we find a definition. The prize list says: "The society's definition of a heifer for its show purposes is as follows: 'An animal (female bovine) shall remain a heifer until she attains the age of three years or has a calf, whichever event first happens.'"

FAITH IN DOMINION

Quiet Years Mere Breathing Spells Says Big Railroad Man

Speaking at Cochrane, Mr. A. W. Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk Railway Board, declared his belief in Canada's future greatness and prosperity in the following words: "The spirit that animates you all to go forward and conquer will lead to a continuance of prosperity in Canada and if we have a little quieter year or two I do not think we should look upon it with any fear, but rather as a good omen that it will give us time to take breath to make the next big stride forward. I believe in the main Canada is sound, because as long as her immigrants come in, and as long as new land is broken up every year, that is the real source, the real standard of the wealth of Canada; and as long as that goes on I think the prosperity of Canada—although it may ebb and flow slightly—I do not think there is any considerable setback to be apprehended, but that she will go on and show continued progress as she has done in the past."

PRESERVE THE BIRDS

State of Oregon Interests School Lads—They Build Pretty Houses

Exhibits of bird houses, built by boys of the schools in Portland, Ore., have attracted much attention and aroused no little rivalry among the boys themselves as to design and execution. They constructed charming little bungalows of rustic strips of bark; quaint reproductions of old-world thatched farm cottages; log cabins, and tiny homes wrought of silvery birch-bark and bits of moss on sloping roofs. Through the co-operation of the Oregon Audubon Society and the State superintendent of Public Schools a widespread movement for systematic bird study and bird protection was inaugurated over a year ago in the Portland schools. Each schoolboy in the intermediate grades constructed at least one bird house during the year. These were placed in public parks, residence grounds, and along the highways. This was the beginning of a State-wide plan to bring the children of the schools into closer relationship with their bird neighbors. William L. Finley, State game warden of Oregon, has done much to have the economic value of birds taught to school children. The crow and the kingfisher both have unnecessarily bad reputations, it is pointed out. To determine the economic status of the crow the department of agriculture examined nearly a thousand of them taken in every month of the year all over the country, and it was found that most of the corn eaten by these birds was waste corn, and the part destroyed while growing was only 2 per cent. of the total food. On the other hand the amount of harmful insects and mice eaten rendered the final verdict in favor of the crow. It was also determined that the kingfisher does not eat trout, but only fish that are of no value to man.

USES FOR RUBBER

Vast Field For the Use of the Article If Cheap Enough

Improved and cheapened methods of manufacture are likely to bring about an enormously increased demand for rubber. Such a cheapening in the art of manufacturing rubber goods will doubtless ultimately result in everybody possessing a waterproof coat and durable galoshes and it is more than probable that rubber soles will ultimately be turned out to last as long as leather ones and be equally agreeable in use. Furthermore, the rubber sponge, which can be made in every size, shape and degree of hardness, is likely to prove a successful competitor of the ordinary bath sponge, it having one great advantage over the latter, the fact that it can be thoroughly sterilized. A reduction in price is also sure to bring about a greater demand for tennis balls, golf balls and footballs, as under such circumstances, our athletes will no longer content themselves with using old balls for practice, as is now generally the case. It will probably also not be long before rubber mosaic floors will be generally used in houses, as they are now on board the latest ships; more especially is the flooring admirably adapted for the requirements of bathrooms, where it is vastly preferable to the cold cement and wood now generally in use. Furthermore, both the hoofs of our horses and our own ears would be greatly spared if the streets of our great towns were paved with rubber, and there is no reason why we should not also live to see this. The whole question is merely a matter of price and organization.

CRUSTS IN THE NOSE—FREQUENT SNEEZING, YOU HAVE CATARRH—A DISGUSTING DISEASE

RELIEF IN FIVE MINUTES—CERTAIN CURE FOLLOWS IF "CATARRHOZONE" IS USED.

Don't stay stuffed up with a sore nose, eyes running and breath bad.

Use Catarrhozone!

Take one breath through the inhaler—just one single breath and see how it clears out the nose, how it makes you breathe free and easy.

Relief from Catarrhozone is quick and effective—you don't have to wait all day to get it either.

No other treatment is like Catarrhozone or is able to drive catarrh so completely out of the system.

You don't take anything internally in using Catarrhozone—you don't run the chance of spoiling digestion or lessening appetite with a bad tasting medicine. Just breathe in that soothing piney vapor, so rich in healing, so full of power to cure every type of throat trouble, hoarseness, pain over the eyes, bronchitis and Catarrh.

Germs that may be lurking in the mouth, nose or throat, Catarrhozone will destroy them. In this way it prevents many an ill.

"I am never without Catarrhozone Inhaler," writes E. J. Jameson, of Huntington. "Use it for a minute and it stops a cold at its beginning. If the cold has a start, or if catarrh or a bad throat, you can easily cure it with Catarrhozone."

If suffering from throat droppings, running eyes, active nasal discharge, choked condition in the nostrils—remember Catarrhozone will quickly cure you. Get the large $1.00 outfit. It does the trick cure. Small size 50c; a sample size 25c. at all dealers everywhere.

Arranging for Big Meeting.

Mr.T.A. Thompson, Secretary of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, was in the city yesterday and gave the Times a friendly call. Mr. Thompson was accompanied by Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., one of Canada's most able exponents of the dairy business. Mr. Thompson is here arranging for the big meeting in this city of the Association named. There will be several hundred visitors here. Their head quarters will be at the Oriental Hotel. The meeting will be held here on January 6th and 7th.

Incendiary Fire at Lindsay.

Ingle's planning mill would undoubtedly have been destroyed by fire last night had it not been for the promptness of Mr. Wilbur McCarty in sending an alarm. Mr. McCarty was on his way home about 10.45 o'clock when he discovered a blaze in the plant among the shavings. He immediately sent in an alarm and when the brigade arrived it was found the blaze was making rapid progress. The fire was undoubtedly incendiary in origin.

BELGIANS MOVE FORWARD AND MAKE GAINS

Paris, Nov. 12.—The battle in Flanders is as far as ever from a decision according to official communications and judged from stories told by eye witnesses arriving from the battlefront.

The Germans have given an emphatic denial of the reports that they were in retreat by carrying Dixmude, on the Yser, twelve miles north of Ypres and on the road to Dunkirk, which the Germans are striving to attain. French blue-jackets at Dixmude had held the town against them in the face of fierce attacks for the past week, but were finally compelled to give way. The allies' attempts to drive the Germans out again have thus far failed.

Revenge For Dixmude.

On the rest of the front as far as the river Lys, the situation, according to latest advices, remains practically unchanged.

As the principal action latterly has centred to a large extent around Dixmude, the Germans are entitled to claim the advantage, but the French are strongly posted in the vicinity and the possession of the village so far has availed them but little.

The set back at Dixmude, in the opinion expressed here, is somewhat compensated for by the progress made by the Belgians along the Nieuport-Ostend road. If followed up this advance apparently would threaten the German flank

Always Have Fresh Troops.

East and south of Ypres the Germans seem to have found fresh masses of troops to hurl into the murderous fray, but the allies seem to be holding their own. The country here is undulating, well wooded and covered with a multitude of farms, which are surrounded by large elms. The villages are few, and small and most of the population is centred on these farms which are distant from each other, at the most, from two to three hundred yards. These innumerable and solidly built brick houses, with their walled country yards and some times with deep ditches, make excellent bases for small detachments and play an important part in the long battle. The struggle is taking place among the farms in the direction of the border towns of Comines, Woervick and Menin.

British Always Hold On.

The combats around Labassee and Arras, where the British are operating, have shown no decisive change. The ground here has been successfully and steadfastly maintained, the British repelling attack after attack.

Aviators report the movement of troops and heavy guns on a large scale in the interior of Belgium some going towards Germany, others toward Antwerp and yet others toward Courtrai. The explanation of this movement appears to be that solid troops, capable of operating in the open, are being sent to East Prussia, their places in the trenches being taken by less trained men. The guns going to Antwerp, it is believed here, are due to a desire to have a strong flank position against the allies in case they advance on Brussels.

AN EASY WAY TO STOP HEAD NOISES

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times a day until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

IMPORTANT.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine st., Montreal, P. Q. who make a specialty of it.

More Bridges Blown Up.

The object of the continuous German attacks in Belgium and in the Armentieres region, according to some of the French military critics, is to achieve a real victory which will oblige the allies' left to fall back in order to re-organize and repair its losses. The Germans would then leave as small a force as they deemed safe to hold the allies and send the rest against Russia.

Miss Cora Thompson and her friend Miss Kellar having discontinued their private hospital in Peterboro, have gone to France as members of Mrs. Whitney's Corps of Nurses in connection with field hospital contributed by that lady for the relief of the Allies.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

THE WORLD'S BEST

Perfect Satisfaction in Buying a Heintzman & Co.
"Ye Olde Firme" Player-Piano

The building of the Heintzman & Co. Player-Piano is an interesting piece of Piano history. Makers of the world's best Piano, we could not afford to put a Player-piano on the market bearing our name until we had brought the work of construction in the Player-Piano up to the same point of acknowledged and unrivalled excellence as is accorded the Heintzman & Co. Piano.

So we worked diligently through the years on this Player Piano until we could say that it was the best. And in our new model for 1914 we have further improved on the excellencies of 1913.

The Heintzman & Co. Player-Piano cannot be considered along with any other Player-Piano. It is a new and distinct creation, built along lines that are common to no other instrument.

The most outstanding feature of this Player-Piano is the aluminum action. By this means this instrument will withstand different climatic changes in a way that is not possible with the ordinary wood action. The swelling and shrinking of wood which takes place with climatic changes opens up minute passages, through which the air escapes, and if leakage of air takes place then the action immediately deteriorates.

Not only is the primary valve casing cast in one solid piece of aluminum, which ensures its being absolutely air-tight, but the secondary valve casing and chamber which conducts the air stream from the power pneumatic is also cast in one piece of aluminum.

Let it be known that the controlling of the air is the great consideration in all pneumatic Player-Pianos.

There are altogether some twenty interesting and distinctive features about this Player-Piano—all combining to make it the perfect instrument it is.

We place our unqualified warranty upon this Player-Piano, for we know it is more than a sweet-sounding instrument. It is good all through.

London Reports Death Of Earl Roberts
Italy Will Likely be Forced Into War Soon
Germans Lost 80 Per Cent in Attempt on Calais

EMEMY'S ATTEMPT TO GAIN CALAIS COST TERRIBLY IN LOSS OF LIFE

Eighty Per Cent Killed, Wounded and Missing--Dead Used as Foot Bridges for Living Across Inundated Territory French Marines Were Irresistible--British Hurl Back the Prussian Guards

Paris, Nov. 14.--The failure of the German forces to push any further forward, after they effected a footing again on the left bank of the Yser and after they took Dixmude at so heavy a loss to them, is believed to demonstrate that their march to Dunkirk and Calais has been definitely stopped and that when the battle changes again the allies will be found well advanced.

What it cost the Germans to take Dixmude, their dead at the third assault, serving as footbridges across the inundated fields, is told in one of the despatches, which declares that the attacking party lost as high as 80 per cent. of their number.

French Marines Busy.

The reports that Dixmude has been retaken say that the task of dislodging the Germans was left to the French marines, who maintained the high traditions of their service by furious bayonet charge.

About Ypres, where the British are holding the key position with a splendid tenacity which is costing them their bravest and best men, the Germans, throwing the Prussian guard against the British succeeded in piercing the British lines in three places, but under the withering fire which swept their ranks, they could not hold their gains, and Ypres was saved.

Elsewhere on the battlefront there appears to be no material change from the Somme to the Vosges. Both Berlin and Paris report the situation favorably in the west, but neither lays claim to any material gains.

RUSSIA WITHDRAWS HER TROOPS FROM EAST AND WEST OF FINLAND

The Star's correspondent at Copenhagen says that advices from Helsingfors state the Russians have withdrawn troops from the east and west of Finland to join the main Russian army, indicating that Russia's fear of a Swedish invasion of Finland has vanished. Sweden is said to be much pleased over the fact that this military strength has been withdrawn from Finland.

Battle Fronts Far Apart

The checking of the Teutonic offensive in the west, as noted in official reports from the allied headquarters is regarded here as due to the fact that Germany is obliged to maintain battle fronts so far apart, as are East Prussia and the North Sea.

From east to west, and from west to east huge bodies of German troops have been alternately thrown across the intervening thousand miles to counter anything in the nature of a Germany's superiority in numbers in the other stages of the war made progress of her forces easy and effective. Military observers here, however, take the view that Russia on one side and the armies of the allies on the other side, now having had time in which to more fully mobilize their forces, the effectiveness of this progress of shifting bodies from one to the other is no longer so pronounced and that any thinning of German line on either side must mean, hereafter, at least a temporary assumption of the defensive on the part of the German and assumption of the offensive by the allies.

German Attack at Nieuport Frustrated and Allies Progress

Reports From Various Scenes of Fighting are Contradictory. No Authentic News to Indicate Noteworthy Changes in Fortunes of War for Either Side. Germans are Optimistic and Allies Super-Optimistic--Many Indecisive Encounters

LONDON, NOV. 15.--THE AUSTRIAN ARMY IN GALICIA, HAVING BEEN BEATEN, THE RUSSIAN INFANTRY, ARTILLERY AND CAVALRY ARE NOW RUSHING ON CRACOW, AS FAST AS TRANSPORTATION WILL ALLOW.

IN AN EFFORT TO PREVENT THE INVESTMENT OF CRACOW, THE AUSTRO-GERMAN ARMY IN SOUTHWESTERN POLAND HAS ASSUMED THE OFFENSIVE.

SELDOM SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WAR HAVE THE REPORTS FROM THE VARIOUS SCENES OF ACTION BEEN AS CONTRADICTORY AS WAS THE CASE TO-DAY. IN BELGIUM, IN FRANCE, TO THE EAST IN GALICIA AND RUSSIAN POLAND AND IN THE CAUCASIAN REGIONS, FIGHTING IS PROCEEDING WITH VARYING DEGREES OF INTENSITY, BUT THERE WAS LITTLE IN THE WAY OF AUTHENTICATED NEWS TO INDICATE NOTEWORTHY CHANGES IN THE FORTUNES OF ANY OF THE CONTENDING NATIONS.

RUMORS OF THE SINKING OF THE BRITISH SUPERDREADNOUGHT AUDACIOUS, MORE THAN A FORTNIGHT AGO, WERE CONFIRMED BY MAIL ADVICES.

THE FRENCH WAR OFFICE IN TO-DAY'S OFFICIAL STATEMENT, AGAIN ASSERTS THAT MINOR SUCCESSES HAD BEEN WON IN BELGIUM, BUT IN THE MAIN THE GREAT BATTLE FOR THE POSSESSION OF THE NORTHERN SEA COAST OF FRANCE APPARENTLY IS PROCEEDING ON ABOUT THE SAME LINES AS HERETOFORE. NEAR NIEUPORT ON THE NORTH SEA, IN THE REGION OF YPRES, AND BETWEEN LA BASSEE AND ARRAS, ACROSS THE FRENCH BORDER, SUCCESSES BY THE ALLIES ARE REPORTED, EITHER IN THE WAY OF REPULSING GERMAN ATTACKS OR MAKING SLOW ADVANCES.

Indecisive encounters also have occurred at other points to the east along the line, with especially sharp fighting in the Argonne, the scene of bitter contests for weeks past. this locality the French war office says, a German attempt to recapture two towns met with failure.

German military authorities made no modification of their previous assertions that their forces were slowly pushing onward at various points in Belgium. Unofficial advices from Berlin showed that the German people were increasingly optimistic on account of the latest reports from the front. A military critic at Berlin draws from the capture of French prisoners near Nieuport the conclusion that the successive shocks of battle have almost cut to pieces the Belgian army and that it has been necessary to send French troops to the coast to assist those who still remain to hold the line.

Turkey renewed her claim to victory over the Russian forces stating that the invaders are being pushed back to Russian soil. A surprise attack by the Turks, Constantinople reports, was made with such success that the Russians were driven back towards Batum losing several towns. In a battle near Erzerum, the Russians are said to have lost 8000 men. Petrograd, however, reports steady progress in the campaign against Turkey.

PETERBOROUGH NARROWLY ESCAPES A CATASTROPHE

Sir.--Let me say in reply to the gentleman in The Examiner who, though he dreaded nought, fired from behind the safe protection of a pen name at those in the open who objected to being included in the "City of Peterborough" public meeting to discuss War and Peace the other evening: That Mr. Asquith, the foremost Britisher of his time, has repeatedly said that Britain will consider no proposals for peace, arbitration, etc., until Germany is crushed. If then Germany now proposed arbitration and Mr. Asquith refused, as he surely would, the City of Peterborough is on record as opposed to Mr. Asquith's policy -- a nice performance for any sensible municipality during the crisis of the greatest war in history. Then we have Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier striving with might and main to support the British Premier. They, too, must come under the ban of the City of Peterborough if the meeting had materialized as intended. No people can say "We are loyal, we are with you; only don't do it again and stop as soon as arbitration is in sight, for that is our fixed principle." No people can advocate arbitration as a substitute for war and go back on it. Hence we would wake up to the fact that all Canada was attacking us for bringing odium on the country; and how Germany and the German-Americans would rejoice! But "compulsory" arbitration was what the meeting was called to endorse. In Heaven's name what sort of a substitute for force is anything that is compulsory. The resolution would be worded in that case, "If you don't arbitrate we'll kick holes in you." The fact is, good intentions are not always a safe guide in war time, and Peterborough narrowly escaped a catastrophe. In concluding let me say that some knowledge of law does not always qualify a writer for an argument, and with these few remarks I remain, not a "Dreadnought," but

"A DECKHAND."

"BARBARIAN" IS HONORED TITLE

London, Nov. 15.--The correspondent of The Standard in Copenhagen wires as follows, quoting Major-General Von Dusferth (retired) in an article contributed to the Hamburg Nachrichten:

"No object whatever can be served by taking any notice of the accusations of barbarity levelled against Germans by their critics. We owe no explanation to anyone. Whatever acts committed by our troops for the purpose of discouraging, defeating and destroying the enemy is a brave act and fully justified. Germany stands the supreme arbiter of her own methods. It is no consequence whatever if all the monuments ever erected, all the pictures ever painted, all the buildings ever erected by the great architects of the world be destroyed, if by their destruction we promote Germany's victory. War is war. The ugliest stone placed to mark the burial of a German grenadier is a more glorious monument than all the cathedrals ever put together. They call us barbarians. What of it? We scorn them at their abuse.

"For my part, I hope that in this war we have merited the title barbarians. Let neutral people and our enemies cease their empty chatter, which may well be compared to the twitter of birds. Let them cease to talk of the Cathedral of Rheims and all of the churches and the castles of France, which have shared its fate. Our troops must achieve victory. What else matters?"

AUDACIOUS PROBABLY SAFE

London, Nov. 14.--Whether the super-Dreadnought Audacious, one of England's newest and greatest fighting ships, is still patrolling the North Sea or is beached, the victim of a German mine, is one of the war mysteries here to-day.

It has been persistently rumored that the Audacious hit a mine and was so badly crushed that it was necessary for the converted White Star Liner Olympic to tow her to a harbor, where the sea fighter was beached. The Admiralty is silent as to the rumors which have been circulated. The unconfirmed reports declare that the Audacious sighted a vessel flying the Swedish flag laying mines off the Irish coast. The Dreadnought warned the Olympic by wireless and very soon afterwards hit one of the mines herself. The rumor says that the bottom of the Audacious exploded and that upwards of 140 men of her crew were injured, being scalded when the boilers let go. It will be possible to refloat the Audacious and repair her it is declared.

RUSSIAN REPORTS SAY THAT VERY YOUNG MEN MEN FORM FOE'S INFANTRY

Sad Sight to See Teutonic Youngsters Mowed Down Like Grain--German Cavalry, However, is Composed of Seasoned Troops--East Prussia Blanketed by Fire--Germans are Concentrating for Defence of Cracow

Petrograd, Nov. 15.--(Via London) --It is regarded here as an attempt on the part of the Germans to threaten the Russian advance upon Cracow by a side flanking movement.

Military experts declare that the German cavalry operating in this district is composed mostly of troops thoroughly seasoned in the fighting in Belgium. On the other hand, an officer who has returned to Petrograd from the East Prussian front, reiterates the report that the Germans are sending whole companies of infantry formed almost exclusively of very young men, into the first battle line.

"One of the saddest features of the fighting that I witnessed," this officer said, "was the sight of these youngsters, some of them fifteen to sixteen years old, moving forward shoulder to shoulder like automatons, and being cut down like grain from the fire of our machine guns."

Continuing, this officer said he was apparent to the Russian commanders at the front, that the Germans in East Prussia were putting forth all their strength. He described East Prussia and the Russian territory adjoining it on the east as blanketed by fire

While the Germans are concentrating elsewhere the defence of Cracow is being provided for by two Austrian armies officered by Germans. These two armies are converging from Galicia and the Kielce region in Russian Polland, and their rear guards, according to Russian reports, are being constantly hounded by the advancing Russians.

SEEMS AS THOUGH ITALY CANNOT KEEP OUT OF THE WAR MUCH LONGER

Rome, Nov. 14.--Apparently the situation in Tripoli has suddenly become very serious, due primarily to the activity of Islamic endeavoring to stir up the strifes there against Italy.

This development in the Tripolitan situation is being watched closely here, and it is not unlikely that the Turkish propaganda in Tripoli may finally be the means of drawing Italy into the war.

The first detachment of 500 troops from the garrisons of Eritrea arrived here today en route for Tripoli, where they will be used to strengthen the Italian garrisons.

All Garrisons Strengthened

Arrangements have been made to strengthen all the garrisons of Tripoli materially. It is announced also, that punitive expeditions have been sent into the interior, where the situation is threatening, due to the Islamic agitation fomented by Turkey, and especially by personal agents of Enver Pacha, whose influence is very great.

It is said that the rebellious tribes have recently been supplied with arms, ammunition and money, distributed from some points across the Egyptian frontier, from whence regularly organized caravans are proceeding daily towards Dernah.

Rebels Are Organizing.

The pick of the Senussi tribe is reported to be personally recruiting men and the rebel tribes along the hinterland are organizing and harassing Italian outposts and redoubts while the anti-Italian propaganda is spreading even among the friendly tribes. It is noted particularly that hostile chiefs, exiled after the Italian occupation, have mysteriously reappeared at their old haunts, in most cases accompanied by German officers who are distributing money lavishly.

Gen. Ameglio, Governor of Tripoli who came here several days ago to discuss the situation with the ministry, expects to return to his post at once.

CANADIAN SOLDIERS HELP PRINCESS' FUND

London, Nov. 14.--Private Richardson of the Canadian Royal Highlanders, Montreal, was married at Bolton to Sarah Ann Martin. The bridegroom left Bolton for Canada only 5 months ago and joined the Highlanders two days before the war broke out, at once volunteering for active service. He came with the contingent. The honeymoon extended for four days, and he has now rejoined the regiment at Salisbury Plains.

The pioneers of the 14th Battalion, 3rd Brigade, have lost the Regimental dog Buller, who has been ordered into quarantine. The pioneers are now appealing to English friends to find them another mascot.

Lady Strathcona has provided an armored motor car for the London mounted brigade.

Col. Currie of the 48th Highlanders of Toronto has handed nearly £50 to the Princess Mary's fund for Christmas gifts to the troops, as the result of a sweepstake aboard the Lapland on the voyage across. The sweepstake was concerned with the time of the vessel's arrival, but the ship was so late the sweep was declared off.

Wellington Campaign Plans

The map found on a captured Uhlan marked with the prearranged marches of the German troops reminds one that Wellington distrusted fixed plans of campaign. Asked on one occasion how he managed to capture Napoleon's marshals one after the other, he replied: "They planned their campaigns just as you might make a splendid set of harness. It looks very well, it answers very well, until it gets broken and then you're done for. Now, I made my campaign of ropes. If anything went wrong, I tied a knot and went on."

BUTTERMILK CHEESE

Dairy By-product Utilized at Agricultural College

In the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Miss Bella Millar, in charge of the Home Dairy Work, made some experiments in the utilization of dairy by-products. Cheese was made from skim milk and buttermilk. The making of cheese from skim milk is comparatively simple, but the buttermilk requires a little more of a process, which is described as follows:

Heat the buttermilk to 88 degrees F., as rapidly as possible, stirring enough to ensure even heating. Leave it undisturbed for half hour. Heat to 110 degrees rapidly, and with just enough stirring to ensure even heating. Cover it to retain the heat, and leave undisturbed for about an hour.

Without further stirring drain the curd by hanging it up in a cheese cloth bag, or by placing a piece of cheesecloth over a rack or strainer. As the portions of the curd near the cloth will drain more quickly, lift the cloth and allow the curd to roll over, thus securing more even and more rapid drainage.

As soon as the curd is properly drained it is salted and packed. The amount of salt to use will depend on the consumer. 1 ounce of salt to 5 pounds of cheese is recommended, but many prefer [illegible] ounce to 5 pounds of cheese.

LAWN EDGER

To give a lawn that neatly kept appearance that is so desirable, the edges of the turf along walks and flower beds must be trimmed closely. For this purpose a tool [illegible] has been produced. CUTS IN EITHER DIRECTION.

and a V-shaped cutting section bent down from it, with sharp edges on both ends. By pushing this tool along the edge of the turf, the overhanging grass is trimmed neatly and a smooth little trench is cut between the grass and the edge of the walk, or whatever the border is. This is a great improvement over the usual straggly border, [illegible] appearance of otherwise attractive suburban places.

MISSED COBALT'S RICHES

Old French Voyageurs Knew of One Mine 150 Years Ago

That the old French voyageurs and missionaries knew of the existence of at least one mine the maps show beyond dispute. Had they had extended their researches for minerals beyond the waterways and had happened upon the silver mines at Cobalt what a difference it would have made in the probable destiny of the Dominion!

The discovery of Cobalt a century and a half ago was quite within the sphere of possibility, says The Cobalt Nugget. There was an old Indian trail within a few feet of Long, now Cobalt Lake, and where the Indian was wont to go, there too, the French voyageur could, and did follow him. There would have been no difficulty in mining the ore. It was right on the surface and could easily have been loaded and taken down in boats to Quebec. Then would the world have been astounded with the glamor of a silver Eldorado in the heart of Canada. The French king would have taken more pains to conserve the country which his predecessor had valued as so many arpents of snow, and the destiny of the Dominion might have taken quite other lines.

Problems of the Large Employer

In the small factory, frequently managed by a resident owner, the continuance of a system of direct contact between employer and worker has generally operated to maintain and perpetuate harmonious relations. The problem before the large corporation-owned plant is to provide that ready touch which, by emphasizing the essential community of interests, establishes a sense of unity and fellowship. It can be done only by making this community of aim and interest a reality, and not merely the occasion for pleasant speech-making. It cannot be done by raising wages; it may be done by dividing profits. Success depends principally on an unfailing insight into the needs and problems of the body of employes, and that insight can only be obtained by sharing the problems of management with the men. The degree to which employers are prepared to go in this direction is a sound indication of their earnestness in desiring the removal of the prevailing mood of discontent. —Engineering Magazine.

STAGE STRUCK IN FIRST GAME

Even the Great Muggsy Knows What Nerves Mean to a Young Player

Muggsy McGraw made his initial appearance in professional baseball [illegible] He was given the first tryout by the Olean club of the old New York state league, and was assigned to [illegible] McGraw was then [illegible] teens. He made [illegible] 1890, an auspicious [illegible], that auspicious occasion he proved to be the biggest kind of an April fool package.

McGraw was so small it was impossible to find a suit to come anywhere near his measure. It seemed to McGraw, as he has told it, as if all the world was in attendance on the day he appeared at Olean. To his eyes it seemed as if he [illegible] seen so many people [illegible] was due to the fact that the third baseman was nervous and that his mind multiplied the actual number of spectators. The noise made by the crowd also worried him. It sounded like the prolonged roaring of a mighty sea.

When the first ball was knocked down to him he said the noise of the crowd ceased as if by magic, and the ball, which happened to be a slow grounder, appeared to McGraw as if it would never reach him. Finally, after what seemed to be an age, he found himself with the ball in his grasp, and he turned to throw it over to first base, where there was a player who was the tallest in the league.

The distance to first now appeared to McGraw to be fully a mile away, and his heart sank within him as he suddenly thought to himself that he could never throw the ball that far. Yet he nerved himself, and not only did he get the ball over, but he got it several feet over the first baseman's head. Every succeeding time the ball was knocked down to McGraw during the rest of the game he managed to throw higher and higher over the head of the man on first.

After the game the manager came up to McGraw and putting him on the head, told him that he was a nice boy, and so on, but as a ball player he was a joke. McGraw left Olean that night and went over to Wellsville, where he finished the season. He did so well that at the end of that year he was the recipient of eighteen different offers from managers who were willing to pay well for his services.

BOXER'S BIG SALARY

The Thrifty Frenchman Finds the Ring Stepping Stone to Fortune

Georges Carpentier, the French pugilistic champion, is very fond of stage life which his success enabled him to take up, and he is proud of his ability to make a huge income by his ring and theatrical engagements.

"It is very strange to be making so much money in such a pleasant way," said Carpentier. "When my manager discovered me I was 13½ years old, and I was earning only a franc a day in a coal mine. When he wished me to go in for training my parents were unwilling to lose even that amount of money, but he said he himself would pay the franc a day.

"In my first year I made $100, in the next $750, in the third $5,000, the fourth, $25,000, and now I am making about $50,000 a year, [illegible] to whom I gave my first $1,000, [illegible] I think there are few who at my age make as much money as I have been able to."

CREDIT FOR FARMERS

What a Western Man Learned by Trip Abroad

The Canadian farmer suffers the greatest handicap in the world in the matter of facilities for borrowing money, said [illegible] H. [illegible] chairman of a commission to investigate agricultural credits. While the Canadian farmer [illegible] Western farmer) pays anywhere from eight per cent. up to 50 per cent. for advances, the European farmer with less land and a smaller investment can secure "almost any amount he may ask for" at from two to six per cent.

In France money is at the ready disposal of the farmer at a rate of interest ranging from two and a half to three per cent. In Germany he pays from three and a half to five per cent., in Italy from four to six per cent., in Belgium and Holland from three to four per cent., in Austria-Hungary four and a half per cent., and in Russia from four and a half to six per cent. In nearly every country the farmer obtains money as cheaply as or more cheaply than the banks.

The Mexican Muddle

(Boston Herald)

It is to be regretted that the announcement from Washington that the American troops will probably be ordered out of Vera Cruz very soon, leaving the Mexican factions to settle their own differences, does not come at a time when affairs are more promising in our neighboring republic. Conditions prevailing there now fall little short of anarchy. The latest overturn in nominal responsibility has not improved conditions, and Mexico in consequence is still waiting to find a way out.

We have never sympathized with the President's Mexican entirely ready to let him work policy. We are, nevertheless, it out and to wish him all success in so doing. His sources of information are immeasurably better than can be those of any private citizen. Nor can he be blamed for keeping to himself long distance and comprehensive plans, if he has them, as we hope and at times believe. In the meantime—heartless as it may be to say so—we are much more readily reconciled to having Mexicans kill one another than to have them and the disease of their latitude make way with good Americans.

Russia as a Market

Half of Russia's imports of $638,544,000 which crossed the European and Black Sea frontiers, came from two of the countries with which Russia is now at war, Germany and Austria.

The Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, pointing out the new opportunities for Great Britain and America to increase their share in Russia's trade, said: "There now exists a situation and an opportunity in trade and commerce with Russia which, to England and America, may mean more in the decades to come than it is easy to realize."

In 1911 Russia's foreign trade amounted to $1,400,000,000. For the last four or five years it has been well over the billion mark. Russia has been described as a "gigantic and largely unexploited empire." cent. greater than that of the United States, and is rapidly Her population is about 70 per increasing. The area of Russia is two and a half times that of Canada. The wealth of natural resources is proportionate—timber, oils, minerals and fuel being found in profusion.

Our own country has enjoyed an historic friendship with Russia, a friendship which some did not break, and it should be our fortune to share to some recent differences strained but extent in the rearrangement of Russia's foreign trade.

Every Stiff Joint Limbered Rheumatism Cured

THAT OLD FAMILY REMEDY, "NERVILINE" IS GUARANTEED FOR THE WORST CASES

CURES NEURALGIA, BACKACHE, AND LUMBAGO

Rheumatism to-day is unnecessary. It is so well understood, and so readily curable that every day we have reports of old chronics being freed of their tormentor.

"I can speak confidently of the Nerviline treatment, for the simple reason that it cured me," writes Albert B. Cornelius, from Kingston. "You can't imagine how stiff and lame and sore I was. Nights at a time I couldn't sleep well. I followed the Nerviline directions carefully—had it rubbed into the sore regions four or five times every day. Every rubbing helped to reduce the pain. The swelling went down. I got a fair measure of relief in a week. I also took two Ferrozone Tablets with my meals. They improved my appetite and spirits, purified my blood and toned up my system generally.

"I am as well to-day as a man could be—in perfect good health. I give Nerviline all the credit."

A large family size bottle of Nerviline costs only 50c., or the trial size 25c., and is useful in a hundred ills in the family. Whether it's toothache, earache, headache, neuralgia, lame back or a cold, Nerviline will cure just as readily as it will cure rheumatism. For family use nothing equals Nerviline.

SUN'S RAYS WARM MERE SKIN OF EARTH

It Takes Six Months For Midsummer Heat to Penetrate to Its Full Extent

How far does the heat of the summer's sun penetrate into the ground? Probably not one person in ten will give an answer that is even approximately correct. Their replies generally vary from one inch to many hundreds of feet, says London Tit-Bits. Actually the distance is about 3 feet. Beyond this depth the temperature of the soil does not vary appreciably from hour to hour, let the midday be never so hot and the midnight never so cold. At this depth the mean temperature in the summer is about 58 degrees Fahrenheit, and in the winter about 36 degrees.

And the annual difference? That is to say, the depth at which there is some difference between the summer temperature and that of the winter? Well, at a depth of 60 feet it is impossible to measure any change due to the changing seasons overhead. Go down only 40 feet, and it is minute—barely measurable. But at 25 feet to 30 feet it is quite a definite amount.

The surface heat takes a long while to penetrate downwards. In fact, curiously enough, the change in temperature of the ground takes just over six months to reach the end of its [illegible] feet journey. Thus we are faced with the phenomenon of midsummer upon the surface occurring at the same time as midwinter 25 feet to 30 feet down, and vice versa.

Farmers talk about "cold" soils and "warm" soils. This, although it sounds improbable to those who have never had anything to do with the land, is an actual fact.

Everybody knows that black clothes are hotter to wear when a hot summer's sun is shining than white ones. The reason for this is that black and other dark colors absorb heat, while white and the lighter shades reflect it. And this applies to soils equally with clothes.

Those soils which by their ingredients are a darker color are literally warmer than their lighter neighbors. Peaty soils, some of which are nearly black, others a rich, dark brown, are the warmest; light-colored clays and chalk the coldest. There may be as much as 15 degrees or 16 degrees between the temperatures of two soils, lying next each other and upon the same day.

ASCOT REALLY ROYAL

The King Could Take Half the Receipts But It Goes for Upkeep

It was an interesting story which Mr. Upjohn, K.C., told a Select Committee of the House of Lords when they had before them the Ascot Authority Bill, promoted by Lord Churchill, as the King's representative, and Sir William Carington, Keeper of the Privy Purse, for the purpose of forming one legal authority connected with Ascot Racecourse.

Mr. Upjohn said the objects of the Bill were to form one authority for the management of Ascot races and to vest in that one authority all the property until now vested in two different bodies.

Private race meetings were originally held in the King's Park, and in those days the races were under the management of the Master of the Buckhounds. One reason for the bill was that the office of Master of the Buckhounds was abolished in 1902, and since that time his place had been filled by Lord Churchill, as the King's representative, and Sir William Carington.

Another reason why it was necessary to put things on a more legal footing was that from time to time leases had been granted by the King. Ascot Heath was a Royal domain. With one exception the grandstand—all the properties had been brought together and were held by Lord Churchill and Sir William Carington.

Colonel Bulkeley, the senior trustee, said it was desirable that there should be some body which would act as a buffer between the King and the people, because that body would prevent any evil-minded person from taking the King's name in a wrong way.

Mr. Reginald Coventry agreed that such an arrangement would prevent any suggestions that the King was making money out of horse-racing. The King was entitled to half the takings at Ascot.

"What does his Majesty do with it?" asked Mr. Balfour Browne, K.C., and, amid laughter, Mr. Coventry replied, "I don't know."

Lord Churchill stated that every single shilling was spent for the benefit of Ascot races. Expenses were very heavy, and the whole upkeep of the racecourse had to be paid for out of the income.

BRITISH INFLUENCE IN SOUTH AFRICA

Intermarriage Lessens Hate—English Literature Overruns the Country

Mr. B. Ryan, of East London, South Africa reports that a great deal of intermarrying is taking place between Briton and Boers, that the country is being over-run by light literature all of which is published in English and the children become absolutely English. While the Dutch do not like the other race at the present time the country is surely becoming British in spite of Boer prejudice and customs.

Mr. Ryan then explained why South Africa was bound to be British to the end. Although the Government had spent a million and a half pounds on a magnificent Parliament building at Pretoria, evidently with the object of keeping it in the old Transvaal capital, Johannesburg with her 300,000 people and the Rand with its gold production of $200,000,000 per annum, will be in connection with the British influence in Cape Colony the ever-growing predominating power in the South African Confederation.

FOREST RESERVES

Thirty-five Thousand Eight Hundred Square Miles of Reservation

Over ten thousand five hundred square miles were added recently to the existing area of Dominion Forest Reserves, making a total of over thirty-five thousand eight hundred square miles of reserved forest land in the Western Provinces under Dominion jurisdiction. Of this reserved area, three thousand seven hundred and eighty-two square miles are found in Alberta, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two square miles in Saskatchewan and four thousand one hundred and eight square miles in Manitoba. Over two-thirds of the total area is found in Alberta, owing to the fact that practically all the eastern slope of the Rockies has been set apart as a forest reserve, not only to perpetuate the supply of timber, but to preserve and equalize the flow of the large prairie rivers which have their source in this reserved area.

These western reserves are created by the Dominion Government as cited in the Act "for the maintenance, protection and reproduction of the timber growing thereon, or which may hereafter grow thereon, for the conservation of the minerals and the protection of the animals, birds, and fish therein, and for the maintenance of conditions favorable to a continuous water supply." To accomplish these ends the reserves must first be protected from fire, and under the direction of technical foresters and supervisors, fire-lines are being cut or ploughed, trails are being cut, telephone lines and lookout stations installed, "caches" of tools distributed in accessible places throughout the reserves, and efficient patrols established in accessible places throughout the reserves, and efficient patrols established.

Nor is the timber so protected allowed to die of old age. The foresters determine at what diameter in each section the maximum production is attained and when the trees reach this size, they are offered free or for a nominal sum to homesteaders who apply to the forest officials for cutting permits. Care is taken not to allow over-cutting, for it is the forester's aim to crop the forest [illegible] and at the same time increase its producing capacity by proper methods of management. Thus, by this policy of forest reservation, instead of denuded hillsides, drifting sand and barren peaks and muskegs, these areas will in time be covered with great tracts of forest owned by the people and supplying their wants, not only now but to all future time, when countries with less foresight will be in the throes of a timber famine.

AVERAGE MILK YIELDS

Could be Greatly Increased by Proper Testing of Cows

A common question in the country is, "How are the cows doing?" What a volume of thought that suggests! If they are doing well is it because of good feed and careful attention, or may it be despite the feed and care they deserve, but do not get? Leaving aside the questions of weather, breed, heredity and persistency of flow of milk, is it possible to account for the remarkable differences in yield that are to be found? For instance, the dairy division at Ottawa found in one locality 100 cows that gave 3,000 pounds of fat in one month, but 100 cows close by in the same county gave only 2,500 pounds of fat. Another lot of 100 cows in a nearby county gave only 2,300 pounds.

Is the ordinary herd keyed up to the pitch of creditable performance, or is it just jogging along in the old rut of "average yields?" Suppose the farmer ascertains his herd is doing "about as well" as his neighbor's, does it not seem a great pity that his ambition should end there?

Cow testing has helped many communities to far larger banking business, because it shows that dozens of cows and average herds can be made to produce far more than they do at present. Make each cow pay a good profit.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was [illegible] in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company [illegible] in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs—all young foxes—good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's [illegible] on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest [illegible] and very best quality P. E. Island [illegible] foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the [illegible] of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur V. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes. [illegible]

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. [illegible] 1914. [illegible]

The Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $90,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each: 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the fox ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four. [illegible] this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if you had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about [illegible] and the investor should look before [illegible] dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain what we can do for you [illegible] [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown newspapers.

BRITISH FORCE BEATS FLOWER OF GERMAN ARMY

London, Nov. 13.—The official Press Bureau issued the following statement last night:

"The operations during the last few days have consisted mainly of fighting to the north of the Lys, where the points of interest were at first on the line of Hollebeke, Wytschaete and Messines. There have also been severe encounters on the line from Zandvoorde to Frelinghein.

Allies Capture Machine Guns.

"The character of the fighting has been one of frequent and vigorous infantry attacks from the Germans, accompanied by heavy shell-fire, alternating with equally vigorous counter-attacks, the general result being the maintenance of our lines, with considerable losses on our side, but with still heavier losses on the other. Six machine guns and over 100 prisoners were taken by us on the 9th.

"The allies' strength has been constantly maintained by reinforcements. Latterly the stress has been in the neighborhood of Gheluvelt, to the north of Ypres, and at Dixmude.

A Continual Bombardment.

"The German artillery fire was practically a continual bombardment intended to pulverize the defence preparatory to the advance of the infantry. In the centre the struggle has been at Ypres, the defence of which will certainly be recorded in history as one of the most striking episodes of the British army.

"For more than three weeks the position, which projects like a bastion into the enemy's lines, has been under a rain of shells which has hardly ceased by day or night. During this time the enemy has poured successive waves of infantry against it only to see them break to pieces, one after the other."

Will Crooks' "Don'ts"

Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., gave the following advice in an address to workingmen:—

Don't argue when you are tired; you can't do it.

Don't take the workshop home with you.

Don't talk trouble before the children.

Don't think you can't be "done;" you can.

Don't think you are worse than other people, and don't think you are better; you're not.

Don't think you have a constant job; the man in the cemetery has that.

Don't talk of being master in your own house. You may be when you are there; but you have to go out.

Don't get angry; no one cares if you do.

MONEY IN WOODLOTS

Scientific Principles to be Followed to Secure Best Results

There is no part of the farm which will give bigger returns for so little expenditure of time and labor as the woodlot, says Mr. B. R. Morton, expert forester for the Dominion Government, and there are three ways in which the farmer, by the exercise of ordinary common sense, can vastly improve the composition, production and reproduction of his woodlot.

The first thing necessary is to improve the character of the crop, which can be done by cutting down and using as firewood all diseased and deformed trees, as well as such species whose presence in the woodlot is not desirable. Only too frequently is the method of cutting exactly the reverse. The best trees are cut, often for purposes for which an inferior wood would serve. Firewood probably yields the best returns for a small acreage and for this purpose rapid-growers such as poplar, ash and elm should be encouraged, which should make an annual growth of from one-half to one cord per acre. Basswood, too, will be in increasing demand because of its rapid growth, because it coppices readily and because of its value in small sizes for the manufacture of excelsior, cooperage stock and other small articles for which the wood is particularly adapted. Maple reproduces readily, and although not a rapid grower, it nevertheless yields a substantial revenue when it becomes large enough to tap. Soft woods like spruce, balsam and pine grow much more rapidly than hardwoods and might be advantageously grown for fuel or pulpwood.

When the most suitable species have been selected and the weed-trees removed, the woodlot must then be thinned until the crowns of the best-formed remaining trees are seen to barely touch.

The third requisite in the scientific farming of the woodlot, is that the cattle be kept out, especially after heavy cutting, when reproduction is most desired. Cattle are just as injurious to a young crop of tree-seedlings as they are to a young crop of grain. They may indeed eat the grass in the woodlot, but they would just as often, if not oftener, eat the young and tender hardwood shoots, and the same can be said of sheep. Even coniferous seedlings are not immune, so that certainty in production is only assured by fencing off the cattle ever after.

The longest artificial waterway in the world is the [illegible] Canal, [illegible] miles in length.

CHLORINATED WATER

Drug Can be Added to Kill the Taste After Germs Die

Just when the chemists were congratulating themselves that they had largely solved the problem of pure drinking water by their idea of doctoring water with chlorinated lime to kill germs, protests came from many cities that the water tasted of the chlorine, and they have had to go to work again on the problem. Now they have discovered a way of putting more chemicals into the water to kill the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has killed the germs.

Usually the amount of chemical spread through the water is so small that no one can taste it; but the proportion varies with local conditions, and there are times when much larger amounts are used. If more than seven pounds of the chemical is used in a million gallons of water, the most sensitive palates begin to discover the taste and complaints are made to the water department. With every additional pound of the chemical come more protests.

One way to get rid of the taste is to store the water before sending it into the mains; but this is not usually practicable, and chemists have been seeking another remedy. Now it is stated that a drug called thiosulphate will hide the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has had a few minutes' time to kill the germs. The prescription calls for one part of thiosulphate to two parts of chlorinated lime. To prove that the additional chemical is harmless, the discoverer points out that thiosulphate is used in medicine, and that, in order to get a dose the size a doctor would order for a patient, a person would have to drink about 570 gallons of the treated water.

Strength of Insects

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 60,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 300 times its own weight.

Or, if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper, you could spring over a church without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee, you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from other observations made by naturalists, that the greater in size the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for [illegible] tasks.

WHITENED HAIR

Divergent Opinions as to Change of Color Over Night

One reads occasionally in novels and other literature of cases in which a person's hair has turned white within one single night under the stress of mental strain. An alleged historical case of this kind is that of Marie Antoinette. The true cause of the blanching of the hair is a matter of some dispute, says a scientist who, investigating a case of sudden greying of a man's hair, reported that the upper portion of the [illegible] was filled with small air bubbles, [illegible] imparted to it its white appearance. According to another physician [illegible] the [illegible] destruction of the hair pigment by the phagocyte cells. Others deny altogether the truth of [illegible] this may [illegible] fact that the person in question was [illegible] compelling the discontinuance of the practice of hair-dyeing.

[illegible]

Scientists declare that during the last quarter of [illegible] the shape of the human head has altered owing to the development of mental power, caused by [illegible] educational facilities.

Size is of no consequence. It is the shape that tells. Twenty-two to twenty-three and a half inches is a standard for the literary type of head of the first order, but powerful intellects are indicated by heads measuring up to twenty-four and three-quarter inches.

Heads indicative of skill in mechanism, detail, and manufacturing work are usually large, rather wide about the ears, and with a broad, although [illegible] The broad, protruding Beethoven forehead indicates musical skill.

THE BLONDE ESKIMOS

Northern Trapper Claims to Have [illegible]

A far northern trapper, G. L. Deschanbeault, returning from Fort Simpson to Edmonton, challenged the claim of Explorer Stefansson that he was the first discoverer of the blonde Eskimos.

Some two and a half years ago Deschanbeault [illegible] accompanied by Joseph and William Hudson encamped on the Copper Mine River, seven hundred miles north of Fort Simpson. While in camp the Eskimo interpreter informed Deschanbeault that strange stories were being told among his companions about another tribe of "Huskies" who, although they resembled the ordinary Eskimos in their habits, had the pale faces of the white man.

Urged by curiosity, Deschanbeault decided to follow the Copper Mine River to its juncture with the Great Bear Lake. On arriving at the shores of the Great Lake, the little party came upon the encampment of the strange tribe. The Eskimos were dressed after the customary fashion of natives of the north, but instead of being squat of stature and dark were fair haired and of light complexion.

Lajoie's Tip on Eyesight

Napoleon Lajoie says that young baseball players pay too much attention to developing speed without [illegible] thought to what he considers the most important asset of a budding recruit. Lajoie says a perfect pair of eyes can do more to make a player successful than any adjunct. Plenty of nerve, intelligence and strength enter into it, but the largest item is good eyesight.

Dreams Come True

People derided Jules Verne when he wrote his book telling how he girdled the earth in 80 days and another describing a voyage under the sea. RACE-TRACK ROGUES IN THE OLD COUNTRY

[illegible] Operatives Who Happily Have Few Counterparts in the Dominion

The racecourse is notoriously a happy hunting-ground for thousands of scheming rogues who go to the principal race meetings with the sole intention of relieving the unsophisticated sportsman of his money by fair means or unfair—mostly unfair, says a writer in the Glasgow Herald. Some of the schemes are uncommonly clever, but others again are as old as the hills, and it is really surprising to find a public gullible enough to swallow them.

A common piece of thick tape, about two feet long and half an inch wide, is doubled up and folded round like a catherine-wheel. The operator then places it upon a table, and bets the eager onlookers odds of three to one that they [illegible] allowed [illegible] the loop [illegible] to retain the pencil when he pulls it. As there are always [illegible] loops visible, it is small wonder that the proprietor very rarely has to pay up.

This swindle is [illegible] by [illegible] old chance of plying their trade amongst the players.

The Race-table [illegible]

The [illegible] tables [illegible] all over [illegible] have an irresistible attraction for many would-be sports. Painted upon these tables are [illegible] of the [illegible] horses engaged in the big race of the day, and in the centre of the table is a revolving spindle.

The gentleman in charge of the gaming apparatus bets odds against the spindle stopping at any particular one of the various colored [illegible]. His confederates stand around, and, by their remarkable luck in backing long-priced winners, [illegible] outsiders to bet heavily.

The backers never win, as the cunning racecourse swindler has more than one artifice by which he can stop the pointer to any horse he chooses. [illegible] at probably every [illegible] course in the United Kingdom and they always work with half-a-dozen or more confederates who pretend to place bets with them.

Innocent Victims

When the welsher realizes that it is [illegible] for him to [illegible] a common practice is to offer [illegible] to a [illegible] "the better [illegible] the race run," as he suavely puts it. Many a simpleton has had to run for dear life after availing himself of such an offer.

During the Derby [illegible] a [illegible] countryman standing near, who instantly jumped at the offer. He also obligingly held the bookmaker's satchel, which it is needless to say, was innocent of money. Then the welsher bolted, and the backers of Diamond Jubilee nearly killed the guileless yokel ere he was rescued by a body of police, his clothes being torn to shreds.

The Racecourse Sharper

For real cleverness, [illegible] or "tale-tellers" as they are termed in the picturesque vernacular of the turf, are undoubtedly entitled to the blue ribbon of racing swindles.

A sharper of this type is an unerring judge of character, and it does not take him long to pick out a "mug," as the youth with more money than brains is known.

When thoroughly [illegible] the sharper [illegible] a great system of backing horses in existence, of which he—the sharper—is the sole inventor, and if Mr. Simple [illegible] of making a [illegible] At first the poor victim is allowed to win a little, but gradually all the money of which he is possessed finds its way into his affable friend's pocket.

KING OF UMPIRES

[illegible] Arbitrator's Work [illegible]

While John H. Gaffney, who died at his home in Worcester [illegible], was known as the "king of umpires," he was not the first arbitrator to be honored by that title, writes Old Sport [illegible] in the Philadelphia [illegible]. Honest John Kelly was the original king of umpires, although it always was a question whether he was really the best of the umpires of his time. But there was one honor no one could take from him. When he was officiating, he was the boss of the field, and that was long before the umpires were clothed with the [illegible] power they are to-day. [illegible] in those days. Compared with these [illegible] of [illegible] crowds are mild and orderly. [illegible] nothing seemed to bother Kelly, who, on one occasion, hopped the fence to settle [illegible] in the right field bleachers. Gaffney, [illegible], was the originator of "modern" umpiring. He was the first man to get behind the pitcher when there was a runner on; he was always [illegible] the play, and was the first umpire the Old Sport can recall who made it a point to be both blind and deaf at times.

How People Feel When They Have Tape Worm

Tape worm is [illegible] from a parasite. This parasite is [illegible] male and female in [illegible] a pear shape, having two, four [illegible] six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with [illegible]. They develop and form a [illegible] which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker [illegible]. The worm grows to [illegible] longer than the bowels which it [illegible], and sometimes a [illegible] of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, [illegible] in a basket of water would [illegible] all it. It is the hardest [illegible] in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and retaining there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The clever physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, while [illegible] or more of these internal demons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulvenny has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The [illegible] and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of [illegible] claiming [illegible]. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, [illegible] changes in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are from [illegible] of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of disease which would take long to [illegible]. Strange to say, [illegible] very little distress.

Prof. Mulvenny's world-famous Tape Worm [illegible] is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, [illegible] to take. One case nearly always [illegible]. Further information free. VARIOUS METHODS OF PRESERVING EGGS

They Must be Fresh in the First Place and Should be Scrupulously Clean

There is no better method of preserving eggs than by [illegible]. Soluble silicate [illegible], which is not an expensive material to buy, as a pound, which only costs a very few cents, dissolved in the correct proportion of water, will preserve a large hundred. The amount of water to be added depends upon the sample, but as full directions are usually sent with each tin, it is difficult to go wrong. The eggs are placed in a glazed vessel and covered with the liquid, care being taken that all the eggs are immersed. When they are wanted for use they should be gently [illegible] of the liquid, wiped dry, and used as speedily as possible.

The oldest, but still a very excellent method of preserving is by means of [illegible] lime and water. [illegible] gallons of [illegible] and twenty of water should be [illegible]. When the water has taken up as much of the lime as it is capable of doing, it should be allowed to settle, the clear liquid being used to pour over the eggs, which have previously been placed in a suitable vessel. This method has the disadvantage of making the shells tough and extremely brittle [illegible], in fact, that as a rule eggs that have been preserved [illegible] be boiled, the shells cracking with the least touch. When eggs are to be preserved for only a very short time [illegible] of those [illegible] dry salt [illegible], but this is an unsuitable method for a longer period.

If a new-laid egg be dipped into boiling water [illegible] coagulate the white, and so [illegible] the air getting to the contents. For home use this method [illegible] but it does not answer [illegible]. [illegible] varnish or [illegible] keeps the contents from [illegible] week or two, but is not recommended for more than [illegible].

Only perfectly fresh eggs should be preserved, and it is [illegible] a waste of labor and money to attempt keeping eggs that are more than two or three days old when placed in the preservative. They should be allowed to settle twelve hours after being laid, but the sooner after this time they can be treated the better. [illegible] when they are [illegible]. Dirty eggs do not [illegible], if there be any dirt [illegible] they should be washed. A dirty egg has an injurious effect not only on its own contents, but on all those that come into contact therewith. An infertile [illegible] keeps better than [illegible] producing eggs with this end in view [illegible].

OUR PUBLIC SPIRIT

[illegible]

A young Englishman, after three years in the Canadian West, wrote a letter to the London Spectator, [illegible] criticisms of the Canadian character [illegible]. One of his criticisms, [illegible] the letter is as follows: "Nor does the public spirit of the [illegible] strike a stranger as [illegible]. It does not find its expression in the Territorial forces, at any rate. [illegible] Canadians [illegible] that the Dominion saved the [illegible] in 1900, and are indignant when told that of the Canadian contingent sent to South Africa [illegible]. Nor does public spirit find much expression in local government, where the 'best people' are conspicuously absent [illegible] with [illegible]."

Without discussing the incident of 1900, The Citizen may by way of comment, [illegible] of the criticism [illegible]. Canadians have been so busy with the [illegible] tasks of a new country that they have not had much time to devote to the interests of the country at large. But with Canada [illegible] advanced in development to such an extent that more attention can be given to the public interest. Unless such attention is given, no [illegible] of future will be safely predicted. [illegible] public spirit that makes a citizen think and feel and act for Canada, for his larger self, is without doubt the great need of Canada to-day. Others recognize the fact, and Canadians cannot be [illegible] follow their example, and profit by it.

Ninety-day Eggs

Bacteriologists tell us that in an egg preparation and the action of bacteria are evident by the third or fourth day. There are some who believe that from that time on the egg is not perfectly "fresh" or "new laid," [illegible] the best. [illegible] after that if kept properly, but it is not of first quality, and all the [illegible] to that effect cannot make it so. If the farmer has [illegible] longer than three days to get his eggs to the consumer, he should have to classify them other than the highest, and be correspondingly [illegible] compete with the man who delivers his product 72 hours old.

JOCKEYS HORSES HATE

When Race Horses Go Mad at Post They Would Make Meat of Riders

Trouble in the paddock and at the post before a big race is frequently caused by a horse which has taken a sudden and violent dislike to his jockey, and [illegible] well known jockeys being nearly chewed to death by their mounts.

One of the worst cases of "savaging" occurred to [illegible] Madden, the famous jockey, at Brighton races a few years ago. He was riding down to the starting post for the Worthing Plate, when a horse called Marigold IV. overtook him, dragged him out of the saddle by the shoulder, and, seizing him by the throat, shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

The jockey of Marigold IV., who had himself been unseated, used his whip freely on the brute's head to make him release Madden, and other jockeys coming to his assistance, Marigold IV. was eventually beaten off, but not before Madden had been severely wounded.

Diamond Jubilee, the horse which won King Edward his first Derby, took a violent dislike to his jockey, Mornington Cannon. If Cannon even went near his loose box or the horse saw him in the stableyard or paddock, he would make frantic efforts to "go for him," and Cannon had several very close shaves from being badly mauled.

Fred Archer once had a bad tussle with a horse which tried to "savage" him, but the famous jockey succeeded in getting the better of the animal and won the race. The horse was Peter and the race was the [illegible] Cup.

Peter threw Archer in the paddock before the race, and, seizing him by the arm, nearly bit it in two. Archer succeeded in beating him off, whereupon he threw himself down on the ground and screamed, lashing out at every one who came near him. Archer, however, was not to be daunted, and he eventually succeeded in mastering the brute.

Lord Charles Cunninghame, a well known sportsman who used to race on a large scale in India, had a very valuable racing pony which took a violent dislike to the "syces," or native grooms.

He absolutely refused to allow them to enter into his stable, and on one occasion when two of the "syces" came in together to try to groom him he bit off one man's arm, completely at the elbow, while the other only escaped with a badly lacerated one. After that white stable boys from England had to be specially imported to look after him.

Weller, the famous "savage" thoroughbred, [illegible] were [illegible], and the stable boy was paid extra to look after him. [illegible] was perfectly quiet under [illegible] circumstances, [illegible] but [illegible] the [illegible] to [illegible] for ladies, and would "go for" them if any member of the fair sex approached his paddock.—Pearson's Weekly.

BUILDING CUP CHASERS

Some of the Rules Yacht Designers Must Bear in Mind

The conditions governing the America Cup yacht races give designers lots of latitude. According to the measurement rule, length is measured, but this length [illegible] as to limit [illegible] length be greater than [illegible] the excess is penalized. Draught is limited [illegible] load water line [illegible] that the limit of draught for a yacht 75 feet on the water line [illegible]. Any excess is added to length. Then to find the rating after the length has been determined length is multiplied by the square foot of the sail area and this product is divided by the cube root of the displacement. The larger the displacement, consequently, the larger the sail area that can be carried and the designer decides just how big a yacht he wishes to build, making it [illegible] as possible and then figures out the driving power. It has been figured that the average defender measures about 102 feet over all, 14 feet draft, and spreads 14,000 square feet of canvas.

WHEN HANS WAGNER BUNTED

Fred Clark was discussing Hans Wagner's peculiarities. "I'll never forget the first time I ordered him to bunt.

"It was in Louisville, back in 1897. Honus had been with us only a few days. I didn't know him then as I know him now. We were playing Pittsburg, and Jess Tannehill was pitching against us. We were not hitting Jess, and, as I had noticed the Dutchman to be fast, I asked him if he could bunt. He said he could try.

"So I told him to lay one down the third-base line and try to get on. He selected a bat for the purpose, and, while we sat back watching for his bunt, he didn't do a thing but knock the ball clear over a distillery for a home run.

"The next time his turn came I asked him if he thought he could bunt another one like that. He never cracked a smile, but said he thought he could. He did. The first good one Tannehill served Honus cracked it over the same distillery. They were two of the longest hits that I ever saw, and on those two wallops over the old Louisville distillery we beat Tannehill that day, 2 to 0."

CATCHERS SELDOM GOOD BASE STEALERS

Chief Reason Is That the Unnatural Position They Assume Burdens the Leg Muscles

About [illegible] is a catcher who can steal bases. Ask any manager what he would give for a backstop able to work 100 games a season and steal 50 bases and he will tell you that such a player is not yet born.

And he will mean every word.

Scouts have been searching for catchers who can steal bases and they haven't turned up one to date; and when they did pick up a catcher with speed he lost it by the time he was tutored to the point where he could catch many games.

There are two reasons for catchers losing their fleetness of foot. The first is that squatting behind the bat develops muscles which retard rather than help in running, and the second is that catchers are handicapped by the fact that they are nine times out of ten just ahead of the pitcher in the batting order.

The time to steal is when two are out, but a catcher cannot take a chance at this time, for if he is thrown out the pitcher will be the first man at bat in the next inning, and no manager wants to lead off with a weak-hitting pitcher.

Constant squatting develops the catcher's [illegible] muscles.

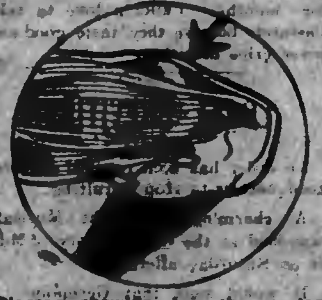

Diagram showing how the constant "squatting" over-develops the leg muscles, handicapping the catcher.

just above the knee, causing it to "bunch." The [illegible] muscles has muscles strung out and pliable. The difference between the leg muscles of a catcher and those of a sprinter is the difference that is found in the muscles of a boxer and wrestler.

The boxer requires long, pliable muscles for speed; the wrestler needs slower, "bunched" muscles for grappling strain.

Many young catchers go to the majors with speed, but they soon slow up.

NO ADVANCE IN BASEBALL

Former Star Says Game no Faster Now Than Years Ago

Frank Killen was one of the best pitchers in the National League, and in 1893 was entitled to rank with the league leaders. To-day he is selling real estate in the Kiskiminetas valley, which is in Pennsylvania.

Killen says the game is no faster than in the 90's, and as he managed and pitched minor league baseball for 10 years after he heard the bell ring out his major league career, he has something more than suspicion to back his opinion.

He said [illegible] there are more speedy men in the game to-day, but he [illegible] there are not so many heady [illegible] and declares the [illegible] advance in the game is the amount of space devoted to it by newspapers.

"Many an old play [illegible] a few tricks, and very few new plays are really new," declares Killen.

Rusie was the wonder of all pitchers, in Killen's opinion, and of Amos he says: "Rusie in with Rusie was pitching just as far from the plate as the pitchers of to-day, and working [illegible]."

IF HEADACHY, DIZZY, BILIOUS, "CASCARETS"

Get a 10-cent box now.

You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean, and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile, not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough, Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

LOCAL BREVITIES

An order has been received at local headquarters to stop recruiting.

A charming "Twilight Musical" was held at the Conservatory of Music on Saturday afternoon.

It would seem that Germany is now asking for peace. Several able-bodied local bank clerks are now singing the "To Doom Landsmen."

An "adv" in a local paper says, that Pink pills cure St. Vitus Dance. What kind of pills would cure the cold feet of a lot of our healthy men who should volunteer for the war?

Two of our local rich men who spend nearly half of their respective incomes, have decided to "cut out" 15 cent cigars and only use Marty's "Rosebud," 10 cent cigars. For two weeks or more this economy will be preserved and the balance given to the war fund.

An adv. in an evening contemporary Saturday night, advertising Lydia in a woman's life is at fifty years of age. We know better. The critical time of a Peterboro girl's experience came at 19 and she has been praying Pinkham's pills says the critical time for a husband since.

OBITUARY

MRS. DAVID GUIRY.

The death took place on Saturday morning in St. Joseph's Hospital of Mrs. David Geary. She was seventy years of age, and had spent nearly all of her life in Ennismore. Deceased was highly respected. Her death is mourned by her husband and five daughters, Mrs. John Sullivan, London; Mrs. Wm. Casey, and Mrs. Alexander Geary, of this city, and sisters Ethelreda, and Anne Maria, at the Mount, also one son James at home. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Ennismore this morning at 10 o'clock to St. Martin's Church and cemetery.

GLAD NEWS TO ALL WITH BAD COLDS
INSTANT RELIEF—FEW HOURS FOR CURE

Nothing Known to Science is so Invariably Sure to Cure as "Catarrhozone"

Just Breathe Catarrhozone!

The Ozonated Air Cure, better known as "Catarrhozone" is death to colds.

Its health-laden fumes contain the healing balsams of the pine woods.

Soothing and antiseptic, it gives instant relief—stops coughing, hawking and sneezing.

Mucous and phlegm are cleared away, breathing made easy, and Catarrh symptoms entirely disappear. Delightful and pleasant is Catarrhozone, simple to use because you breathe it—sure to cure colds and catarrh because it destroys the germs. Doctors say nothing is more scientific, nothing possesses such might of merit in winter ills.

"To clear a cold out of your nostrils and to be able in a minute or two to breathe freely again, I can't conceive of anything being better than Catarrhozone," writes J. E. Galvin, of Port Limon, C.R. "For any sort of Catarrh, throat trouble or Bronchitis, Catarrhozone is a specific. I know scores of people who use Catarrhozone and all speak wonders of its merits."

GRAND TRUNK TEACHES APPRENTICES BY NEW CORRESPONDENCE SCHEME

A correspondence course is to be one of the novel advantages enjoyed by Grand Trunk apprentices for the first time this winter.

Mr. W. D. Robb, the General Superintendent of Motive Power, has six hundred apprentices in his department of the railway's work, the young fellows being trained in the various locomotive shops of the company at Montreal, Stratford, Battle Creek, and other points. The benefits of this training are such that boys are sent from all parts of the American Continent, and even from Europe to take their apprenticeship here. If they pass their entrance examination they are given a trial of from 2 to three months in the shops and if satisfactory are asked to sign indenture papers binding them for the period their trade calls for,—Machinists for five years, Patternmakers and Boilermakers for four years.

During this apprenticeship the boy has to attend classes arranged by the company and is taught Mechanical Drawing and Practical Mechanics.

Examinations are held periodically to test the knowledge of the boys, and at the end of the term a final examination is arranged for the whole system, the marks being compiled and the station having the highest percentage receiving a cash prize; prizes are also given to the boys.

This year it has been decided to improve the opportunities of the apprentices at small stations where it has not been possible to keep instructors. Correspondence courses, mapped out along the most improved lines, have been adopted for this purpose and the boys will be in touch with their theoretical studies with headquarters at Montreal. Text books have been compiled by the company both in drawing and mechanics suitable to the requirements and these have been made as practical as possible, so that the practical work may line up with the theory taught.

The quality of the work done by the apprentices was shown this fall when apprentices from the Stratford shops obtained one first and three seconds in Mechanical Drawing competitions at Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto, while the Montreal boys took two first prizes.

PRUSSIA MUST BE CRUSHED AT ALL COST

Ottawa, Nov. 12.—The announcement from London that great Britain proposes to put an army of two million men in the field undoubtedly means that a corresponding big effort must be made by Canada during the next year to maintain a steady and even increasing flow of Canadian fighting men towards the firing line in Europe. It is estimated that if the war is still in progress a year from now, Canada will have an army of approximately 150,000 men in the field. In government and military circles here it is stated to-day that Canada is prepared for an indefinite period to send forward men as fast as they can be armed and equipped and that it will not be a matter of one, two or three contingents but of sending forward a continuous stream of reinforcements as long as they are required to accomplish the decisive defeat of the legions of the Kaiser.

London, Nov. 12.—England was staggered to-day by an official announcement from Premier Asquith stating that the British casualties in the war to date are 57,000 killed, wounded and missing. With this toll paid in the fighting so far, more men are to be rushed to the front. A supplementary estimate from the war office to-day declared that with one million more men the total British strength of all ranks would be 2,186,000.

Recruiting has increased to a great extent during the last week. It is said that Premier Asquith will formally ask the sanction of Parliament for the raising of the one million additional troops.

The statement of the premier stating the casualties at approximately 57,000, was written in reply to enquiries from members of the House of Commons.

TREMENDOUS ADVANCE BY THE RUSSIANS

Berlin, Nov. 13.—Warning that circulators of false news which tends to alarm and make the public uneasy, will be imprisoned for one year has been issued by the military authorities.

The warning came from Gen. Von Der Tann at Munich. It followed the confiscation this week of Maximilian Harden's paper, Die Zukunft (The Future). The publication was suppressed because of its criticism of Turkey's entrance into the war.

Russian pressure is now being along the entire frontier. The advance is being made with ever-increasing forces. The German border force has repulsed a detachment of Russian cavalry at Kalisz, 60 miles from Breslau, but over the Russian side of the border. There is every indication that the renewed activity is in much greater strength than the advance which was made soon after war was declared, and which was completely repulsed.

The above despatch, transmitted via London was passed by the British censor. Coming from Berlin the references to the tremendous Russian advance are highly significant. The suppression of the weekly Die Zukunft, on the pretext that its news was false, and the warning against making the public uneasy, is probably a precaution taken with a view to suppressing the tales of disaster which refugees from the east are undoubtedly carrying into the heart of Germany.

Harden is regarded as the most potent force in German journalism. Prince Buelow having remarked that he never misses one of this man's articles. The New York Evening Post says: "There is scarcely a politician in Germany who does not eagerly grasp at the latest number of Harden's periodical. Harden has never called on a minister or a chancellor, but high functionaries frequently come to see him at his villa for the purpose of obtaining his judgment on important political problems." His power in Germany may be judged from the fact that, single handed, he overthrew the all-powerful favorite of the Emperor, Prince Zu Eulenburg.

The Future is read all over the world in diplomatic circles and, according to one authority, "many a diplomat has read his official obituary on the pages before he knew he had ceased to exist." That is the sort of paper which German fear of a panic has suppressed. Remembering that Harden was the mouthpiece of Bismarck and has friends of tremendous influence, interference with his publication speaks volumes as to Germany's fear of panic among her people.

BELGIANS ARE TERROR STRICKEN

—Belgians are terror-stricken—

London, Nov. 14.—A description of the fearful conditions in Belgium is given by Mr. Jarvis B. Bell, of New York, of the American Commission for Belgian Relief.

"Nothing that has been written could exaggerate the misery of Belgium," he writes. "We drove for miles through graveyards, [illegible] the villagers, women and children sought refuge in the [illegible] of ruined homes huddled. The Belgian peasant has in many districts no house in which to sleep, no seed to sow, no implements with which to work, no transport to reach a market, and, finally, no heart to struggle against the impossible.

"The American relief steamer Columbus, carrying more than 1000 tons of foodstuffs, arrived at Rotterdam from London at three o'clock Sunday morning.

"There was no need for the newspapers to spread the report of our arrival. In one hour all Brussels knew and rejoiced. We found several had been without salt for a month. villagers in the Limburg district that At almost every bridge we met men with horses soliciting relief from travellers from more fortunate districts. We met few Belgian men. Eighty per cent. of the people in these country districts are women and children. We saw them eating green vegetables, leeks, and apples. They had little else. There were thousands of children, all afraid to laugh."

Inundation Again Threatens Disaster to the German Army, a Big Force Of Which is Cut Off—The Advance on Berlin Will be Slow

ALLIED AND GERMAN ARMIES CONTINUE STRUGGLE FOR COAST

In Trenches Filled With Water, and Swept by Rain and Snow--Terrible Weather Conditions in Which to Fight--Flooded Section of Flanders Increasing in Area--Germany is Suffering for Want of Sufficient Trained Troops

Paris, Nov. 16.—In trenches filled with water and swept by rain and snow driven by a gale from the sea, the allied and German armies continue their struggle for possession of the line leading to the coast cities of Dunkirk and Calais.

Heavy artillery fire has marked the fighting for the past twenty-four hours it was stated at the War Office today, weather conditions preventing successful work by infantry. The Germans are now struggling to regain a foothold on the left bank of the Yser.

The diminishing intensity of the German assaults in Flanders is due to some extend to the weather conditions mentioned. The flooded section is increasing in area as a result of the continuance of heavy rain, and the country between Nieuport and Dixmude is a vast swamp in which guns and ammunition wagons abandoned by the Germans lie embedded and in which float countless corpses. The Germans have been washed out of their trenches in several places, says an eye-witness who has just returned from the front, but they continue to send an occasional shell to the French trenches.

DIXMUDE TO ARRAS NEXT.

It is not probable that the Germans will make further attempts in this section of the front, but a fierce effort is to be expected from Dixmude to Arras as soon as the German troop have recovered from their tremendous exertions of last week and new men can be brought up to fill the gaps in the ranks.

The fate of the war depends now, says Col. Feyler, an eminent Swiss military writer, essentially, on the reserves of men that the armies are able to bring up, and in this respect, according to military opinion here, Germany appears to be in a state of inferiority.

Not only does the Russian offensive prevent Germany from transferring men from the eastern to the western front, they point out, but troops that are now being instructed in the interior will necessarily be sent against the Russians.

THOUSAND MILES FROM FRONT.

It is also pointed out that Germany has to operate on fronts totalling nearly 1,000 miles with twenty-five active army corps, while the allies have at their disposal twenty-nine army corps for a line less than half as long. Thus from that point of view of available troops, it is argued, the comparison is unfavorable to the Germans.

So far as equipment is concerned, the infantry on both sides are equally well supplied. At the beginning the Germans were much better off with quick-firers, but the allies have now caught up by intensive production in the arms factories. In the artillery the allies are said to have the advantage as far as light pieces are concerned, but the German heavy artillery is incontestibly superior. They are not likely to retain that superiority long, however, since both the French and the British arsenals are beginning to deliver big guns and the allies have plenty of trained men to serve them, irrespective of the Japanese gunners, whose early arrival at Marseilles is announced by rumor.

Reports here declare that the forces about Dixmude are being constantly reinforced. The town is a wreck, however, and the advantage of holding is declared to be slight. The fighting has now swung away from Ypres, which has not been bombarded during the last two days. The heaviest fighting in this section has been six miles from Ypres. The battle in the wooded section south of Bixschoote and about Ypres has been terrific. A wood south of Bixschoote was taken by the allies yesterday, but the losses in the attack were extremely heavy.

The woods north of Ypres cleared by the British are full of German dead. The fighting there was with the bayonet in hand-to-hand encounters, the Germans holding their positions with the greatest bravery and determination, until practically all were killed or wounded.

The condition of the Yser is a source of constant menace to both armies, owing to the danger of an epidemic of disease. The fighting which resulted in the driving of the Germans from the left bank had again filled the canal with bodies of men and horses. Germans who were captured declared they literally crossed upon bridges of their own men and horses.

TEST MOBILIZATION OF TORONTO SOLDIERS WAS A HUGE SUCCESS

Toronto, Nov. 16.—The first man to answer the test mobilization call at the Armouries to-day was Dr. King, surgeon in the 10th Royal Grenadiers. A Highlander was next and then they began to come in twos and threes, and increasing numbers. A few spectators who evidently had heard rumor of "something doing", were in attendance, waiting around the building to see what would happen. Quite a number of the men evidently did not delay by returning to their homes, but turned up at the Armouries in mufti.

Very few men appeared at the Armouries during the first hour, but 20 minutes after the initial signal had been sent, they were coming in at the rate of about seventy a minute. By a quarter to two this influx had increased to fifteen a minute, while shortly after two o'clock two men were entering every five seconds.

The majority came down to the Armouries without troubling to get into service kit, although a full parade was ordered, and consequently civilian clothing predominated. In fact, at two o'clock only one private had turned up in absolute marching order with greatcoat.

Thanks to their automobiles, by far the greater portion of the early arrivals were officers, in fact for the first two and a half hours there were almost as many officers present as men. After that, however, men began to pour in rapidly, several companies having been told to parade at two o'clock.

RUSSIAN ARMY IS STRICTLY PROHIBITED THE USE OF LIQUOR

"Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, has overridden the decision of the Council of Ministers favoring the sale of [illegible] light wine and has now ordered that wherever martial law prevails the sale of alcoholic drinks of any kind shall be forbidden. This decision was taken because drinking among officers quartered at remote places had not ceased."

A PATRIOTIC MOVE

The big Tea Room of the Oriental Hotel is beautifully decorated on its walls and mirrors by national emblems. Its floor and tables were also decorated most appropriately by the youth and beauty of Peterboro yesterday, who gathered there with the chivalry of this city to, incidentally, enjoy themselves, but really to contribute funds, through the Daughters of the Empire, to the support of those who directly suffer from the war. The D.O.E. are working in a patriotic cause and the management of the Oriental Hotel are deserving of greatest praise, in this time of stress, for giving up a whole week's profit. Many of the leading members of Peterboro's "400" were present. Judging by yesterday's inauguration of this movement any man or woman claiming a right to live in the exclusive circles or who realizes that Peterboro's or Canada's or the Empire's Sons are at war will remember this effort of the D.O.E.

THE COST OF WAR

London, Nov. 16.—Premier Asquith stated in the House of Commons this afternoon that the war already was costing Great Britain from £900,000 to £1,000,000 daily.

George A. Touch?, Unionist, asked Foreign Secretary Grey in the House this afternoon if he could say whether the American and the Carranza Government had agreed on a time for the withdrawal of the United States troops from Vera Cruz, Mexico. Furthermore the members wanted to know if the British Government had any information as to the intention or the ability of the new authorities in Mexico to "establish democratic rule; abolish military dictatorships; and suppress the operations of bandit forces."

Replying on behalf of the Government F.D. Acland, Parliamentary Secretary of the Foreign Office, said the Government knew nothing concerning the intentions or the ability of the present Mexican authorities, but it understood that an agreement concerning the removal of American troops from Vera Cruz had been reached.

German Regiment Annihilated In Attempt to Cross the Yser

One German Army is Cut off by Inundation. Two Severe Attacks Repulsed by the Allies. Bad Fighting Weather Prevails. French in Strong Offensive Drive the Foe From Trenches. Allies Retake Important Positions

PARIS, NOV. 16. —THIS (MONDAY) AFTERNOON'S FRENCH OFFICIAL COMMUNIQUE WAS AS FOLLOWS:

"DURING THE DAY OF YESTERDAY, ALONG THE YSER CANAL, FROM NIEUPORT TO THE COUNTRY UP-RIVER FROM DIXMUDE, THE FIGHTING WAS LIMITED TO ARTILLERY EXCHANGES.

"THE COUNTRY HAVING BEEN FURTHER INUNDATED, THE SUBMERGED TERRITORY NOW STRETCHES TO THE SOUTH OF DIXMUDE TO A POINT FIVE KILOMETRES (3 MILES) TO THE NORTH OF BIXSCHOOTE.

"THE FORCES OF THE ENEMY WHICH ENDEAVORED TO CROSS THE CANAL BETWEEN THE REGION OF DIXMUDE AND BIXSCHOOTE ALL WERE DRIVEN BACK BEYOND THE BRIDGES. A GERMAN REGIMENT WAS COMPLETELY DESTROYED AT A POINT TO THE SOUTH OF BIXSCHOOTE.

"TO THE SOUTH-EAST OF YPRES TWO OTHER GERMAN ATTACKS WERE REPULSED.

"ON OUR PART WE HAVE TAKEN THE OFFENSIVE AND RECONQUERED CERTAIN POINTS OF SUPPORT WHICH THE ENEMY SOME DAYS AGO SUCCEEDED IN CAPTURING.

"BETWEEN THE LYS AND THE OISE THERE HAVE BEEN OPERATIONS ONLY OF MINOR IMPORTANCE AND PARTIAL PROGRESS MADE BY OUR ADVANCE POSITIONS.

"IN THE REGION OF THE AISNE AND IN THE CHAMPAGNE COUNTRY THERE HAVE BEEN ARTILLERY EXCHANGES WITHOUT RESULTS.

"IN THE ARGONNE THE TOWN OF ST. HUBERT HAS AGAIN BEEN ATTACKED BY THE GERMANS, BUT WITHOUT SUCCESS.

"IN THE REGION OF ST. MIHIEL A SURPRISE ATTACK UNDERTAKEN BY THE ENEMY AGAINST APREMONT RESULTED IN FAILURE.

"THERE HAS BEEN LITTLE ACTIVITY IN THE VOSGES."

CHEAP RATE ADVERTISING

(To the Editor of The Times)

Sir.—Many of us have been thinking of forming a league for the suppression of free advertising. I am sure your excellent journal will agree with that idea. It is all very well for public men or people generally to air their views on public matters. That is the very [illegible]. That was the life and soul of the greatest city of ancient times, Athens. But private parties are sometimes too fond of advertising themselves at the public expense in Peterborough at any rate, and not for its good or for the material good either, Mr. Editor. Now by example, what is the good of long screeds about cases in the police courts where Lawyer So-and-So appears to be a great criminal counsel or a man of parts? He defends some beast who [illegible] ought to be in gaol or get the [illegible], and all the nasty business is brought before the public. I don't want my growing children to read such stuff. It counteracts all the good their [illegible] can do them. Indeed, [illegible] does them great harm and [illegible] all because Lawyer So-and-So wants some advertising at an extra cheap rate. Well! It's too cheap, Mr. Editor, altogether too cheap and too nasty. A committee lately brought a [illegible] clever man here to teach the grown-ups how to behave themselves in ordinary matters of every day life and [illegible] to hold their [illegible] and fork, don't you know. Dr. Gordon is a fine speaker, and I think did good. But what would he say to the drunken, filthy drivel "brought out" by lawyers who ought to wait to shine in more elevated circles in the upper courts if they can. It ought to be decent, anyhow. If lawyers names did not appear in these cases much of the "need" of long reports would not arise and we would have fewer such reports. The criminal or drunk when punished gets what's coming to them without being dangled from Tyburn before the eyes of the community and when innocent, instead of getting off they are still pointed at by the [illegible] as "havin' bin in court" all because of the advertising. I have heard it, Sir. It is no good and I can tell you it ought to be stopped. And while I am at it Sir it is all wrong for people to shoot in the newspapers from behind hedges, the way they used to do at home (you haven't any hedges in this country), at our public men. Its cowardly and doesn't give the men attacked half a chance. It does no good for no self-respecting man would read such stuff and not say "Well! If that is true why don't he put his name to it?" That kind of attack is never resorted to by self-respecting people. You only [illegible] that get behind the fence or the woodpile Mr. Editor and the public knows it.

SOUTH END.

GERMANS STILL RETREAT BEFORE THE RUSSIANS IN THE EAST

Petrograd Warns the Allies That the Advance on Berlin Will Be No Childs' Play--May Take Months--Foe is Concentrating for Defence in Strong Positions. Mazurian Lake Region Has Been all Cleared of Germans

Petrograd, Nov. 16.—The recapture of Soldau by the Russian forces was announced in an official statement today. To the north of the Mazurian Lake region, in East Prussia the Germans are declared to be in retreat, retiring in the direction of Konigsberg.

Between Cracow and Czenstochow the Russian advance continues, it is declared, despite reinforcements which have been brought up by the Germans.

With the continued withdrawal of the Austrians from Central Galicia, the Russian advance is claimed to be developing with continued success. It is declared here to-day that there is a general exodus from Cracow and judging from the lack of resistance shown the forces advancing upon it, it is believed the Austrians may have decided not to defend this city.

An official statement declares the Mazurian Lake region had been all but cleared of the enemy. The advance along the line toward Koenigsberg has reached Angerburg, 35 miles inside the East Prussian frontier. Fighting is in progress in the Soldau region. In the movement upon Thorn fighting continues between Block and the River Warthe. The Germans are said to have withdrawn from the vicinity of Kalisz.

MAY NOT DEFEND CRACOW

London, Nov. 16.—In the eastern arena of the war the Germans are making and executing similar plans in the face of the Russian advance. It is said that great German forces are being concentrated at Thorn, Posen, and Breslau with the idea of keeping the Russians out of important districts in the Provinces of Posen and Silesia.

A word of caution comes to the allies from Petrograd. This is that they must not expect the Russians to sweep on to Berlin over night, as it were as this may take months and even longer. The Germans occupy the defences they have been preparing for years, and in addition to this they may be able to spare even more men for the operation on their eastern front.

Russian armies seem to be gradually converging on Cracow, and the siege or investment of this place appears not to be far off. It is suggested that the Austrians from Central Galicia might surrender to avoid a bombardment, but this can be called nothing more than a suggestion.

In East Prussia the Russian forward movement seems to continue, and it is said that the Russian generals are imposing on the captured towns fines in proportion to those levied by the Germans on the cities of Belgium. These fines correspond with the population of the town taken.

POLES ARE DISAFFECTED.

A Times despatch from Copenhagen says: "Advices from Posen indicate that there is much disaffection among the Poles n the eastern Provinces of Germany. The Poles complain that the Germans are neglecting the frontier because most of the inhabitants are Slavs. They declare that the Germans themselves are laying the frontier to waste in order to delay the Russians. They protest that Poles are put in the front of the battle-line as cannon fodder. The Germans on the other hand accuse the Poles of helping the Russians by espionage.

"The Germans are concentrating great armies at Thorn, Posen, and Breslau, and plan to fight desperately to prevent the Russian occupation of the important parts of Silesia and Posen. Only the utmost need will persuade the Germans to send any troops back to the western front at present."

RUSSIA'S ENORMOUS TASK.

The Daily Mail's Petrograd correspondent warns the British people of the enormous task still facing the allies, and declares that England will need all the troops that it is possible for her to raise.

The correspondent points out that it will take months for the Russians to reach Berlin, saying that even if the Germans are driven from the positions they now are holding, they can fall back on equally strong lines of defence they have prepared. He says he hears that the Germans are setting the Russians a formidable task to break through, and before this is accomplished the Germans still may be able to send troops to France and Belgium.

MOVING ON DANZIG.

A Petrograd despatch of Sunday's date says: Russian troops advanced rapidly today toward Danzig, the objective of the campaign in East Prussia.

A despatch to the London Telegraph from Stockholm, says,

"A diplomatic despatch from Vienna states that the German army is evacuating both Breslau, in Silesia, and Koenigsberg, in East Prussia."

There is no confirmation of these rumors obtainable and today's despatches seem to disprove them, especially that relating to Breslau."

SMUGGLED GERMANS.

Ottawa, Nov. 16.—A Canadian citizen was arrested at Chippewa on Saturday on a charge of smuggling four German reservists out of the country his reward being $10 for each man. The man was suspected of having been in the business for some time. The charge is a most serious one, and if the facts are as alleged, he may find himself faced with a charge of high treason.

Three electrical workers went in a pilot-drag through a raging torrent that choked a power company's tunnel along the mighty cliff that holds up the weight of Niagara Falls. Three men with three [illegible] of dynamite groped their way through [illegible] with water in [illegible] tons of rock lodged unexpectedly in the tunnel's "mouth." They failed. And then what? A few days later they did what mortal [illegible] done neither before nor since; they climbed up the face of Niagara Falls from the outside, crawled under the curtain of water that leaps out from the giant cliffs and placed a charge of dynamite in the mouth of the tunnel. That time they were successful. The channel was cleared without the loss of a life. Here is the second trip as told by one of the men:

"Although we were dressed in oilskins, oil hats and rubber boots, we were quickly drenched to the bones by gusts of spray that tumbled on our heads and backs like pails of buckshot. So great became the force of these gusts that we could stand upright no longer and crawled from bowlder to bowlder on our hands and knees. All this time we were advancing literally under Niagara Falls, for the cataract was falling over and slightly beyond us, now and then giving us an extra heavy swish of water as the winds in the gorge blew direct against the face of the fall.

"We were walking about a hundred feet up from the pool, bracing ourselves against the pile of rocks. It was, at first, an almost impossible task to make steady progress. So we kept some distance apart for safety's sake in the event of one having a tumble, and by taking our motions [illegible] at every [illegible] way, we finally reached the ledge directly under the tunnel's mouth. It was a matter of a few minutes to place the dynamite and wires where they would hit the blockade to best advantage.

"We rested a few minutes and commenced the return journey. Bad as the approach had been, the going back was infinitely worse. The adverse winds had practically isolated us by walls of water and indeed at one time the prospect was good for a twenty-four-hour stay on the edge of an ugly cavern.

"During a lull we were enabled to make another start. Having to drag the pair of copper wires with us made the trip much more difficult, but we held on and gained foot after foot, sometimes slipping, often bringing blood, until the sight of the Cave of the Winds peeped through the eternal mists. Exhaustion was slowing down our steps, and a fearful hunger increased the discomfort, for the adventure had taken the best part of a day. I remember some one throwing us a rope and we snatched at it with a sudden return of energy.

"Lifted safely into the cave, the superintendent touched the copper wires. A far-off roar, that sounded even above the boom of the falls—and we turned to face a messenger who had been waiting at the telephone for instant news of the water level in the tunnel. 'It is rapidly lowering,' said he, and all of us knew that the blockade had been broken by the blast."

WILLIAM SULZER

William Sulzer who was impeached from the Governorship of New York State was [illegible] genius or good luck never has been shelved. His father, Thos. Sulzer, was a politician before him, so much so that he suffered imprisonment for a cause he believed in. The elder Sulzer was a German patriot and a comrade of General Sigel and General Schurz. He was a strong advocate of constitutional liberty, and while a student at [illegible] he was [illegible] and imprisoned, but [illegible] managed to escape to Switzerland. He came to this continent immediately and soon cast his lot with the Democratic forces. This was in 1851. The elder Sulzer married soon after he arrived here and settled in Elizabeth, N.J. His wife was from Dutch and Scotch-Irish stock. They lived in the New Jersey city for several years, and there William Sulzer was born. Soon afterward they removed to New York, and young Sulzer, who was [illegible] bright as a boy, was sent to the Public schools and was graduated, despite the fact that it meant many a hard effort and sacrifice on the part of his father and mother. Afterward he was sent to Columbia University, where he studied law. Both in the Public school and at college he was recognized as a forcible speaker. As early as 1884, when Mr. Sulzer was but twenty-one years old, he attracted attention as a [illegible] speaker.

Market for Flax Fibre

As a considerable quantity of flax is harvested in Canada every year, the attention of [illegible] may be drawn to the market in Leeds, England, for flax fibre. Spinners there have followed with close attention the development of the growth of the flax plant in Western Canada, and are desirous of receiving shipments of the fibre if it can be obtained at competitive terms with supplies from other [illegible]. Some three years ago a few small trial shipments of retted flax fibre were sent from Canada. Mr. [illegible] M. [illegible], Canadian trade commissioner at Leeds, says consumers express their readiness to give their consideration to offers that may be received at any time from Canadians interested in working up [illegible] for this fibre.

RULES FOR HUSBANDS

L. C. Dillman, a Seattle millionaire, as the result of [illegible] years of marital bliss promulgated the following rules for husbands:

Keep all promises made before and at the time of marriage. Keep a joint bank account. Go to your wife oftener than [illegible] a week [illegible] her up on the telephone at least three times a day. When away from home write or telegraph every day. Take her with you [illegible] trips. [illegible] in any other [illegible] member that she likes [illegible] candy and books. Make [illegible] comfortable [illegible]. Do not criticise [illegible] than to all [illegible] the only. If you have only a dollar you are not wasting it by spending it on her. When she is dissatisfied get a divorce. Life is too [illegible] to waste any of it in trying to [illegible] normal woman.

NON-DRINKING SHEEP

Apparently Thrive Without Water Except Dew and Plant Juice

Sheep on the Nebo national forest ranges, Utah, go four and a half months without water except for such moisture as they get from the dew and the juices of forage plants.

Grazing sheep on a range entirely destitute of water is a recent innovation, due to the increasing demand for forage and the efforts of the forestry officers to find a place on the forest ranges for all the stock that can safely be admitted. The area on the Nebo which has proved usable by sheep is high and rocky, a portion of it being above timber line, and it has neither springs nor streams of sufficient size or accessibility to be used for stock watering purposes. The grazing season lasts from June 15 to October 31, and during this period of four and a half months the animals do not get a drink.

Under such conditions, however, the sheep do extremely well, and the lambs from this range have an average weight at the close of the season of 85 pounds on the Chicago market, which is rather above the normal weight from that vicinity.

In one area on the [illegible] forest it [illegible] sheep get water only twice during the four-months' summer grazing season. There is no water on the range, but the sheep are driven to a nearby stream lower down the mountain side.

SUCCESSFUL DAIRYING

There are still [illegible] of men, who prove that it pays to take up cow testing, that [illegible]

Here is a good example of what one man at Cedar Hall, Quebec, in the Gaspe Peninsula, accomplished by carefully watching his fairly good cows and feeding them better. The first year his eight cows gave him 33,511 pounds of milk, an average of 4,189 pounds, at a feed cost of $32.94, netting a total profit of $76.82, an average of $9.60 profit per cow. Five of the best cows in the herd the first year were kept consequently, two heifers made up the herd to eight [illegible] eight cows gave him 41,405 pounds of milk, an average of 5,176 pounds, or 1,000 pounds of an increase per cow. The feed cost $4.12 more per cow, but the total profit was $277.33, or an increase of 259 per cent. in the profit. It pays to give additional feed if the cows kept are of the type to make use of it profitably.

The notable results are these: The gross income from milk increased by $122.43 from the same number of cows, the profit has more than doubled, and the owner has received every encouragement to try for still better results. That is where a trial cow testing trip generally lands the herd owner.

Shooting Oil Wells

Keen interest is being taken in the development of the Manitoulin oil fields by Senator Paton and representatives from all the chief centres on the island assembled at Green Bay to witness the shooting of some of the wells. E. A. Stokes, of Petrolia, was on hand, and a fuse was lighted, and a sharp shock was felt and the earth trembled, from the mouth of the pipe a greyish liquid shot into the air to a height of about [illegible] feet and fell gracefully to the ground. This was followed immediately by a [illegible] gush of a watery liquid which ascended to a height of about a hundred feet. About fifteen quarts of nitro-glycerine were used in shooting the well.

The Strange "Mystery" In the Brain of a Thief

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1924, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

I HAD a long talk with a Thief the other day, all about the world and the people in it, and what a pity it is that nobody is really honest.

The Thief was just out of the penitentiary, and he had a great deal to say [illegible] honest and dishonest people in general. I sat on deck in a fine [illegible] ferryboat and watched the California sunshine making a gay pattern of froth upon the blue of the bay—and listened to what the Thief had to say. He was a good talker—was the Thief. Most thieves are. I suppose they have to be—to keep people from noticing what they do.

"I'm sick of being a crook," said the Thief. "It's never brought me anything. I'm going to be straight from this day out. What is there in stealing? Not a thing in the world.

"You don't get much to begin with—and what you do get you have to divide up with some other crook or he'll squeal on you.

"I've had a good many 'pals' since I've been a crook—and there wasn't one of them on the level with me. How could they be on the level? That ain't the way [illegible] learn to be crooks—being on the level.

"I've heard a [illegible] a spiel about honor among thieves. There [illegible] to it.

How a Sheep's Pancreas May Aid the Human Body

THE [illegible] in the human body is called the pancreas [illegible]

The pancreas is from [illegible] to two-thirds of a foot long, and it pours a digestive fluid into a little [illegible] which empties into the loop of the bowel, which is really a continuation of the small end of the stomach.

The pancreas not only gives forth a digestive fluid into the intestine with "pancreatin" and other "ferments" in it, but it manufactures an internal juice or "hormone," which affects the blood just as thyroid juice, adrenal juice, pituitary juice and the juices of the rest of the glands. This "hormone" of the pancreas seems to be necessary to burn up or oxidize sugar in the blood and tissues. Diabetes [illegible]

Britain's Wool Embargo

(Boston Herald)

Imperative demands of the national defence are urged by the British Government in justification of the extraordinary embargo that has been imposed on the export of wool from the United Kingdom and the British colonies, including Australasia and South Africa. This embargo, if continued for one year, would cut off upwards of one hundred million pounds of the normal imports of raw wool into this country. In other words, it would reduce by more than one-fifth the wool required to make the clothing and floor-coverings of the American people.

The total normal consumption of raw wool in the United States is not far from 500,000,000 pounds a year, of which our country produces produces not much more than one-half, or 296,000,000 pounds last year, with an estimated output of 280,000,000 pounds in 1914. Unfortunately for some years the American production of raw wool has been decreasing from the high-water mark of 328,000,000 pounds in 1909. Practically all the wool grown in the U. S. is fine enough for manufacture into clothing, while our imports of 236,000,000 pounds of wool in the fiscal year of 1914 fully 100,000,000 pounds consisted of coarse wools to be woven into rugs and carpets. Under fine Australian wools will be the British embargo none of the available for American use—none of the wools from New Zealand or British South Africa and none of the carpet wools from India.

This is a serious blow at America wool manufacturing, but it must be remembered that manufacturing already was at an abnormally low ebb. Returns to the National Association of Wool Manufacturers for Sept. 1 showed that 26 per cent. of the broad looms and 38 per cent. of the carpet looms in this country were idle. The American consumption of all kinds of wool for clothing and for rug and carpet purposes probably will not reach 500,000,000 lbs. in the present year, though in 1909 it was 588,000,000 pounds. The industry has been hard hit by the new tariff and hard hit also by the general depression in business and the shrinkage in the purchasing and consuming power of the nation.

Nevertheless the British embargo covering one-fifth of our normal consumption and almost one-half of the entire imports of foreign wools in the last fiscal year, will add to the difficulties of manufacturing and to the amount of machinery unemployed, and will inevitably enhance the cost of the clothing of the American people. This is another price which the neutral United States, in common with the whole world, must pay for a world-circling war.

Chest Colds and Hoarseness Quickly Rubbed Away

"Nerviline" Gives Speedy Relief and Cures Over Night.

Get a cold?

Is your voice raspy—is your chest congested or sore?

If so, you are the very person that Nerviline will cure in a jiffy.

Nerviline is strong and penetrating. It sinks right into the tissues, takes out inflammation and soreness, destroys colds in a truly wonderful way. Rub Nerviline over the chest—rub on lots of it, and watch that tightness disappear. Nerviline won't blister, it sinks in too fast—doesn't simply stay on the surface like a thick, oily liniment would. If the throat is raspy and sore, rub it well outside with Nerviline, and use Nerviline as a gargle diluted with warm water. Just one or two treatments like this and your voice and throat will be quick normal again.

Just think of it—for forty years the largest used family medicine in this country—Nerviline must be good, must quickly relieve and cure a hundred ills that befall every family. Try it for earache, toothache, coughs, colds, sore chest, hoarseness and muscular pains in every part of the body. Large family size bottle 50c; trial size 25c. at all dealers.

ROAD MAINTENANCE

Various Suggestions as to Distributing the Cost of Good Roads

With the appointment of the three highway commissioners by the Ontario Government come various opinions and recommendations regarding the good roads movement throughout the province. In the hope of getting suggestions the secretary of Ontario good roads communicated with the reeves of various townships scattered about the province, and the result was a decided tendency to ask more money from the government. The most common recommendation is that the government pay one-half the cost of good roads construction, instead of one-third, as provided under the Highways Act. A second, common demand is that motorists be compelled to pay more towards the roads they help to destroy. Complaints are made that motors wear roads out faster than the townships can afford to keep them repaired, and that it is the motor and not the horse vehicle, which does the bulk of the damage. This seems to be particularly the case in townships lying close to the larger cities. Force motors to pay a high tax, proportionate to weight of the car, is the suggestion. From one county comes the recommendation that the roads leading from large centers of population, bear the full cost, and hold this out as an incentive to the more remote districts. Some districts are not inclined to favor the movement entirely, stating that more progress will have to be made at less cost, or the system will rapidly become unpopular among the people who are now paying the bills. The government, however, might absorb a good share of that cost. The suggestion of a frontage tax comes from another county. It is a recognized thing that improved roads increase the value of adjoining farms and the recommendation is that these farmers help pay for the roads in larger percentage than those whose farms are benefitted less.

INDIAN HEAD BARN

On the Experimental Farm at Indian Head there is a wonderful barn. Cement work was very largely used in the construction of both the stable—which was completed last autumn—and barn, as both have a 10 foot wall of cement. This material was also used in the floor and stalls of the horse stable and of the basement of the barn, which will be used for the winter feeding of cattle.

The horse stable, which is a huge affair, is splendidly fitted up in every way, while the barn is the last cry in barn-structure. Its dimensions are [illegible] feet by 116 feet with an elevation of 52 feet. This height gives the building an added appearance of immensity, especially from inside, but there are no posts; the barn is framed with eight large bents, with hip roof.

A goodly space on the ground floor is reserved for work shop, and granaries have also a generous allowance; the windows are hung on weights, and can be easily lowered, indeed, taking it all in all, the barn is so very fine a structure that the fire which destroyed the old buildings may now be regarded as more of a blessing than a curse.

HARVEST OF THE SEA

Great Wealth in the Fisheries of the Pacific Coast

The halibut of British Columbia have an enviable reputation, for they are less over-grown and of finer texture than the Icelandic and North Sea fish; a length of five to six feet and weight of 250 pounds is exceptional for the British Columbia halibut. The waters between Queen Charlotte Islands and the mainland, especially off Rose Spit, and off the west shore of Banks Island, were at one time veritably overcrowded with halibut.

Very large fish were often taken then, some weighing 150 pounds, but the general weight now is only from 20 to 60 pounds. The halibut are scattered all over the strait, but regular migrations have been noticed, and where the waters of Dixon entrance meet the currents moving from the south through Hecate Strait, and food appears abundant, the fish congregate in large numbers.

The superabundance of herrings on the coast of British Columbia has been recognized from early times, but, as the local demand was insignificant, no herring fishery can be said to have existed, until about thirty years ago. At intervals, and in a desultory way, various parties engaged in the herring industry, and quantities were converted into oil and guano. Within the last ten years, however, the value of this fishery resource has been realized.

Herring occur all along the coast as far as Alaska, though in sheltered areas, like the waters near Nanaimo, Ucluelet, Barkley Sound, Virago Sound and Queen Charlotte Islands, the schools appear to form solid phalanxes.

FISH STORIES

Lightning Killed a Bass Weighing Eleven Pounds

From the Eastern Townships of Quebec there came a story of an eleven-pound black bass killed by lightning. That was pretty good. Nobody had ever seen an eleven-pound black bass before in the world, and nobody had ever seen a fish killed by lightning. The story was a double-edged stroke of genius. Next from the New England States there came a story of a lad who rammed his fist into the gills of a fish in diving and landed another big one. And this was followed up by a story from Baltimore, where [illegible] the tale of having his ship lifted out of the water on the back of an enormous whale.

A Viper Killer

GASOLINE FUMES

The Gas Given off by This Popular Fuel Acts Like an Anesthetic

Gasoline fumes, in addition to being highly inflammable, are also poisonous to the human being. This fact has only recently been developed by medical authorities and it is possible that its discovery might have the effect of explaining some deaths that have been assigned as probably due to other causes. The fumes are poisonous under certain conditions and it is well to have these conditions thoroughly understood, else there may be more deaths from this cause. Combined with enough air there is little or no danger, but when a person is subjected to the influence of the fumes in a confined place the chances are that they will be affected in a way that might have fatal results. So far as their investigations have gone the chemists and medical men who have investigated gasoline poisoning have come to the conclusion that its effects are very much like being overcome with an anesthetic. The victim suddenly collapses and becomes unconscious. During the period when consciousness is lost the people behave very much as do people who have been subjected to ether as an anesthetic. Some of them fight and scream and some of them are perfectly still. As in the case of an anesthetic, the recovery is dependent on the individual. It is not often that there are any bad effects from it, however. In a number of cases that have occurred in Montreal, where the discovery of the poisonous nature of the fumes has been investigated, recovery has been prompt and the victims were able to return to work the next day. In all of these cases, however, restorative measures were commenced immediately on the men being overcome—the victims being men in these cases—so that there is no evidence of what the fumes will do if the person overcome by them is not given immediate attention. That is, there is no positive evidence so far as the Montreal authorities know. There have been cases where deaths occurred which, in light of the discovery that has been made, may safely be assigned to inhaling gasoline fumes. One of these was the case of a man who was painting or cleaning the inside of a gasoline tank and was found dead. Another was the case of a chauffeur who was found dead in a garage where there was no ventilation and where the fumes of gasoline were very strong. It is pointed out that, in view of the universal custom of using gasoline as a cleaning material by women, it would be well to see that the room where it is used, is well ventilated with a steady current of fresh air. There is no danger so long as the fumes are not confined—just as there is little or no danger of explosion when the gas is allowed to mingle freely with the air.

A RECORD STURGEON

One Fish Provided a Meal for 1,000 People

Very seldom indeed is the sturgeon, the finny monster which Edward II. made a Royal fish, and which, when caught in the Thames, becomes the property of the Crown, captured in English waters nowadays. For this reason not a little interest was aroused a few days ago when it was announced that a sturgeon 9 feet 9 inches in length, weighing [illegible] pounds, had been caught in the River Delph at Welney Washes, near Littleport, Norfolk. This fish, which according to the estimate of a salesman at Spitalfields, who ultimately sold it for [illegible], would provide a meal for nearly 1,000 people, had been noticed in the river, and attempts had been made to shoot it. But the cartridges used were loaded with shot too small to have any effect on the sturgeon's hard skin. A large net, therefore, was drawn across the river, after which a boat was rowed alongside the fish, when one of the men succeeded in forcing a large and powerful hook attached to a strong pole into his throat. This enabled him to keep its head out of water just long enough for the fish to be killed with a gun. Some idea of its size and weight may be gathered from the fact that five men were required to land it. This, however, is by no means the largest sturgeon which has been caught in English waters. The record was a fish weighing [illegible] pounds, while in the North Sea fish weighing as much as [illegible] pounds and [illegible] pounds have been captured by trawlers. It is pointed out that one of the most remarkable facts about the fish netted in the North Sea is that they are similar to the American species, whence it would seem that the specimens caught from time to time in our waters must have made the voyage across the Atlantic, since the fish appears to have died out as a regular inhabitant of British waters. Sturgeons pass the greater part of the year in the sea, but periodically ascend large rivers, and it was due to this characteristic that the specimen was caught recently in the River Delph. Not only do they attain great size and weight, but, according to the estimates of some experts, they sometimes live as long as two hundred years. Apropos of the fact that Edward II. made the sturgeon a Royal fish, it is interesting to note that its flesh, quite apart from the fact that caviare is made from the roe, is always held in great estimation, and in olden days was always reserved for the table of the King.

SAVING THE SEALS

Only International Agreement Saved Them From Extinction

Russia, England, Japan and America agreed to suspend sealing in the open sea for fifteen years and sealing on land for five years. The need for this drastic course is explained by George Archibald Clark:

Pelagic sealing proved very destructive to the herd. It respected neither sex nor condition of the animals found, and the catch fell principally upon the nursing females, which were taken upon the summer feeding grounds in Behring Sea; for when the migration route of the seals had been covered the sealers entered Behring Sea and lay in wait for the mother seals as they visited the fishing banks one or two hundred miles distant from the islands for the purpose of feeding. As a result of the death of the mother, the dependent young starved to death on the rookeries. In the fall of 1896 sixteen thousand fur seal pups died of starvation on the rookeries of St. Paul and St. George islands.

As pelagic sealing developed through the increasing number of ships, its catch grew from [illegible],000 at the beginning to a maximum of 140,000 in 1894; but this could not last, and with the declining herd the pelagic catch also began to decline. In the season of 1911, the last of the industry, the catch numbered about 15,000 skins. From the known catch of the sealing fleets and from conservative estimates as to animals killed but not recovered it is apparent that more than a million breeding female fur seals and a like number of unborn and dependent young were destroyed during the thirty odd years the pelagic industry has been in operation. The result is the depleted condition in which we find the herd to-day. Our best information places the number of animals in the herd in 1867 at between two and three millions. It numbers to-day about 215,000.

FREAK PLANTS

Trap and Devour Insects, Digesting Bodies of Their Prey

Among the strangest of all nature's products are the insect-eating, or carnivorous, plants. They actually catch, eat, and digest various insects by a process practically as thorough as that of the animals.

The so-called Venus "fly trap" or "vegetable butcher" is one of the most remarkable of these. It grows in a wild state in the forests of North Carolina, where it creeps along the ground, presenting thousands of gaping mouths, into which the unsuspecting fly or insect is lured and imprisoned.

The leaves of this plant consist of two valves, shaped like clam shells, which, when closed, form a trap. The ends of the leaves are baited with a sweet juice which attracts the insect. The leaves are covered with minute hairs, which correspond very closely to the arrangements of the nervous system in animals. On the edge of the leaves are rows of long, fine teeth.

When the unsuspecting insect has been lured to the leaf by the attractive juice he steps upon one of the microscopic hairs, and the two valves shut with a snap, keeping Mr. Fly secure.

Still more curious are certain plants in Borneo, which distill liquors for the purpose of luring their victims. Many of these are miniature grog shops. In their leaves are little pitchers, which are filled with hard alcoholic liquors. Each of the pitchers has a tight-fitting cover which keeps the dew and rain from diluting the liquor. No scientists have yet succeeded in analyzing the liquors with any satisfactory results, but it is evident that they are of different kinds, since different species of the plants attract different insects.

The most unique of all the productions of nature is the plant popularly known as the "goose plant." It is a native of Guatemala, and receives its name from the bud, which has the shape of a goose floating along the water with its neck proudly arched. The flower is very beautiful, but repulsive. It has an odor resembling that of decayed meat. The plant attracts the carrion fly, which is the agent of fertilization.

RAND HIGH-GRADERS

Precious Metal Stolen After It Leaves the Stamps

Most people have heard of I. D. B. (illicit diamond buying), a crime which in South Africa is punished with penal servitude on the breakwater at Cape Town.

The Rand, however, has the lesser-known offence of I. G. B. (illicit gold buying). Considering that in the Rand mines only a few pennyweights of gold go to a ton of quartz, it is obvious that the miner does not get much chance of stealing the precious metal. When does the gold thief get his opportunity?

The pieces of quartz are ground into dust by powerful hammers known as "stamps." Water then washes the dust over inclined plates coated with amalgam. The gold instantly combines with the mercury in the amalgam, afterwards being easily separated by chemical process.

It is of this gold-laden amalgam that the dishonest employe will scrape off portions which, though small, will mount up to a good bit of gold in time.

The claim which was made by ship owners and others, and which has been confirmed to a considerable extent by official records kept by the Marine and Fisheries Department of the Dominion, that the level of the river and Great Lakes is being constantly lowered, principally by drainage operations on a large scale, is to be thoroughly tested by a Commission appointed by the Canadian Government. Gauges were placed at various points between Port Arthur and Quebec to make the required tests.

A Costly Metal

Platinum is among the most [illegible] metals in existence. It is now more than twice as expensive as gold. The metal has been utilized more extensively during the past few years than ever before in the jewellery industry, in the chemical laboratory and in the industrial world.

BURDENSOME NAMES GIVEN TO CHILDREN

One Girl Loaded Down With Twenty-six, One For Each Letter of Alphabet

Probably the most burdensome name ever bestowed on a child was that given by Arthur Pepper, a laundryman of West Derby, Liverpool, to his daughter, born in December, 1883. It comprised one name for every letter of the alphabet, and was certainly ingenious in its way, running: Anna Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louise Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysis Venus Winnifred Xenophon Yetty Zeno. P, of course, was provided in the surname, Pepper.

Hundreds of examples of this poor form of parental wit were brought to light by an investigator. Noah's Ark Smith, Sardine Box, Jolly Death, Judas Iscariot Brown, One-too-Many Johnson, Not-wanted Smith, Bovril Simpson, Merry Christmas Figgett, Odious Heaton, Anno Domini Davis, are the names of children probably living who will have to bear them through life. How can such children observe the Fifth Commandment?

There was for a long time a curiosity in nomenclature on the Australian pension list. His name was, "Through - much - tribulation - we - enter - the - Kingdom - of - Heaven Smith." The officials of the Pension Department very pardonably abbreviated him into "Tribby Smith."

It is not surprising that the names of Dickens' characters—odd though they are—should be found in real life, for it was from life that many of them were taken. Some, as we know, were copied from the names over shop doors, etc., but this was not the novelist's only source of selection. Among his papers John Foster found carefully-drawn-up lists of names, with the source from which he obtained them, and the longest lists were those drawn from the "Privy Council Education Lists." Some of the names thus noted are too extravagant for anything but reality—Jolly Stick, Bill Marigold, George Muzzle, William Why, Robert Gospel, Robin Scrubbam, Sarah Goldsacks, Catherine Two, Sophia Doomsday, Rosetta Dust, Sally Gimblet!

Wed. November 18th 1914

Wednesday is Anniversary Day in the Annex. Nine years ago to-day the Bargain Annex was opened for the first time. From a small unheard of department it has grown to be one of the best known bargain departments in the province. This wonderful growth has only been possible: firstly, on account of the exceptional value-giving powers and excellent service of the Annex; secondly, through your most hearty co-operation. for which we sincerely thank you. To celebrate the occasion we have prepared

A MERCHANDISE EVENT OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

MARVELLOUS FEATS OF TRAINED PIGEONS

High-flyers Which Stay up in the Air For Eighteen Hours And Even Longer

To tell the uninitiated that pigeons will fly for over eighteen hours at a stretch, without food, water, or a rest, is probably to find oneself accused of [illegible] to one's imagination. Yet such is the astonishing truth. Amongst the birds of those who make a hobby of breeding and training pigeons to fly for long periods during the [illegible] which regularly fly [illegible] are to be numbered by the thousand. Week in, week out, in the districts where high-flying—the name by which the pastime is known—is followed, pigeons leave their aviaries at the break of day, go right up into the blue almost beyond the vision of [illegible] the light fails in the evening. It is, in fact, by no means uncommon for them to keep up [illegible] their owner cannot see the birds of which he is so justly proud.

Somersaults in the Air

The variety of pigeon which flies the longest time is the Flying Tippler, and consequently it is the most popular. Other flying breeds are the Oriental, the West of England Tumbler, the Performing Tumbler, and the Roller. The two last-named perform in the air as they fly, the Tumbler vaulting and the Roller rolling. The actions of the latter are most peculiar. A Roller will stop in its flight and turn somersaults downwards in an almost perpendicular line, sometimes actually striking the ground and injuring itself.

Thousands of English working men find recreation in the sport of high-flying. The great centre of the sport is Sheffield, which is as much the headquarters of the hobby as New[illegible]

Many clubs exist throughout England and these bodies organise the sport and promote [illegible] flying competitions.

How Contests Are Conducted

The manner of conducting these contests [illegible] is as follows. A time is fixed by the club for the birds to start. This is as early as possible, [illegible] a.m. An official referee is sent to each competitor's home to take the time, and see that the conditions of the fly are properly carried out. The referee remains until the birds drop. At the liberation hour the owner allows his "kit" of birds, usually three in number, to leave their loft. The pigeons, revelling in their liberty, immediately soar aloft, and commence flying with an easy, graceful action. Although they do not usually go very far out of sight of their home, they cover quite a wide area, flying backwards and forwards and round and round.

The conditions usually are that the "kit" has to be seen by the referee once in the first two hours of the fly, and once in each subsequent hour.

Calling the Pigeons Home

When the birds show signs of coming down, the owner puts out what is known as the "droppers." This is usually a white pigeon or some other variety—a white Fantail, for instance. When this bird appears on the loft top the high-fliers see it, and if they have been properly trained they fly down to their aviary, though sometimes it takes hours to get flying pigeons to "drop." The referee records the time up to the moment at which the owner puts out the "droppers." The pigeons have all to "drop" within a prescribed area, and within a fixed length of time, or they are disqualified.

The world's record fly is eighteen hours [illegible], and there are many [illegible] whose birds have flayed [illegible] for eighteen hours.

[illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] sports in Canada [illegible] and there are no [illegible] [illegible] will, no doubt, be a sorry day for the game when Mr. [illegible] swing the big bundle to lure and entice away the amateurs. The Canadian Rugby Union, which is a strong body, controls the situation and so far the game has been managed properly.—Toronto Sunday World.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required, except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SHREWD FINANCIER WAS THIS MANAGER

Hughie Jennings' Story of the Baseball Boomer Who Knew the Value of Publicity

"In my career in minor and major leagues I have heard a million funny baseball stories," said Hughie Jennings, the famous manager of the Detroit Tigers, when asked to spin his best yarn. "The funniest of all may read like fiction, but it is fact. The man around whom the story hangs is now a prominent semi-professional manager in a large western city and has a bank roll that is the envy of many a major leaguer.

"This man reached his start as a department store clerk. While working for a small salary, he learned that the firm did not [illegible] It was the only large store in town that was not backing a fast amateur club, as an advertising dodge. The clerk was a fan. He read everything printed about baseball, inside and outside, and believed he was just the man to [illegible] for his firm. And he helped the store manager to reach the same conclusion. [illegible] press agent, so he never failed to get to the sporting editors any bit of news that would [illegible] about his club. He broke into the sport pages, [illegible] he was given an advance in salary.

"At the start he scheduled games in his home city only, but his club quickly made such a reputation that out-of-town teams were willing to [illegible] players that [illegible] by [illegible] The money [illegible] he [illegible] salary, and he decided to back a club of his own, employing his brother as traveling manager.

"If you wonder why this clerk succeeded as manager, let me relate two instances of his playerdom. He wanted to get the results of out-of-town games, but hesitated about paying telegraph or telephone tolls, so he worked a scheme to beat the companies. After each game his brother would telephone, asking for an imaginary person. Their code only utilized the initials representing the score.

"If the call was for Mr. C. A. Smith, the clerk-manager knew his team had won by a score of 3 to 1, for the first initial meant his team and the second the opposing team, the letters of the alphabet being numbered.

"He filled the grandstand one day by advertising on the sport pages a reward of $200 for a $500 diamond ring lost in the grandstand upon the occasion of the last game. Men who never attended the games invested in grandstand seats on the [illegible] of finding that diamond ring—which, of course, never had been lost."

PUGILISTS' PARENTAL AFFECTION

By the recent death of the mother of Fred Welsh, champion lightweight boxer, another instance was recalled of the strong parental affection shown by so many prominent fighters. Amid all his triumphs, Welsh's first thought was always of his mother, to whom for years he remitted half his earnings in the ring.

Packey McFarland, one of Welsh's greatest rivals, is another exemplary son in this respect. Two years ago he wished to return to England for another bout with the Cardiff champion, but his mother, who was in ill health, begged him not to go while she lived. And nothing could tempt Packey to break the promise he then made.

Jim Jeffries, after losing to Jack Johnson, begged that the news of his defeat might be kept from his mother. Johnson, himself, out of his championship winnings, bought his mother a house, and invested a sum of money to procure her an income for life.

James J. Corbett, immediately after winning his historic fight with Sullivan, cleared the mortgage on his father's home, settled other of the old couple's [illegible] and [illegible] long-desired trip to [illegible]

GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were bought—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

SLIDING TO FIRST QUITE LEGITIMATE

Big League Magnates Disagree With Ruling That Player Must Stay on His Feet

May a player slide into first base, instead of running past it. If he does, is he necessarily out? President Chivington, of the American Association says yes. He calls it an unwritten rule of baseball. The ruling by Chivington came as a result of an informal protest by Manager Friel, of St. Paul, against a ruling made by Umpire O'Brien, who called out Dixie Walker for sliding head first to the initial sack.

"There is no time gained by sliding, and in the case of first base, where the base-runner does not have to dodge a touch, the only reason for the slide is to raise a dust that will hide the play from the umpire," said Mr. Chivington.

Herrmann Disagrees

Commenting on the ruling, the Louisville Courier-Journal said:

"The statement given out by August Herrmann upholds the declaration made by this paper that a man who slides into first and beats the ball is no more out than the man who hits the ball to the fence. It is merely an unjust assumption of power by the official. President Chivington's contention that the umpires are right in calling out the player who slides into first base is ridiculous. Anybody who has run or played baseball knows that a leap when going at [illegible] will [illegible] time, and that the player who slides has a better [illegible] to beat the ball. If Mr. Chivington is consistent, why not call the player out when [illegible] [illegible] Leaving aside the question of whether the slide is advantageous, the rules are clear upon the point. Herrmann [illegible] the case plainly: 'A player is entitled to reach any base by running, [illegible] or in any other manner, so long as he remains within the [illegible] This is laid down in the rules of the game, and no umpire, president of a league or anyone else has any right to change the rules.'"

Mack Upholds Slide

Connie Mack, of the Athletics, also had something to say about the ruling. "There is a lot to be said on both sides of the slide-to-first proposition," Mack declared. "The biggest thing in its favor is the fact that it [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

As to the danger of spiking," he continued, "some players try to spike the baseman every time they slide into a bag, but clean players won't spike a man jumping into first base often enough to warrant a change in the [illegible] The danger of colliding with both players on their feet is the great one, it seems to me," said he.

ETON "ALPINE" FEAT

Boy Plants Hat on Lightning Conductor Above Buildings

High above the street, pierced by the lightning conductor on top of the Eton memorial buildings, Windsor, England, was visible a soft grey hat, a challenge and a defiance to the powers that be.

It was placed there by a boy, who had first to attack the top of the massive dome, then to surmount a number of pillars and ornamental work, and finally at a dizzy height above the street to "shin up" the lightning conductor.

How the climb—which to the ordinary man looks an utterly impossible one—was accomplished remains a mystery.

A local builder was called in to remove the hat. He engaged the services of an expert climber, who with the aid of ladders and other appliances succeeded in getting it down amid the cheers of the boys—but the daredevil boy who fixed it had no ladder for his 100 foot climb.

Heat a luminous radiator eight minutes.

WHIPPET RACING AN ENGLISH SPORT

Speedy Little Animals Very Popular in North—They Get the Very Best of Care

In England, the racing dog, or whippet, might almost be called the poor man's racehorse, for these races are particularly popular amongst the workingmen in the North and Midlands, and also, to a lesser degree, in the South. The whippet resembles a miniature greyhound; he wears a neat cloth coat and a perforated leather muzzle. This prevents him from picking up stray scraps of harmful food, which would not be good for him when training. It also prevents "doping" just before a race.

The different competitors in a race are distinguished from one another by means of different colored collars; and, in order to judge the winner, the judge has a small pit prepared in a line with the winning-post, so that, when he gets into pit, he is on a level with the dogs, and can see which first crosses the line without any difficulty.

The length of a whippet race is generally from 150 to 200 yards, and the heavier dogs are handicapped when tested against lighter competitors. Each dog is held by a man who acts as starter, and this "starting" of the whippets is in itself quite an art. The starter holds his dog by the back of the neck and the base of the tail. At the sound of the starting-pistol the man slightly raises the dog from the ground, and tosses him forward. The idea is to drop the dog so that his hind legs touch the ground first, and he can then take up his stride at once.

A good whippet will complete 200 yards in 12 seconds, or 16 yards 2 feet per second. Whippets are trained to race by means of what is technically known as the "rag," or, in other words, a piece of cloth. The animal is taught to run to the man who waves a "rag" at him, and it is in order to reach the rag-wavers that the whippets run down the racecourse at full speed.

The men with the rags stand on the far side of a line ten yards beyond the winning-post. The rag-wavers are placed thus, instead of standing at the winning-post, because the dogs then pass the post going at full speed. If the rag-wavers stood at the post, the dogs would naturally slow up before they reached them, and the race would consequently be spoiled.

The little whippet has a very good time in his master's home. He is very carefully looked after, and is often the pet of the whole family. His diet probably consists largely of bread and mutton, and he is taken out for systematic gallops after the race, and is groomed as carefully as a racehorse by his devoted owner.

TENNIS FOR LONG LIFE

Thirty Ex-champions Sat Down Together at Banquet

In point of physique and weight, Maurice E. McLoughlin is the most youthful tennis champion the United States ever had. He is only twenty-three years old, and at his best playing weight he tips the scale at 150. The [illegible] though short Beals C. Wright, the strong William A. Larned, the tall, graceful William J. Clothier, all were mature when they carried the laurels now held by McLoughlin, and all of these champions of a few years ago scaled, when playing tennis, at over 150 pounds. Wright, on one occasion, lost eight pounds in one championship match.

No stronger contrast of tennis champions was ever presented than when, with the exception of three, every champion of the United States for the past thirty-three years sat around a table to celebrate the return of the Davis Cup. If any recommendations were needed for tennis that table loudly voiced its claim. There is probably no other sport that can show such a clear roll-call of champions for a similar length of time. McLoughlin promises to be another physical advertisement for tennis. He is rugged and strong, never afraid of donning the gloves in a friendly bout and can hold his own in a number of other sports. Certainly his physique belies any hint that tennis is a game for the weakling.

CHANCE'S BIG INCOME

Some eight years ago Frank Chance was made manager of the Cubs. At that time he had a bank account of $7,000. When Charles Taft and Charles Murphy bought Hart's interest in the Chicago team they declared Chance in for 10 per cent. of the stock. He paid for it with his dividends. Chance admits that he is now worth $200,000. For looking into the lens of a moving picture camera for 25 minutes he was paid $1,000. His salary for his first season with the New York Americans was $25,000. He owns a [illegible] orange grove in California, and modestly calculates that his yearly income is about $65,000.

"You can't do anything with cheap talent," says Frank Chance, manager of the New York Americans. "You've got to pay top-notch players big salaries to keep them going. "Pape's Diapepsin" makes Sick, Sour, Gassy Stomachs surely feel fine in five minutes

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

IF CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Look, Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system all full of cold, has sore throat, stomach ache and diarrhoea. Listen, mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs" and in a few hours all the constipated waste matter, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system and you have a well and playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

YOUNGSTERS ON THE GERMAN FIRING LINE

Petrograd, Nov. 15.—(Via London)—It is regarded here as an attempt on the part of the Germans to threaten the Russian advance upon Cracow by a side flanking movement.

Military experts declare that the German cavalry operating in this district is composed mostly of troops thoroughly seasoned in the fighting in Belgium. On the other hand, an officer who has returned to Petrograd from the East Prussian front, reiterates the report that the Germans are sending whole companies of infantry formed almost exclusively of very young men, into the first battle line.

"One of the saddest features of the fighting that I witnessed," this officer said, "was the sight of these youngsters, some of them fifteen to sixteen years old, moving forward shoulder to shoulder like automatons, and being cut down like grain from the fire of our machine guns."

Continuing, the officer said he was apparent to the Russian commanders at the front, that the Germans in East Prussia were putting forth all their strength. He described East Prussia and the Russian territory adjoining it on the eastern battlefield by fire.

While the Germans are concentrating elsewhere the defence of Cracow is being provided for by two Austrian armies officered by Germans. These two armies are converging from Galicia and the Kielce region in Russian Poland, and their rear guards, according to Russian reports, are being constantly hounded by the advancing Russians.

THE KAISER IS MENDERING HIS TROOPS

Paris, Nov. 14.—The failure of the German forces to push any farther forward, after they affected a footing again on the left bank of the Yser and after they took Dixmude at so heavy a loss to them, is believed to demonstrate that their march to Dunkirk and Calais has been definitely stopped and that when the battle changes again the allies will be found well advanced.

What it cost the Germans to take Dixmude, their dead at the final assault serving as footbridges across the inundated fields, is told in one of the despatches, which declares that the attacking party lost as high as 80 per cent. of their number.

French Marines Busy.

The reports that Dixmude has been retaken, say that the task of dislodging the Germans was left to the French marines, who maintained the high traditions of their service by furious bayonet charges.

About Ypres, where the British are holding the key position with a splendid tenacity which is costing them their bravest and best men, the Germans, throwing the Prussian guard against the British succeeded in piercing the British lines in three places, but under the withering fire which swept their ranks, they could not hold their gains, and Ypres was saved.

Elsewhere on the battlefront there appears to be no material change from the Somme to the Vosges, Both Berlin and Paris report the situation favorably in the west, but neither lays claim to any material gains.

Don't argue when you are tired; you can't do it.

Don't take the workshop home with you.

Don't talk trouble before the children.

Don't think you can't be "done;" any one.

Don't think you are worse than other people, and don't think you are better; you're not.

Don't think you have a constant job; the man in the cemetery has that.

You Can Distinguish a Piano Made by Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Limited, by Its Pure, Vibrant Singing Tone

The reasons for this are well known to those who are familiar with the structure of the instrument and with the strict methods of the Heintzman & Co. factory.

The Materials

Every piece of metal with the slightest flaw, every piece of wood imperfect in its grain or not thoroughly seasoned, is rejected—it is not tried out to see if it will do—it is not even given the benefit of a doubt.

The Workmen

Each workman, too, brings to his task skill of the highest order—and that skill is still further developed and kept to the highest possible standard by the rigid discipline for which the Heintzman & Co. Factory is well known.

Its durability and continued increase in the beauty of its tone as it ages have caused all world-great artists on their visit to Canada to use this piano exclusively. . . .

RUSSIA AND SWEDEN BEST OF FRIENDS

The Star's correspondent at Copenhagen says that advices from Helsingfors state the Russians have withdrawn troops from the east and west of Flanders to join the main Russian army, indicating that Russia's fear of a Swedish invasion of Finland has vanished. Sweden is said to be much pleased over the fact that this military strength has been withdrawn from Finland.

Battle Fronts Far Apart

The checking of the Teutonic offensive in the west, as noted in official reports from the allied headquarters is regarded here as due to the fact that Germany is obliged to maintain battle fronts so far apart, as are East Prussia and the North Sea.

From east to west, and from west to east huge bodies of German troops have been alternately thrown across the intervening thousand miles to counter anything in the nature of a Germany's superiority in numbers in the other [illegible] of the [illegible]. Military observers here, however, take the view that Russia on one side and the allies on the other side, now having had time in which to more fully mobilize their forces, the effectiveness of this progress of shifting bodies from one to the other is no longer so pronounced and that any thinning of German line on either side must mean hereafter, at least a temporary assumption of the defensive on the part of the German and resumption of the offensive by the allies.

Hand Picked Flour of Germany's Army, the Prussian Guards Failed to Accomplish What They Attempted—German Army Now Checked

BRITISH WAR OFFICE STATES INVASION IS NOT IMMINENT

Defensive Works Constructed in the United Kingdom Are Only "Normal Precautions Taken by Every Maritime Power in Time of War"

London, Nov. 17.—"Regarding your question in the event of an enemy landing in the neighborhood of Eastbourne, I am commanded by the Army Council to inform you that there is nothing in the present situation which would warrant the assumption that invasion is probable or imminent and that the various defensive works constructed in the United Kingdom are only the normal precautions taken by every maritime power in the time of war."

Such is the answer of the War Office to talk of invasion which has been current lately. The extract quoted above is taken from a letter received from the War Office by a civilian who had asked for instructions in the event of an attack upon England. It will bring comfort to the few people who have been alarmed by the desperate efforts of the Germans to reach Calais and by the great announcement of their intentions to make England the next object of attack.

Reliance on the Fleet

Generally, however, the statement does not come as a surprise. In permitting the public to entertain entirely erroneous impressions of the impregnability of Antwerp, the military authorities blundered. It would have been much better to have prepared the people for that loss. When Ostend also fell into Prussian hands, the press, as a whole, took the bit between its teeth, and London newspapers were full of [illegible], we think with the definite purpose of preparing the public with every possible emergency.

There was talk of raids on the English coast, of huge German guns which would whirl projectiles half way across the channel, of unparalleled activity in the construction of Zeppelins which were to attack the British fleet and later Great Britain.

The result of the "invasion" articles was to create some measure of alarm, though from the Canadian letters we have received, we believe that there was much more concern in the Dominion than there was in the United Kingdom. Englishmen have too great confidence in their fleet to entertain serious thoughts of invasion for any protracted period. That fleet still commands the seas. The Kaiser must smash it before he can attempt serious operations against the British coast. Anxiety, too, was early set at rest by the realization that Germany was deliberately attempting by press propaganda to create panic in the British Isles. Soon the tide turned and there was some criticism of English papers for "assisting" the Germans in their "scare" campaign.

Now London is tranquil. The first great attempt of the enemy to take Calais has failed. There is reason to believe that they will meet with no greater success in a second effort, but it is realized that men and ever more men must be thrown into France to strengthen the allies, and recruiting is going on with renewed activity. By the spring Britain will be ready to throw a million men into the field. Then the Kaiser will find what it means to challenge half the world.

HOW 3,000 GERMANS WERE EXTERMINATED IN AN HOUR

London, Nov. 17.—8 a.m.—All reports from the scene of fighting in Northern France indicate that the weather conditions for the past few days have been terrible. Heavy rain, falling continuously for 36 hours, has turned all the roads into quagmires, while the trenches are flooded and the lowlands everywhere are largely covered by water.

Everything possible is being done to make the troops comfortable, to prevent their being flooded out of the trenches, and to avoid cave-ins. The trenches are being shored and braced and the bottoms covered with brush and straw. Meanwhile the artillery battles continue.

The following story of the wiping out of 3,000 Germans comes from a wounded soldier from the Ypres front:

"The fighting at Ypres was terrible in violence. For forty hours we fought foot to foot with the enemy, employing every resource of infantry and artillery.

"On Sunday a regiment of 3,000 Germans attacked our positions. At a distance of 800 yards our artillery opened a terrible fire and mowed them down. They recoiled, but reformed and returned. This time they reached the hundred-yard mark and again re-coiled and re-formed. With only a third of their original strength they advanced again. Our officers ordered us to hold our fire and let them advance. At 20 yards the order came to 'Let them have it.' We did and the German regiment ceased to exist. In less than an hour 3,000 men had been exterminated."

DOUBLE INCOME TAX AS RESULT OF WAR

London, Nov. 17.— Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-day that the income tax had been doubled to meet war expenditures.

In announcing that the doubling of the tax has been necessary Lloyd George declared there had been a loss of revenue of $[illegible] directly due to the war.

"Unless some of this is raised by taxing heavily there will be a serious departure from our honored traditions," he declared.

"The Chancellor's statement of the financial conditions declared there was a deficiency over the estimate for the year of $1,[illegible],750,000.

"It will be necessarily to find $678,-[illegible] to meet this deficiency and the loss in revenue," he declared.

The present British income tax varies from 2 3-4 per cent. to [illegible] 1-3 per cent., depending upon the size of the income. Only incomes below $800 a year are exempt.

Great Britain raised [illegible] a year by the tax, which is now to be doubled to meet war expenses.

German Foe Fails To Check Floods In France

Trenches are Filled With Water—Paris Official Statement Contains News of Slow but Certain Progress by the Allies All Along the Extended Battle-Front

PARIS, NOV. 17.—THERE WAS GIVEN OUT IN PARIS THIS AFTERNOON THE FOLLOWING OFFICIAL COMMUNICATION :—

FROM NIEUPORT TO DIXMUDE AND IN THE REGION OF YPRES, THE CANNONADING HAS BEEN RESUMED WITH GREATER VIOLENCE THAN IN THE PRECEDING DAYS. ON THE CANAL, TO THE SOUTH OF DIXMUDE, THE ACTION OF OUR ARTILLERY CHECKED THE WORK THAT THE GERMANS WERE ENDEAVORING TO CARRY OUT, TO KEEP DOWN THE INUNDATIONS. THE ENEMY WAS COMPELLED TO EVACUATE A PORTION OF HIS TRENCHES, WHICH HAD BEEN FILLED BY WATER.

TWO ATTACKS OF GERMAN INFANTRY, ONE TO THE SOUTH OF BIXSCHOOTE AND THE OTHER TO THE SOUTH OF YPRES, RESULTED IN FAILURE. ON OUR SIDE, WE HAVE MADE PROGRESS BETWEEN BIXSCHOOTE AND THE CANAL.

BETWEEN ARMENTIERES AND LA BASSEE, THERE HAS BEEN AN ARTILLERY DUEL, CONDUCTED WITH GREAT SPIRIT.

ON THE AISNE, CERTAIN GERMAN DETACHMENTS WHICH ENDEAVORED TO CROSS THE RIVER IN THE VICINITY OF VAILLY, WERE EITHER DRIVEN BACK OR DESTROYED.

ON OUR POSITIONS ON THE RIGHT BANK OF THE AISNE, UP STREAM FROM VAILLY, THERE HAS BEEN VIOLENT CANNONADING. THIS APPLIES ALSO TO THE RHEIMS REGION, AND SEVERAL SHELLS HAVE FALLEN ON THE CITY OF RHEIMS.

IN THE ARGONNE THERE HAVE NOT BEEN ANY INFANTRY ENGAGEMENTS. WE BLEW UP WITH MINES A CERTAIN NUMBER OF GERMAN TRENCHES. ON THE HEIGHTS OF THE MEUSE, TO THE SOUTH OF VERDUN, WE HAVE MADE ADVANCES AT SEVERAL POINTS.

IN THE REGION OF ST. MIHIEL, WE HAVE TAKEN POSSESSION OF THE FIRST HOUSES OF THE VILLAGE OF CHAUVONCOURT. THESE HOUSES SERVED AS BARRACKS FOR THE ST. MIHIEL GARRISON. THIS VILLAGE OF CHAUVONCOURT IS THE ONLY POINT OF SUPPORT STILL HELD BY THE GERMANS ON THE LEFT BANK OF THE RIVER MEUSE IN THIS LOCALITY.

ON THE REST OF THE FRONT THERE HAS BEEN NOTHING OF IMPORTANCE TO REPORT.

FALL OF CRACOW EXPECTED HOURLY

A Venice despatch to The Morning Post says:

"The fall of Cracow is expected at any moment. The city is invested on the north, and parts are ablaze. The inhabitants are in flight. The Russian forces have made a very rapid advance and reached Cracow sooner than it was expected.

"For the Russians the fall of Cracow means the key to the industries of Silesia, striking a vital economic blow at Germany."

London, Nov. 17.—The Germans are not satisfied yet that they cannot push on to Calais and signs of a new attempt to cross the Yser were reported from Amsterdam to-day. This report said that the weather had improved.

ARRESTED HERE ON CHARGE OF TRYING TO KILL HIS SON

Yesterday evening a man living on Rubidge Street, South, was arrested on a charge of attempting to shoot his son. It seems that the prisoner has been drinking of late and on coming home, so report says, had a disagreement with his son. A 44 calibre rifle was used. Bullet holes were shot through the walls. Officers Black and Corvette made the arrest. It is understood that this prisoner whose actions seem to have been actuated by the result of booze will appear at this morning's session of the police court for preliminary hearing. It would seem that King Alcohol is the one who ordered the whole trouble.

The son, it might be said, escaped absolutely unscratched.

SWISS ARMY IS "INSULTED"; DENY, HOTLY, PACT WITH KAISER

Berne, Nov. 17.—Reported statement appearing in the Italian press that Switzerland had entered into a secret convention with Austria and Germany binding itself to support with her army an invasion of Northern Italy and, to permit an Austro-German force to pass through Switzerland in the event of Italy abandoning her neutrality in favor of the Triple Entente, has brought forth a strong protest from the Swiss Government. The existence of any such convention is denied, and it is declared that the [illegible] are an insult to Switzerland and her army.

CRUISER BERLIN HAS INTERNED AT TRONDHIEIM

Christiania, Nov. 17.—The German cruiser Berlin was interned at Trondhjeim to-day, it was officially announced here.

The Berlin was reported off Trondhjeim in earlier despatches today, and the belief was then expressed in the public that she was acting as a parent ship to a flotilla of submarines reported off the Lofoden Islands. The only explanation for her interning is that she was probably doing scout duty and was cornered by British ships.

The Berlin is a light cruiser of the Bremen and Leipzig type of 3,200 tons. She carries ten 4.1 inch guns, ten 1-pounders, four machine guns, and two torpedo tubes. She has a speed of 23 knots.

DISTINGUISHED PRUSSIAN CORPS WILL STAY AT YPRES AS YET KNOWN

German Guards, Hand-Picked Soldiers, and Brave While They Have Breath Left, Failed to Do What Had Previously Proved Too Much for Infantry of Line

London, Nov. 17.—Colonel E. D. Swinton, the official observer at the British headquarters, gives today a further chapter in his narrative of operations at the front, bringing up his account to November 18. His latest report describes the fierce attack of the Prussian Guards on the British lines in the neighborhood of Ypres.

Colonel Swinton's report, issued through the official press bureau, follows:

The diminution in the force of the German rush to the west has not lasted long. The section of the front to the north of our forces was the first to meet the recrudescence of violence, in the shape of an attack in the neighborhood of Dixmude and Bixschoote.

Hard Fighting For a Week.

Our turn came next. After eight days of comparative relaxation we were under constant pressure from Tuesday, November 3, to Tuesday the 10th. The next day saw a repetition of the great attempt of the Germans to push through our lines to the French coast.

What was realized might happen, did happen. In spite of the immense loss suffered by the enemy during the five days attack against Ypres, which lasted from October 29 to the 2nd of this month, the cessation of their more violent efforts on the latter day did not signalize the abandonment of the whole project, but merely the temporary relinquishment of the main offensive until fresh troops had been massed to carry on what was proving to be a costly and difficult operation.

Repeated "Local" Attacks.

Meanwhile the interval was employed in endeavoring to wear out the Allies by repeated local attacks of varying force and to shatter them by a prolonged and concentrated bombardment. By the 11th, therefore it seems that they considered they had attained both objects, for on that day they recommenced the desperate battle for the possession of Ypres and its neighborhood.

Though the struggle has not yet come to an end, this much can be said; "The Germans have gained some ground, but they have not captured Ypres."

In repulsing the enemy so far, we have suffered heavy casualties, but battles of this fierce and prolonged nature cannot be but costly to both sides. We have the satisfaction of knowing that we have foiled the enemy in what appears to be at present his main object in the western theatre of operations, and have inflicted immensely greater losses on him than those we have suffered ourselves.

GENERAL DE WET, REBEL, SOUTH AFRICA WOUNDED IN THE HEAD

London, Nov. 17.—A Pretoria despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company states that General Christian Rudolf De Wet, who headed the recent rebellion in the Orange Free State, and the Western Transvaal, has been wounded in the head. De Wet's followers are reported as much dejected.

It is said that they are poorly armed and lack ammunition.

Gen. De Wet established for himself during the South African war the reputation of being the ideal guerilla chieftain. For years he was the despair of the British forces, and against him was launched column after column of mobile troops in the hope of running him down. To the end he escaped capture. After British rule had been established in the Orange Free Colony he was elected a member of the Legislative Assembly of the Orange Colony for Wedsfort, and from 1907 until the recent uprising held office under the British Crown as Minister for Agriculture.

General De Wet is just sixty years old. A Boer farmer by birth and upbringing, he took part when still a young man in the defeat of the British at Majuba Hill in 1881. He was a man of influence in the Orange Free State, and for many years was a member of its Legislature. It was not however, until the outbreak of the South African war that he had the opportunity of displaying the peculiar military ability which made him famous.

ASQUITH EXPLAINS NORTH SEA CLOSING

London, Nov. 17.—Premier Asquith stated in the House of Commons today that the British Government had decided to declare the whole of the North Sea to be in the military area.

All subjects of the enemy found on neutral vessels, the Prime Minister also said, would be liable to detention as prisoners of war.

Mr. Asquith also announced that oil and copper would be declared contraband of war.

Referring to mines, Premier Asquith said the Germans had resorted to indiscriminate mine-laying in the North Sea outside of territorial limits and along trade routes without regard to peaceful shipping, and without warning. The purpose clearly was the furtherance of no definite military operations, but to endanger British trade. These mines unquestionably had been laid by fishing vessels disguised [illegible].

ROYAL YACHTSMEN

Apropos of King George's success as a yachtsman, it is interesting to note that yachting in bygone times owed much to English sovereigns, from Queen Elizabeth, who had a fine pleasure schooner built at Cowes, to William IV., who founded the Royal Yacht Squadron; but the keenest of all Royal yachtsmen was Charles II. In all, the Merry Monarch owned fourteen yachts, ranging from twenty-five to 166 tons, and one of them, the "Jamie," was designed by the King himself and built at Lambeth under his supervision. Charles and his brother James generally steered their yachts themselves, and Evelyn, in his diary for October 1st, 1661, describes a sailing match between the Royal brothers—the first contest of the kind in British waters of which we have any record.

It is not difficult to imagine Chance raising the skin of some player in this instance.

DUELLING DAYS

Young Bloods Practised With Long-Barrelled Pistols

By the end of the seventeenth century the pistol had come fairly into vogue as a duellist's weapon in England, and from that time forward pistol duels were frequent—more frequent than those with the sword. Gunmakers devoted their best workmanship to duelling pistols, and at duelling range, say up to twenty paces, these weapons were as near perfection as skill could make them. The latter-day pistol had a ten-inch barrel, and carried a ball of 48 to the pound. Only constant practice would make a good shot, and a very high standard of marksmanship was set for the man who aspired to be considered an expert with the pistol. When he could hit twelve wafers at fourteen yards, and do it within six minutes, loading his pistol himself between shots, he might consider himself proficient; and it will be borne in mind that the muzzle-loading pistol took several seconds to properly charge.

Proficiency, of course, was not everything. It was quite as daunting to face a pistol at twelve yards as to face the sword at close quarters, and no proficiency at wafers would atone for nervousness on the ground. One ardent practitioner schooled himself with a contrivance of his own invention. He had the life-size figure of a man with a bracketed hand in which a pistol could be held at the "present," and by means of a cord from the trigger of the pistol in the dummy's grasp to his own belt, he discharged the weapon himself as he fired his own pistol, by slightly drawing back.

Great stress was laid on the importance of aiming at a small object. "Mark well one of the gilt buttons on his coat; a person can never fire with accuracy unless he aim at some small object." Which explains why the experienced duellist "went out" dressed entirely in black, that his person might offer no such mark as the gilt button of an older day.

Being in position, the men each held his arm well in to the side and raised his pistol to the proper level, keeping the head straight, the eyes turned as much to the right as possible, and the pistol directed steadily towards the small object—that gilt button, if the adversary were so obliging to wear such. "Move only the forefinger, and that with just sufficient force to discharge the pistol," was a rule supposed to be carefully observed.

Girl Climbs Church Spire

Miss Dorothy Willink, daughter of Canon Willink, rector of St. Martin's Church, Birmingham, climbed to the top of the church spire, 200 feet high, and scratched her name on the cap to which the weathercock is fixed. She climbed as far as possible by the steps inside the church, and ended the journey on the steeplejack's ladders, the spire being at present under repair.

AN ECCENTRIC PLAYER

Recruit Catcher Had Queer Ideas and Had Trouble With Trunk

Most ball players have peculiarities of one kind or another. But it remained for a player named Evans, a [illegible] Cub catcher recruit, to have a number of them. On a spring training trip several years ago he had the boys wondering what he would do next. Evans was a confirmed pipe smoker. It was seldom out of his mouth. When the other men would be rehearsing on the ball field Evans would be sitting on the bench puffing at his pipe. One day Frank Chance, becoming irritated, ordered him to get behind the plate during batting practice.

The recruit lazily donned his shin-guards and chest-protector. Then, keeping his short black pipe between his teeth, he caught for nearly fifteen minutes, puffing away in a most contented manner.

At Vicksburg, Miss., one day some of the Cubs noticed Evans dig up a little dirt near the plate, place something carefully in the hole and cover it up with exceeding care. He repeated this trick at every stop. Finally they discovered it was a signet ring. He chose this method of protecting it against loss or injury.

He also carried an old trunk along on the trip, bearing a large sign. The motto was, "Handle with care." In this he had nearly five quarts of beef, iron and wine for the purpose of building up his system. He had nearly as much dope as Trainer Semmons had for the entire team. This extract he took religiously three times a day.

One trip his trunk was badly smashed by the baggageman and several of the bottles broken. It was exceedingly annoying but Evans insisted on lugging the affair along until Secretary Charley Williams objected.

"The railroads absolutely refuse to accept that trunk," said Williams.

So Evans had to purchase another. On this he placed a new sign. It read, "Handle with care, you smashed my last one."

GOLF HAS MANY THRILLS

Making a Hole in One Stroke Enough to Make Any Player Excited

It has been said that golf is not lively or exciting; that it presents few opportunities for either individuals or outsiders to enthuse; that it is too quiet, etc. While there are those ardent devotees of driver and cleek willing to admit that their favorite diversion is not wildly exciting; that opportunities rarely occur for partisan crowds to display their feelings, it is also claimed that golf unquestionably has its thrills.

For those having once experienced the sensation of making a hole in 1 it is needless to attempt to describe the feeling of exhilaration experienced by the lucky player as he sees his ball disappear in the cup. Many holes have been made in a single stroke that have always been more or less doubtful. Players have played over rising ground to blind greens and after searching for a considerable length of time have at last found "a ball" in the hole. On such occasions there is always an element of uncertainty.

Furthermore, jokes have been played on unsuspecting golfers, probably the most cruel one being that at the expense of a fat man and woman at a match several years ago. As a passerby stood near one of the greens of the course in question he noticed two balls, one after the other, land on the green in front of him. They had evidently come from the tee, which could not be seen from the green. Scarcely had the balls come to rest ere a couple of boys dashed from behind a clump of bushes, picked up the balls, dropped them in the hole, and scampered away as quickly as they had come. In a few moments the pair unsuspectingly came to the green and began looking for the balls. Finally the man casually beckoned his companion to see what he saw.

"Great Scott!" he shouted. "We have both holed out in one. Did you ever see anything like that?" Then they proceeded to rush to the club house to tell the wonderful tale, which undoubtedly they are still relating.

A Nautical Innovation

A novel feature of the Royal Holland Lloyd liner "Gelria" is the manner in which the name of the liner is displayed, either when passing stations or other ships or when lying in crowded harbors, says "Electricity."

The boat is fitted between the two funnels with an electric sign lantern 22 feet long by 5 feet deep, made of galvanized iron and bearing angles. The letters are fixed on both sides, and are colored red on the port side and green on the starboard, with white enamelled lettering for use in the daytime. The lettering is illuminated by lamps aggregating 2,000 candle power.

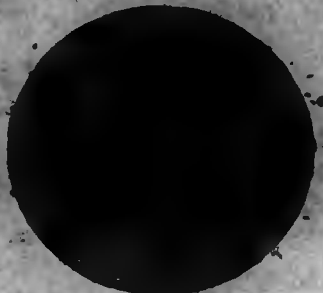
There's No Place in Life For a Broken Heart

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.



Winifred Black

THERE is no such thing as a broken heart. It's a broken mind under the wrong name. Melancholia is a disease of the brain—it has nothing whatever to do with the heart."

So declares Dr. W. A. Evans—the man who tells us all whether to sleep on the porch when the weather's below zero or not, and why breakfast food is not always the only thing you need to keep you alive. A thousand thanks, Dr. Evans—we're all obliged to you—again.

Broken hearts are entirely out of the fashion—and I'm glad of it. I shall never forget the first time I ever met any one with a "broken heart."

I was a young person of some sixteen summers—and winters—hard winters at that, in the part of the country where I lived then. You had to put a copper cent on the window pane to see out most mornings from December to the middle of March. And any one who wore gloves instead of mittens after nightfall was rather apt to come home with frost-bitten fingers.

I had heard about the woman with the broken heart—her sweetheart had deserted her for another girl—and the woman with the broken heart never smiled again.

Heart-Break a Distinction.

We were all crazy to see her. And when I heard that she was coming to visit right in the family I felt as if Garibaldi, or Gen. Funston, or Florence Nightingale, or any one else distinguished and "different," had bought a ticket to our town, and was going to sleep in the best bedroom, and look out from behind the best blue curtains of that bedroom's windows.

I expected—I don't know what—something better, and satirical, and heart broken and wildly emotional—all hidden under a strange calm—with just a flash of the eye, now and then, to show the torment of the troubled soul. A Lord Byron in petticoats—or something like it.

When the woman with the broken heart came—she proved to be at least thirty-five. She had a very long nose, a very short chin, not any too much thin cheek, faded hair, and a pair of eyes that couldn't have flashed to save the life of the owner of them.

Four thirty—they say tears are bad for the eyes. And she had shed enough of them—and more than enough.

For a day or two I was rather interesting—and then I slowly woke to the astonishment that the woman with the broken heart was just a selfish, peevish, emotional, unreasonable, silly old maid. Her "broken heart" saved her from hard work. Who wants to ask a Broken Hearted One to make up a bed, or stir the preserve kettle?

She was a frightful bore—a kind of funny Niobe, all tears, and all little selfish ways of self-pity and self-petting. I have never cared for people with broken hearts since.

Now, if that woman lived today, we'd either laugh her out of her ridiculously prolonged grief, or we'd put her somewhere in a sanitarium and have her treated for a broken brain, and see if it wouldn't help her broken heart. And quite right it would be, too.

There is no time, no place, no room in this world for a "broken heart." No heart that is worth bothering over stays broken very long. There isn't time.

Selfishness has gone out of the fashion, too, and so has cowardice, and lazy self-indulgence in grief. Courage is the mode today, and a brave and gallant mode it is.

I met a woman the other day whose husband turned her out of her own home because he fell in love with a silly little girl.

The woman had given up a great deal for her husband and she had spent some of the best years of her life with him—trying to make a man of him. [illegible] When it all came upon her how foolish and ill-spent those years had been—it nearly killed her—for a little while.

Today's Better Fashion.

If she had been an old-fashioned woman, she would have gone somewhere into the country and lived with her children on the pittance the man who had promised to love, cherish and protect her would let grudgingly—and she would have worn a widow's bonnet and kept a widow's miserable heart.

This is a different woman—and she does nothing of the sort. She gathers her friends around her, takes her children by her side, and sets her face, with courage and with resolution, to the East, where the sun is rising. Never once has she had either time or wish to look back to the West, where her past, [illegible], has gone out.

I saw her when she was first [illegible] by the hand she loved and I thought that she would die.

Yesterday when I saw her in the street, she looked stronger and happier and younger and more full of interest in life than she has looked for years. Her "broken heart" has healed—for her brain did not break.

She isn't such a romantic figure as she might have been if this sort of thing had happened [illegible] twenty years ago, when broken hearts were fashionable. But, dear me, she's useful and worth while—and that's something much better than being "broken hearted."

I'm for the new fashion. I'm for it with every drop of blood in my heart. Here's to you, Dr. Evans, for telling us the truth. You're absolutely right when you say it.

A broken heart isn't a broken heart at all; it's a broken brain. How much it helps—when you call things by the right name.

REPOSE IS SECRET OF ART

Eleanor Brent in "Everywoman."

Eleanor Brent Tells How She Acquired Calmness

By ELEANOR AMES

"WHENEVER a girl asks me if I would advise her to go on the stage," chatted Miss Brent on the cool porch of her summer home, "I always take both her hands in mine and, Yankee-like, answer her question by asking another:

"'How are your nerves, my dear? No, not your nerve, but your nerves?'

"And the girl is always surprised, for it is the last thing in the world that she expected me to ask her about, and yet, it is the most important of all the qualifications the stage demands.

"I did not know this when I accepted my first part, but six months of travelling taught me. At the beginning of the second six months I faced a battle with myself. It was the battle of success against my nerves—I would have to conquer them or they would conquer me. So I set about conquering them as calmly as I could.

"No matter what happened I would not let it bother me. Every hardship and seeming disaster I smoothed by sleep into a little annoyance. And then I made the personal discovery that occurrences that loom like huge disasters to a nervous person are to the calm person just little annoyances. I am a self-educated woman in the art of calmness.

"I paid the price of what little success I have won by taking care of my health, and health on the stage means more than ordinary good health. It means health plus nerves that never know weariness and are always in repose.

"Repose is the secret of the art of acting. To appear to do the most difficult of things easily is the height of any art, and the secret of ease is repose. And repose, I have found, is simply the outer reflection of inner calmness and good nerveless health."

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

No. 129

A Woman's Silence.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

MY mother-in-law was packed off to bed after her fit of hysterics and her "fainting fit," and Mary and I went home in terrible silence. That it would be continued for days I knew very well. I did, however, hate this uncertain pall of silence.

When a woman is absolutely silent you may depend upon it there are terrible forces at work. And you may be sure of their nature. She may be considering murder or apology, a grievance or a feeling of guilt, but, if she stays absolutely silent, you may rest assured she's taking a tantalizing delight in your discomfiture. It's like having a woman stare fixedly at your feet in a trolley car. You don't know why, and you're sure there's a reason, wherefore it bothers you a lot.

A girl once told me a recipe an old woman had given her to squelch a masher.

"Stare at his feet, dearie, for all you're worth," the old woman had said, "and pretty soon he'll lose his poise and begin to fidget, and as soon as he does you have him. Keep him uncomfortable and mystified, and he won't bother you."

I endured Mary's silence as long as I could. We climbed in silence to our apartment, and I switched on the lights in the library. And, somehow, as I did so, I had a hopeless married feeling—a feeling of [illegible] dealing of the commonplace.

Was there, after all, any romance in marriage? Did it ever linger? Wasn't it imbued with undue sentimentality by novelists and women, who saw in it their sole protection? The morality of a nation depends, of course, upon its marriage laws, but doesn't the bitter monotony of petty detail in domestic life drive many a man into the hunt for adventure?

There in my library lay my check book and Mary's fancy work, and there the evening paper. A sickening feeling of revolt shuddered its way the length of my spine. I wanted, somehow, to get away from it all—from this eternal bickering over money—away from the daily worry of making one dollar do the work of two—away from the eternal clash of sex.

Viewpoints—there was where Mary and I eternally [illegible] apart. We were finding the everlasting problem which must confront every two people of opposite sex who take up their abode together under the same roof, the psychology of sex. Here were we—two people—brought up quite differently, bound together in matrimony through an accident of sex, and forced to adjust our lives to the approval of each other. Every married pair soon realizes they were brought up with slightly or widely divergent ideas, ambitions and points of view.

In every home there is a great, big, painful problem to be worked out, and whether it is hidden or not, boys and girls are not sufficiently similar to mix much better than oil and water when they mate at maturity. They may hold it decently hidden even from their own children—or they may not. But the problem's there, and will be there until boys and girls climb the high road to maturity shoulder to shoulder and begin the inevitable problem of adjustment at an early age.

Something of all this flashed through my mind as I stared at my wife, her lips set in a hard, red line, and two feverish spots of crimson in her cheeks. Mary is beautiful—there's no denying it—but it's a wilful, spoiled sort of beauty, a little insolent about the eyes. A woman whose sole claim to admiration lies in her beauty inevitably grows arrogant or haughty. She's bound to be spoiled. I saw that my wife was, too.

"Well," I flung out suddenly, unable to bear the silence any longer. "I insulted your mother, I suppose. Why don't you say something?"

Mary flung back her head with the gesture of an empress and left the room.

Strange SUPERSTITIONS About ANIMALS

One of the superstitions prevalent from age to age among the common people is that the human body weighs up more after a meal than before. If there were any foundation of fact in this idea no human being could ever get fat.

In almost every country in Europe there is a current belief that the presence of crickets in a house is a fortunate omen, and that the singing of the crickets at night betokens good food for the next day.

French housemaids have a pet superstition that it is unlucky to kill a "money-spinner," i. e., spider, and therefore spare many webs in situations where they can be left without suspicion of negligence.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why an Excess of Sugar May Not Mean Diabetes

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

THINGS, says the poet, sweet to taste prove in digestion sour. This melodious dictum has its proof in "diabetes," that great and illy understood disorder. This affection heaps such an excess of sugar in the cataracts of the blood stream that the kidneys are not endowed with the capacity or strength to keep the sweet stuff from passing forth.

Thus, there has arisen a fallacious understanding that this sugar disease is a kidney distemper. Nothing could be more absurd. You may as well consider childbirth a disease of the mind.

Thus it comes about that a craving for sugars and spice and sweets which are nice are anathema to the "diabetic." These words may rob the living bees, and, therefore, leave them honeyless, but sweets are bitter substances to those very bones who long most for them. If you, by an analysis of the waste fluids, are told that you have diabetes, then "sweets to the sweet farewell!"

Yet, despair not, for there are many disorders, actually not diabetes, which throw out lots of sugar into the blood and into the kidney vessels. "Goitre," or a large thyroid, is one of them.

Infections of the liver and affections of the medulla oblongata—the tail of the brain—also cause either a diminished destruction of sugar by your muscles and flesh, or an increased outpouring of sugar into the blood.

The perverted grinding up and structural use of starches, sugars and similar "carbohydrates" engenders the real and the pseudo-sugar complaints. An analogous distorted absorption of fats and heavy foods—called "proteins" or "egg white"—results in a formation of [illegible] acetic and butter vinegars and similar poisonous acids in the sterile canals.

Diet more surely than drugs determines the trend of sugar maladies. The victim of these ailments is neither killed nor does he suffer more than the annoyance of almost starvation and sweets.

A new remedy for diabetes has just been tried by Dr. Marcel Labbe. It consists of a diet of dried vegetables. To aid his treatment the doctor prescribes 10 ounces of dried vegetables with fresh eggs, and five ounces of buttered albumen of bread with a small quantity of fresh vegetables and wine.

Society Is in Training For the Smaller Waist

Lord Roberts of Kandahar

Emperor William of Germany is said once to have characterized Lord Roberts of Kandahar as the greatest soldier of his time. He was too old for leadership when the greatest of wars came, but ample was the military glory he earned, and his rewards included not only titles, decorations and emoluments, but the affection of the British army, and the respect of all his race. Chairman of the imperial defense committee since 1905, last week he crossed to France for the purpose of seeing at the front the contingent from India, where a large part of his life was passed and a in considerable measure his fighting record made. The slight information at hand is to the effect that he contracted a chill, and pneumonia developed with quickly fatal result. Great Britain will venerate him as its most distinguished soldier since the Duke of Wellington.

Frederick S. Roberts was of Irish extraction, his father, Gen. Abraham Roberts, being from Waterford, and stationed in India when in 1832 the son was born at Cawnpore. Naturally the boy was prepared for a military career, and he was a subaltern officer when the terrible mutiny of the Sepoys occurred. He was with Sir Colin Campbell at the relief of Lucknow, and participated with heroism in many of the fierce encounters of the period, winning promotions and honors for his gallantry. His rise was rapid, and his fame was increased by his successful campaigns in Afghanistan.

Most of Lord Robert's active service was in the Orient, he personally described it in his "Forty-One Years in India," but he increased the lustre of his name by his efficiency as commander-in-chief in the war in South Africa with the Boers. He was commander-in-chief of the entire British army from 1901 to 1904. Lord Roberts is credited with having possessed every essential of the successful military leader and strategist. He was in the full sense and typically a soldier. Britain will mourn for "dear old Bobs."

FIRE AND WATER DESTROY GERMANS

Paris, Nov. 16.—In trenches filled with water and swept by rain and snow driven by a gale from the sea, the allied and German armies continue their struggle for possession of the line leading to the coast cities of Dunkirk and Calais.

Heavy artillery fire has marked the fighting for the past twenty-four hours it was stated at the War Office today, weather conditions preventing successful work by infantry. The Germans are now struggling to regain a foothold on the left bank of the Yser.

The diminishing intensity of the German assaults in Flanders is due to some extend to the weather conditions mentioned. The flooded section is increasing in area as a result of the continuance of heavy rain, and the country between Nieuport and Dixmude is a vast swamp in which guns and ammunition wagons abandoned by the Germans lie embedded and in which float countless corpses. The Germans have been washed out of their trenches in several places, says an eye-witness who has just returned from the front, but they continue to send an occasional shell to the French trenches.

DIXMUDE TO ARRAS NEXT.

It is not probable that the Germans will make further attempts in this section of the front, but a fierce effort is to be expected from Dixmude to Arras as soon as the German troops have recovered from their tremendous exertions of last week and new men can be brought up to fill the gaps in the ranks.

The fate of the war depends now, says Col. Feyler, an eminent Swiss military writer, essentially, on the reserves of men that the armies are able to bring up, and in this respect, according to military opinion here, Germany appears to be in a state of inferiority.

Not only does the Russian offensive prevent Germany from transferring men from the eastern to the western front, they point out, but troops that are now being instructed in the interior will necessarily be sent against the Russians.

THOUSAND MILES FROM FRONT.

It is also pointed out that Germany has to operate on fronts totalling nearly 1,000 miles with twenty-five active army corps, while the allies have at their disposal twenty-nine army corps for a line less than half as long. Thus from the point of view of available troops, it is argued, the comparison is unfavorable to the Germans.

So far as equipment is concerned, the infantry on both sides are equally well supplied. At the beginning the Germans were much better off with quick-firers, but the allies have now caught up by intensive production in the arms factories. In the artillery the allies are said to have the advantage as far as light pieces are concerned, but the German heavy artillery is incontestably superior. They are not likely to retain that superiority long, however, since both the French and the British arsenals are beginning to deliver big guns and the allies have plenty of trained men to serve them, irrespective of the Japanese gunners, whose early arrival at Marseilles is announced by rumor.

Reports here declare that the forces about Dixmude are being constantly reinforced. The town is a wreck, however, and the advantage of holding is declared to be slight. The fighting has now swung away from Ypres, which has not been bombarded during the last two days. The heaviest fighting in this section has been six miles from Ypres. The battle in the wooded section south of Bixschoote and about Ypres has been terrific. A wood south of Bixschoote was taken by the allies yesterday, but the losses in the attack were extremely heavy.

The woods north of Ypres cleared by the British are full of German dead. The fighting there was with the bayonet in hand-to-hand encounters, the Germans holding their positions with the greatest bravery and determination, until practically all were killed or wounded.

The condition of the Yser is a source of constant menace to both armies, owing to the danger of an epidemic [illegible]. The fighting which resulted in the driving of the Germans from the left bank had again filled the canal with bodies of men and horses. Germans who were captured declared they literally crossed upon bridges of their own men and horses.

ACTORS RISK LIVES BEFORE THE CAMERA

Hair-raising Tricks Performed to Make Moving Pictures Really Sensational

Each big film-producing company includes amongst its artists a number of nerve-hardened players who are specially engaged to take huge risks in carrying out sensational exploits which add realism to spectacular moving pictures.

These men are mostly retired acrobats and circus riders. One of the most risky and consequently best paid occupations in the "movie" world is that pursued by a number of men who specialise in falling off galloping horses in spectacular Indian or war films. These artistes attempt feats that even the most hardened rough-rider would hesitate to perform.

Throwing themselves from the saddle when galloping in the midst of a horde of riders, they will lay perfectly motionless on the ground, although running a terrible risk of being trampled on by the hoofs of the other charging animals. Another well-known actor, who, in addition to possessing nerve and athletic skill, has his powers of timing well developed, earns a good deal of money through a sensational drop from an express train.

He utilises this performance in several ways. Sometimes he poses as an escaped convict who endeavors to escape the clutches of the law by a daring jump from an express. On other occasions he indulges in a struggle with another actor on the roof of a moving car, eventually being flung off the train into space.

The manner in which this player accomplishes with safety this daring leap is to fall into a lake that runs at the side of the railway track, for the train on which he does this trick always travels over the same piece of line.

A favorite sensational incident in connection with dramatic films is the falling of a vehicle—generally a motor car—over a precipice. Many believe that a dummy figure sits at the wheel of the car when it plunges into space. This is not the case, however, for a real actor usually does remain in the vehicle when it leaves terra firma. Quite a number of daring actors are capable of performing this feat without serious injury to themselves. They actually fall over a fairly steep cliff in a car, but just before it crashes to the ground they leap clear into a patch of sand to safety. The motor-car is invariably smashed up.

One film-producing company employs an artiste solely for his ability to leap extraordinary distances sideways from a horse's back.

When traveling on horseback over a narrow bridge, he gives a violent sideward spring, which carries him over the parapet of the bridge down to the stream below. This plucky actor has few rivals in the portrayal of this hair-raising deed, for should his spring not be well-judged he could easily sustain some serious injury by crashing up against the masonry of the bridge. This is a favorite trick of J. P. McGowan, who, by the way, used to be a dispatch rider for Lord Kitchener in South Africa.

OUR BODIES AND HEAT

We Drink Liquid That Would Scald Our Hands

The human body can stand far greater heat if it be dry than if it be wet, and, strangely enough, it can stand far hotter liquids inside than out. For example, the average tea-drinker sips tea at a temperature of about 140 degrees—sometimes as high as 145 degrees. But he cannot bear his hand in water at 130 degrees, or his feet in water higher than 112 degrees. Few people can stand a bath in water at 105 degrees.

In parts of Central Australia men live in an average temperature of 112 degrees in the shade and 140 degrees in the sun, while 151 degrees has been registered. In the Persian Gulf the thermometers on ships vary between 122 degrees and 140. An explorer in the Himalayas reports that he found in December, and at more than 10,000 feet altitude, a temperature of 121 degrees.

Drs. Blagden and Chantrey, two English scientists, desiring to ascertain how high a temperature the human body could stand, shut themselves in an oven, of which the heat was gradually raised, and they were able to bear it until the thermometer registered 212 degrees, the boiling point of water.

Will Crooks' "Don't's"

Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., gave the following advice in an address to workingmen:—

Don't argue when you are tired; you can't do it.

Don't take the workshop home with you.

Don't talk trouble before the children.

Don't think you can't be "done;" you can.

Don't think you are worse than other people, and don't think you are better; you're not.

Don't think you have a constant job; the man in the cemetery has that.

Don't talk of being master in your own house. You may be while you are there; but you have to go out.

Don't get angry; no one cares if you do.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs — all young foxes — good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's [illegible] on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island [illegible] foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William [illegible], and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $90,000 worth of stock for themselves. [illegible] worth has already been disposed of, leaving [illegible] to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 30 per cent. but are going to pay 30 per cent. in cash and 20 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for [illegible] to give us all the [illegible] honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $90,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any [illegible] play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and besides, every investment is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pair that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs, shipped from Prince Edward Island [illegible] to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

These figures may be verified by applying to Messrs. C. M. Lampson & Company, 64 Queen Street, London, [illegible].

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each; 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st, 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the fox ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four [illegible] this is equal to 40 pairs, and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., [illegible] should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about [illegible] [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown newspapers.

Wed. November 18th 1914

Wednesday is Anniversary Day in the Annex. Nine years ago to-day the Bargain Annex was opened for the first time. From a small unheard of department it has grown to be one of the best known bargain departments in the province. This wonderful growth has only been possible: firstly, on account of the exceptional value-giving powers and excellent service of the Annex; secondly, through your most hearty co-operation. for which we sincerely thank you. To celebrate the occasion we have prepared

A MERCHANDISE EVENT OF SUPREME IMPORTANCE

An Appeal to the Intelligent Investor!

Does a logical presentation of a good investment interest you? Do you believe there is oil in commercial quantities in Alberta? If you are alive to the situation you do. Then it will pay you to investigate our proposition and our holdings.

Please Read Carefully and Note!

THAT Oil authorities are agreed the Alberta Oil Field is of an anticlinal formation. It has been fairly accurately ascertained in what general direction these anticlines run. Geologist B. W. Dunn chose wisely in the selection of the now famous Monarch well. WINDSOR OILFIELDS, LIMITED, has holdings located close to the Monarch.

THAT Cunningham Craig, one of the world's most eminent geologists, selected the site of the Mowbray-Berkeley well. Stock in that company is not offered at any price. We possess acreage adjoining the Mowbray-Berkeley (Section 12, Township 28, Range 5, West of 5th). If a strike is made at the Mowbray-Berkeley what will shares in our company be worth?

MARVELLOUS FEATS OF TRAINED PIGEONS

High-flyers Which Stay up in the Air For Eighteen Hours And Even Longer

To tell the uninitiated that pigeons will fly for over eighteen hours at a stretch, without food, water, or a rest, is probably to find oneself accused of pandering to one's imagination. Yet such is the astounding truth. Amongst the birds of those who make a hobby of breeding and training pigeons to fly for long periods among the clouds, specimens which regularly fly the clock around are to be numbered by the thousand. Week in, week out, in the districts where high-flying—the name by which the pastime is known—is followed, pigeons leave their aviaries at the break of day, go right up into the blue almost beyond the vision of the human eye, and remain flying there until the light fails in the evening. It is, in fact, by no means uncommon for them to keep up their aerial evolutions until darkness comes on, and the owner cannot see the birds of which he is so justly proud.

Somersaults in the Air

The variety of pigeon which flies the longest time is the Flying Tippler, and consequently it is the most popular. Other flying breeds are the Cumulet, the West of England Tumbler, the Performing Tumbler, and the Roller. The two last-named perform in the air as they fly, the Tumbler tumbling and the Roller rolling. The [illegible] of the latter are most peculiar. A Roller will stop in its flight and turn somersaults downwards in an almost perpendicular line, sometimes actually striking the ground and injuring itself.

Thousands of English working men find recreation in the sport of high-flying. The great centre of the sport is Sheffield, which is as much the headquarters of the hobby as Newmarket is of the racing world.

Many clubs exist throughout England and these bodies organise the sport and promote the flying competitions.

How Contests Are Conducted

The manner of conducting these contests, briefly described, is as follows. A time is fixed by the club for the birds to start. This is as early as possible, say 3.30 a.m. or 4 a.m. An official referee is sent to each competitor's home to take the time, and see that the conditions of the fly are properly carried out. The referee remains until the birds drop. At the liberation hour the owner allows his "kit" of birds, usually three in number, to leave their loft. The pigeons, revelling in their liberty, immediately soar aloft, and commence flying with an easy, graceful action. Although they do not usually go very far out of sight of their home, they cover quite a wide area, flying backwards and forwards and round and round. The conditions usually are that the "kit" has to be seen by the referee once in the first two hours of the fly, and once in each subsequent hour.

Calling the Pigeons Home

When the birds show signs of coming down, the owner puts out what is known as the "droppers." This is usually a white pigeon of some other variety—a white Fantail, for instance. When this bird appears on the loft top the high-fliers see it, and if they have been properly trained they fly down to their aviary, though it sometimes takes hours to get flying pigeons to "drop." The referee records the time up to the moment at which the owner puts out the "droppers." The pigeons have all to "drop" within a prescribed area, and within a fixed length of time, or they are disqualified.

The world's record fly is eighteen hours thirty-two minutes and there are many proud owners whose birds have stayed aloft for eighteen hours.

Rugby Still Unsettled

Rugby is a great amateur sport, and of the truly amateur sports in Canada, [illegible] has the [illegible] the [illegible] that there are no [illegible] prospects. [illegible] will be a sorry day for the game when Mr. [illegible] forms a league and begins to swing the big bundle to lure and entice away the amateurs. The Canadian Rugby Union, which is a strong body, controls the situation and so far the game has been managed properly.—Toronto Sunday World.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

STRENUOUS DUTIES OF INFANTRY C.O.

The "Old Man's" Responsibilities Heavy, His Pay For Services Light

The officer commanding a British infantry battalion, who is known as the O.C., C.O., or, behind his back, the "old man," receives $5.35 a day pay, exclusive of certain allowances.

His gross income is well under $2500 a year, and he is certainly not overpaid, for he must be exceptionally lucky to get command before he is forty, and his responsibilities are heavy.

The C.O.'s daily day varies greatly according to climate and other circumstances, but, as a rule, he starts work with "orderly room" at 9 or 9.30 a.m.

The "orderly-room" is the regimental police court, and, like those of a police magistrate, the C.O.'s penal powers are limited. He must investigate every charge brought before him, but in the case of serious offences, such as desertion, he must either dismiss the charge altogether, reduce it to one of absence without leave, with which he had power to deal, or remand the prisoner for trial by court-martial.

The severest punishment the C.O. can award is fourteen days "cells," save in the case of absence without leave, when he can order imprisonment up to twenty-one days.

A "non-com." can be summarily punished by reprimand or severe reprimand only, otherwise he must be sent for trial by court-martial. The C.O., however, can reduce a non-com. who holds acting rank. Officers are subject to "wiggings" only, and the "Officer's call" is usually the precursor of the "rough side of the old man's tongue."

"Orderly-room" is usually humdrum enough, but sometimes there is excitement.

I remember one occasion when a man was marched in charged with a fairly serious offence, says a writer in Answers. Asked whether he had anything to say, he replied by kicking over the C.O.'s table. It was quite some seconds before the horror-stricken escort and sergeant-major recovered their presence of mind, fell upon the rebel, and carried him out, fighting like a tiger. I don't know what they did to him outside, but when he was marched in again all the "kick" had gone out of him. Six months' "hard" was the subsequent court-martial sentence.

Round the Married Patch

After "orderly-room" comes "C.O.'s parade," that is if it is one of the appointed days, for the C.O.'s office duties will rarely permit of his personally commanding parade more than two or three times a week, except, of course, on manoeuvres.

"Papers" are the bugbear of the C.O.'s life. As there are only twenty-four hours in a day it is usually impossible for him to read half of what is put before him. Generally he has to trust to his subordinates, the orderly-room sergeant in particular, that everything is in order. Even so, merely signing his name will absorb three or four hours a day.

Of course, he has many special duties to perform.

Once a week, usually Saturday, he will visit the barrack-rooms for kit inspection, and on Sunday he usually goes round the "married patch."

There are recruits to be inspected before they are dismissed drill, and, if musketry is on, he will pay frequent visits to the range.

There are recruit officers to be examined, and once a week the C.O. lectures to and examines the officers as a whole.

He presides at officers' mess meetings, and, one way and another, his time is fully occupied. But his real work is unofficial.

He should be the "father" of his regiment, and, without prying, he should know everything that is going on in it. He should know when to administer that unofficial word in season which will pull an erring youngster straight.

As a rule, the C.O. is married, but if he is a bachelor his position calls for great tact, for then he lives among his subordinates. So far as possible he lays aside his rank in the mess, but at the same time he is generally responsible for the maintenance of good order and discipline.

The man who commands a battalion shoulders responsibilities [illegible] forms work which in civil [illegible] bring him a handsome [illegible] the C.O.'s expenses are [illegible] can rarely live on his pay [illegible] the end of his term he usually has nothing to look forward but retirement on $2,100 a year.

How People Feel Who Have Tape Worm

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. This parasite is a creature male and female in one. It is a pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are only connected together with slime. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each joint is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows to be much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon and causes its victims to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, constipation of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis and other complaints, when one or more of these internal dragons were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulvaney has made the discovery to free the victim of this monster without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these death-dealing monsters in the world, which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy. Some bottles containing colonies of worms and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the Professor has in his possession are enough to convince one of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are: ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headache, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels, also a feeling as though something was crawling up the throat. The only certainty of having one in the system is when segments or joints are seen, which come away almost any time. They are flat and from ½ of an inch to 1 inch long, which have often been mistaken for pin worms by those who do not know the difference. There are many other feelings of distress which would take long to enumerate. Strange to say, some people of strong constitution, have very little distress.

Prof. Mulvaney's world-famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. VARIATIONS IN MILK FAT

They Show That Cows Should be Tested at Frequent Intervals

Frequent experiments have shown that one single test of a cow's milk is not reliable as an indication of what percentage of fat her milk normally contains. A great many well known causes affect the test, also some outside that are unknown at present even by the closest students. This variation in the test is one of the puzzles of the cow's individuality, and because of these puzzling variations it is advisable to take composite samples at intervals so as to ascertain the average test.

Some painstaking investigations at one of the dairy research stations in England, with seven cows for two days, even separating each milking as a separate test of eleven successive milkings, three times a day. From the first quarters of the milking, show that while thirty pounds of milk per day was 3.5 per cent., the variation was all the way from only one-tenth of one per cent. up to nine and a half per cent. of fat.

That is clear proof of how misleading one single test may be. If the real earning capacity of each individual cow is to be computed, it must be on the basis of her annual production of milk and fat less the cost of feed; regular weighing and testing give that knowledge which every dairy person should have of each cow he keeps.

The Sheep Pays

Money invested in sheep will nearly double itself in one year, since the fleece will pay for the feed and care of the sheep, and the lambs, often two per ewe, are the profit. It is estimated that ten sheep may be kept where one cow may, and the risk is much less. It may be said that the sheep always carries her pocketbook with her. If she dies, her pelt or fleece pays her funeral expenses. If she lives, her wool in the spring and her lambs in the fall pay double revenue. No other stock pays as large a percentage of clear profit on the money invested. Nothing else will build up a rundown farm as quickly as a flock of sheep. While pasturing, the sheep's manure is distributed about so evenly that no manure spreader could equal the sheep in its work.

Poultry Industry

The value of the poultry industry to New Zealand was stated at a conference of poultrymen to be two millions sterling per annum, this sum changing hands for products, produce and materials in order to keep the industry going. The average price of eggs and table poultry was fully 50 per cent. higher than it was ten years ago. Five years ago they could count on one hand the number of persons engaged in poultry farming for a living. Now they could be numbered by the score. Farmers, too, were giving poultry their attention, since they were realizing that the high prices received for eggs and table birds made the keeping of poultry a valuable adjunct to their [illegible].

FAMOUS PHRASES AND THEIR ORIGIN

Some Everyday Expressions Have Come Down to us From the Time of the Caesars

The average person probably does not know the origin of half the common phrases used in ordinary conversation.

No less a person than Cicero first made use of the expression, "While there's life, there's hope," in a letter he wrote to Atticus. "We are in the same boat" is not modern slang, but occurs in a letter written by Clement I., Bishop of Rome, to the Church of Corinth in the first century. This letter is still in existence.

"I never put off till to-morrow what I can do to-day," was Lord Chesterfield's explanation of how he managed to do so much work. "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well," he wrote later in the famous "Letters to His Son."

Lord Eldon, Lord Chancellor of England during the first twenty-six years of the nineteenth century, continually mispronounced the name of Henry Brougham, afterward to be a successor in the Chancellor's office. Brougham objected to being called Broom, and once, after Brougham had made a speech, Eldon, by way of apology, pronounced his name correctly and made a proverb, "New brooms sweep clean."

"No man is a hero to his valet" has been paraphrased by scores from Madame de Cornuel, a witty Frenchwoman of the seventeenth century, to Dr. Johnson and Napoleon. The first record of it, however, is found in Plutarch, who states that when Hermodotus addressed a poem to Antigonous I., King of Sparta, hailing him as son of the sun and a god, the monarch replied, "My bodyservant sings me no such song."

The phrase "circumstances over which he has no control" was used by the Duke of Wellington in a letter concerning some affairs in which his son was mixed up, and with which he declined to interfere.

"Conspicuous by their absence" has been used on many occasions in modern oratory. It was first used by Tacitus in relating that in the funeral procession of Julia, niece of Cato, sister of Brutus, wife of Cassius, many of the images of the most famous families in Rome were seen, but "Cassius and Brutus shone pre-eminent because their images were not displayed."

"Nothing is certain but death and taxes," wrote Benjamin Franklin, stating that the Constitution of the United States was in operation and to all appearances would last.

"Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones," was said by James I. of England, when his favorite, the Duke of Buckingham, complained that a mob had broken his glass windows, which were at that time a luxury.

"Mind your P's and Q's" is said to have been taken from an old French phrase at the time of Louis XIV. A very low bow was in fashion, and the dancing master, [illegible], which were then to look out for the position of the feet and the movement of the head lest their queue wigs be disarranged. The French word for foot is pied. "Mind your pieds and queues," soon came to be transplanted into English, and abbreviated.

FORCE OF EXPLOSION

Amazing Freak of Gelignite in British Columbia

It seems incredible that an explosion could be of such force as to cause an ordinary steel rail to wrap itself twice around the trunk of a large tree; yet there was just such a result from the discharge of gelignite at Nanaimo, British Columbia. Twelve workmen lost their lives by this explosion. The rail was lying on the ground fully thirty feet from the spot at which the explosion occurred; yet it was lifted into the air, sent in the direction of the tree, and twisted round the trunk just as if it had been a piece of piano wire. It was so tightly wrapped about the trunk that it cut deeply into the green wood and caused great splinters to start out on all sides. The explosive responsible for this unique occurrence is one of the most powerful preparations known, composed of nitroglycerine, nitrocotton, sodium nitrate, sodium carbonate, and wood pulp.

How do Animals Know?

One of the mysteries still unsolved is that of the sense by which the lower animals become aware of the approach of earthquakes. For three or four days before the severe earthquake at Guadalajara, Mexico, the many parrots of the city showed great and unusual restlessness, and during the period of disturbance the increased cries of the birds gave warning of the nearness of the worst shocks. Rats, also, became alarmed, fleeing from the city before the earthquakes came. Supersensitiveness to faint shocks hardly gives satisfactory explanation, for modern seismographs are very sensitive, and it is quite unlikely that tremors too slight to be reckoned would be felt so strongly as to give alarm.—"Science Siftings."

CANADIAN DOCTOR WON MANY HONORS

Sir Thomas Roddick Secured Legislation Creating Dominion-wide Standard For Medical Men

Among the medical men who have won fame and honor in Canada is Sir Thomas George Roddick of Montreal, who rendered such eminent service to his profession by initiating the law which now qualifies its members for practice in any Province of the Dominion. Sir Thomas is a native of Newfoundland, was educated in Truro, Nova Scotia, and was a distinguished graduate of McGill University, Montreal, where he rapidly became famous as a surgeon and general practitioner. He was from 1901 to 1908 Dean of the Medical Faculty of his University.

His father left Dumfriesshire to become for many years principal of the Government School at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. During the rebellion in the Northwest in 1885 Sir Thomas organized the hospital and medical service for the expeditionary force, holding the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General. He is lieutenant-colonel (retired) of the Prince of Wales' Rifles of Montreal. He also saw active service during the Fenian raids in 1870. In 1896 he entered the Dominion House of Commons as M.P. for Montreal West, principally with the object—successfully accomplished—of securing legislation by which a medical man qualified in any one Province of the Dominion could practice in all.

SIR THOMAS RODDICK, M.D.

Sir Thomas was president of the British Medical Association at the time that body in 1896 held its first annual meeting outside the British Isles, in Montreal, and was prominent in entertaining the numerous delegates and visitors. The degrees and honors conferred upon Dr. Roddick by other universities and institutions are too numerous to mention. It is sufficient to state that he received the LL.D. of Edinburgh University in 1898 and that of Oxford in 1904, and he is F.R.C.S. of London. As consulting surgeon to the Royal Victoria Hospital, to the Victorian Order of Nurses, and other charitable organizations and institutions, he has rendered invaluable service.

Sir Thomas married, in 1880, Miss Marion McKinnon, of Pointe Claire, Quebec, who died in 1890. In 1906 he married Miss Amy Redpath, the eldest daughter of the late Mr. J. J. Redpath, of the Manor House, Chislehurst, a member of an old Montreal family.

HOPE TO FIND COAL

Fuel Supply in Canada's Northland Would be Great Boon

There is under way a prospecting expedition to Hudson Bay, the main object of which is to investigate coal deposits in that area which can be utilized in connection with the operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. A supply will also be required for the steamers. At present all the coal that is required in connection with steamer traffic to the Bay has to be conveyed there by Newfoundland sealing steamers that are used for freighting purposes in the summer months. They are the only vessels available that can withstand the wear and tear of navigation in these northern ice-laden waters.

Coal for the needs of the railway construction forces is conveyed by train from Winnipeg and Le Pas as the railroad progresses. When the line is opened to Port Nelson and terminals constructed there provision for a large storage for coal will be made. Its cost, however, in view of the lengthy transportation from Cape Breton by water and from Western Canada by rail will be a considerable item. Hence the present efforts to locate coal deposits near Port Nelson.

Protect Young Timber

Mr. Clyde Leavitt, chief fire inspector of the Railway Commission, stated, in an interview, that the railways were doing everything in their power to prevent bush fires near the railway tracks from spreading. "It seems to me," said Mr. Leavitt, "that there is too little attention paid to the fires in the cut over areas, and too much protection concentrated on the merchantable timber limits. If more effort were devoted to protecting the young timber it would give it a chance and prevent the fire from spreading to the limits, where the trees are large enough for merchantable use."

DRY IRRITATING HACK OF BRONCHITIS INSTANTLY RELIEVED BY "CATARRHOZONE"

No Failure, Cure is Every Case [illegible] Treated by Catarrhozone.

Catarrhozone can't fail to cure Bronchitis; its so healing and balsamic that every trace of the disease flies before it. When you inhale the pure piney vapor of Catarrhozone you send healing medication to the spots that are diseased and sore. Isn't it rational to apply medicine where the disease exists? Certainly! and that's why Catarrhozone is so successful; it goes where the trouble really is, gets where a spray or ointment can't penetrate. For the relief and complete cure of bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, throat trouble, we guarantee Catarrhozone in every case. You don't take medicine—don't take drowsy drugs—just breathe the balsamic essences of Catarrhozone.

[illegible] the past [illegible] "For thirty years I was seriously bothered by a bronchial cough. At night I would awaken with a dry tickling feeling in my throat. I [illegible] cough [illegible] anything, but very [illegible] brought my throat into quite inflamed condition. Once I got the Catarrhozone Inhaler I was all right. I took it to bed, and if an attack awakened me a few minutes use of the inhaler gave me relief. Catarrhozone cured me and I strongly urge everyone with a weak throat to use it regularly.

Signed J. B. BEAMER, Reading.

Catarrhozone will not disappoint you. Get the complete $1.00 outfit; it's guaranteed. Small size 50c; trial or sample size 25c. at dealers everywhere.

Good Luck Hunting.

The Ketchecum Lake Hunt Club has returned from their annual outing. They brought back ten deer in which were included two fine bucks. The members report having had a very splendid time. They say that partridges are very scarce this fall.

◆

Get Full Complement.

Mr. Chas. McClelland the Water St. Jeweller, has returned from his annual hunting trip in New Ontario. His party secured their full legal quota of deer. The party did not secure any Moose although one was shot near where they hunted.

◆

Daughters of the Empire.

It was learned yesterday morning that the local Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire, who on Monday afternoon, through courtesy of the Oriental Hotel management, were given the use of the Tea Room in that popular caravansary.

◆

A Serious Charge.

At yesterday's police court Joseph Tobin was charged with having improper relation with a girl. He pleaded guilty to having introduced to two men named Finlay and Young. The Magistrate remarked "this is a serious charge, you had better consult a solicitor." The case was enlarged for one week.

◆

P. C. Kidd Returns.

Former local police constable Kidd is back in the fold. This former Peterboro policeman who has for some time been Chief of Police at Brampton has rejoined the force here and was yesterday on duty at the city hall. Before leaving Brampton the citizens presented this popular officer with a handsome gold watch suitably engraved.

Turkeys Cheaper.

It will interest our readers to learn that, this year, turkeys will be within reach of even the average man's pocket. Yesterday a well known local man drove out into the township of Douro. Within one mile he interviewed seven farmers. The seven had, in turkey flocks, respectively, 78, 10, 20, 40, and 17 birds thus they offered for sale at reasonable prices. Local buyers are not getting turkeys now unless the birds are plucked and dressed.

HEARING IS RESTORED TO DEAF

Without Mechanical or Artificial Hearing Devices, Deaf Hear With Their Own Ears. A Wonderful English Discovery.

Thousands of people suffer from catarrhal deafness or poor hearing, who having tried specialists, advertised treatments, artificial ear drums, ear phones, electric vibrators and various mechanical appliances without success have at last resigned themselves to a "world of silence" thinking that nothing can ever restore to them their normal hearing. Yet their case is not hopeless. A remarkable scientific treatment discovered a little more than a year ago in England is making people hear after years of deafness and is also unequalled for quickly stopping the distressing head noises that are so often the companions of defective hearing. This discovery is called Parmint and has attracted widespread notice throughout Europe where reports of the remarkable results it has given to deaf people have come in by the hundred.

The effect of Parmint it seems is by tonic action to produce a stimulous necessary to reduce all inflammation, swelling, enlargement or thickening of the organs of hearing and to stimulate the entire auditory tract.

Parmint is now being sold by many leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity and a speedy trial is urged upon all who suffer from catarrhal deafness or headnoises in any degree. Ask the druggist for 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take it home and mix with ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz of granulated sugar until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day and you should soon find a remarkable improvement in your hearing.

IMPORTANT.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine st., Montreal, P.Q. who make a specialty of it.

RUSSIANS ADVANCING ON BERLIN

Petrograd, Nov. 16.—The recapture of Soldau by the Russian forces was announced in an official statement today. To the north of the Masurian Lake region, in East Prussia the Germans are declared to be in retreat, retiring in the direction of Konigsberg.

Between Cracow and Czenstochow the Russian advance continues, it is declared, despite reinforcements which have been brought up by the Germans.

With the continued withdrawal of the Austrians from Central Galicia, the Russian advance is claimed to be developing with continued success. It is declared here to-day that there is a general exodus from Cracow and judging from the lack of resistance shown the forces advancing upon it, it is believed the Austrians may have decided not to defend this city.

An official statement declares the Masurian Lake region had been all but cleared of the enemy. The advance along the line toward Koenigsberg has regained Augerburg, 35 miles inside the East Prussian frontier. Fighting is in progress in the Soldau region. In the movement upon Thorn fighting continues between Block and the River Warthe. The Germans are said to have withdrawn from the vicinity of Kalisz.

MAY NOT DEFEND CRACOW

London, Nov. 16.—In the eastern arena of the war the Germans are making and executing similar plans in the face of the Russian advance. It is said that great German forces are being concentrated at Thorn, Posen, and Breslau with the idea of keeping the Russians out of important districts in the Provinces of Posen and Silesia.

A word of caution comes to the allies from Petrograd. This is that they must not expect the Russians to sweep on to Berlin over night, as it were as this may take months and even longer. The Germans occupy the defences they have been preparing for years, and in addition to this they may be able to spare even more men for the operation on their eastern front.

Russian armies seem to be gradually converging on Cracow, and the siege or investment of this place appears not to be far off. It is suggested that the Austrians from Central Galicia might surrender to avoid a bombardment, but this can be as yet nothing more than a suggestion.

In East Prussia the Russian forward movement seems to continue, and it is said that the Russian generals are imposing on the captured towns fines in proportion to those levied by the Germans on the cities of Belgium. These fines correspond with the population of the town taken.

POLES ARE DISAFFECTED.

A Times despatch from Copenhagen says: "Advices from Posen indicate that there is much dissatisfaction among the Poles in the eastern Provinces of Germany. The Poles complain that the Germans are neglecting the frontier because most of the inhabitants are Slavs. [illegible] declare that the Germans [illegible] frontier to waste in order to delay the Russians. They protest that Poles are put in the front of the battle-line as cannon fodder. The Germans on the other hand accuse the Poles of helping the Russians by espionage.

"The Germans are concentrating great armies at Thorn, Posen, and Breslau, and plan to fight desperately to prevent the Russian occupation of the important parts of Silesia and Posen. Only the utmost need will persuade the Germans to send any troops back to the western front at present."

RUSSIA'S ENORMOUS TASK.

The Daily Mail's Petrograd correspondent warns the British people of the enormous task still facing the allies, and declares that England will need all the troops that it is possible for her to raise.

The correspondent points out that it will take months for the Russians to reach Berlin, saying that even if the Germans are driven from the positions they now are holding, they can fall back on equally strong lines of defence they have prepared. He says he hears that the Germans are setting the Russians a formidable task to break through, and before this is accomplished the Germans still may be able to send troops to France and Belgium.

MOVING ON DANZIG.

A Petrograd despatch of Sunday's date says: Russian troops advanced rapidly today toward Danzig, the objective of the campaign in East Prussia.

A despatch to the London Telegraph from Stockholm, says,

"A diplomatic despatch from Vienna states that the German army is evacuating both Breslau, in Silesia, and Koenigsberg, in East Prussia."

There is no confirmation of these rumors obtainable and today's despatches seem to disprove them, especially that relating to Breslau."

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy wavy and beautiful at once—Stops falling out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected, or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair but what will please you most will be after a few week's use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair, growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it, surely get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

"CASCARETS" ALWAYS STRENGTHEN YOU UP

Costive, Headachy, Bilious, Stomach Sour, Breath Bad—Clean your Liver and Bowels.

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel worn out.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts cathartic pills, or castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

DOGS OF THE WILD

Australian Dingoes or Wild Dogs Easily Domesticated

Although the highest authorities agree in stating that the dingo was at some remote period introduced into Australia, and that it subsequently reverted to a wild state—like the "wild" horses of the Andes—there are still those who regard this dog as one of the original wild dogs from which our domestic dogs are descended. In any case, the breed is one of very great antiquity, and therefore of the highest interest to all dog lovers.

The dingo is about the size of a collie and much resembles a wolf in appearance and habits, but he is much more easily tamed. Those who knew him best are warm in his praise, declaring that the dog may not merely be tamed, but is capable of readily acquiring useful habits, and of becoming a good watchdog. [illegible]

TWO PESTS OF CATTLE

How to Prevent and Control Lice and Ringworm

These two pests of housed cattle trouble most in dark, damp, dirty, badly ventilated stables. Remedial measures fail if only the animals are treated. So long as calves and adult cattle remain on pasture they are not bothered with vermin or skin disease; but when they go into winter quarters the trouble starts. The reason is that eggs ("nits") of lice remain in the stable from season to season, while the vegetable parasite of ringworm lives on damp walls, partitions, fences and other woodwork as well as on the skin of animals. Both pests, therefore, are acquired in the stable. If animals are to be made comfortable by keeping them free of lice and ringworm the stable should be specially prepared for their reception. Each animal should be allowed four square feet of window-glass and five hundred to eight hundred cubic feet of air-space in the stable.

Good ventilation, too, is absolutely necessary, and by preference should be of the King system. In this method of ventilation the fresh air enters at the ceiling, drives the hot air downward upon the backs of the cattle and is sucked out through wall vents near the ground-level and connecting with pipes discharging through a high chimney in the roof. The cleansing process consists in removing all loose trash, litter and soiled feed, scrubbing walls, mangers, partitions, floors and ceiling with a 1-40 solution of coal-tar disinfectant or crude carbolic acid or solution of four ounces of formaldehyde or sulphate of copper to a gallon of water. Fresh-made lime-wash is then applied with a spraying pump, which forces the wash into every crack, cranny and crevice. An addition of one pound of chloride of lime to three gallons of lime-wash makes it more effective.

To rid animals of lice a 1-100 solution of coal-tar dip may be sprayed on and brushed in, when the weather is not too cold, or an even more effective solution may be made by steeping four ounces of stavesacre-seeds in a gallon of boiling water and using when cold. Frequent applications are necessary, as new broods of lice hatch out from "nits." In cold weather dust the infested part of the skin freely with flowers of sulphur, or Persian or pyrethrum insect-powder. Mercurical ointment (blue ointment) is effective when applied to the poll of the head and along the backbone; but treated animals must be separated to prevent licking of the ointment, which is poisonous. Ringworm is indicated by bare, white, scaly, crusty spots upon the face, around the eyes and on the neck or other parts of young cattle. Treat by scraping and scrubbing each spot clean, and then rubbing in iodine ointment every other day until well. "Barn itch," or ringworm, may also affect adult cattle, causing itching, scaly spots on the body and especially about the tail-head. Treat by scrubbing clean and wetting with a solution of two pounds of sulphate of copper to a gallon of water applied hot.

Former Cloud That Seemed to Distress Britain and Her Colonies, Now Shows Marked Silver Lining--Russian Allies Win in a Fierce Battle

BRITISH FLEET FIRES ON BELGIAN COAST--GERMANS LOSE 2,700 MEN

Vigorous Bombardment by British Vessels at Knocke and Zeebrugge Results in Wrecking of Solvay Works, Destruction of Military Train and Stores

London, Nov. 18.--Public mourning for the late Field Marshal Lord Roberts overshadowed public demonstrations over anything the reports from the front contained today. The allies were rather more than holding their own, it was thought, and there was quiet satisfaction in all circles. Reports from outlying points of conflict were not alarming. So far as the fighting in France and Belgium was concerned "there was nothing new to report," but the United Kingdom was waiting the resumption of a new German attack farther south from the coast.

Fleet Fires on Zeebrugge.

A Rotterdam despatch to The Daily Mail says: "The British Fleet received information Monday which led them to carry out a vigorous bombardment at Knocke and Zeebrugge on the Belgian coast. The Solvay Company's works on the Bruges ship canal, which are being used as a base for German military trains was wrecked. A train of five cars, filled with soldiers were struck by a shell, took fire and was destroyed. Much damage was done to the German stores and supplies."

Germans Lose 2,700 Men

The correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company at Amsterdam sends the following:

"According to The Telegraaf's Sluis, Netherlands, correspondent, the Germans occupying Dixmude have suffered heavy losses. In fresh fighting which has taken place there they lost 2,700 men.

"The Town of Nieuport is badly damaged. Heavy cannonading was heard Tuesday in the direction of Ypres, indicating a renewal of the heavy fighting there.

"Fugitives say that additional submarines are being constructed at Zeebrugge."

OUR BUSINESS IS WAR TILL WAR ENDS: MAY COST $100,000,000 A YEAR

No Matter What Other Interests Suffer Canada's Military and Naval Expenditures Wil be Provided For--Bank of England Will Make Advances to Dominion as Required--Imperial Government to Become Canada's Credit

Ottawa, Nov. 18.--From the statement made some time ago by the Minister of Finance here and the announcement made yesterday by Mr. Asquith in the House of Commons, it is clear that the financing of Canada's war expenditure will be accomplished without undue strain.

The Minister of Finance said that the Bank of England would make advance as required by the Canadian Government for military and naval expenditure. The British Prime Minister announces that an amount will be included in the Imperial war loan to cover such expenditures. It is clear that the money raised by the Imperial Government for Canada will be used to liquidate the indebtness to the Bank of England and that the Imperial Government will become the creditor of the Canadian Government.

Later, as stated by the Finance Minister, a Canadian war loan will be made in London at a time to be mutually agreed upon between the Minister and the Chancellor of the Exchequer and [illegible] from the proceed the Imperial Government will be repaid. No [illegible] doubt the arrangement will continue throughout the war. It is known that from the outset the Minister of Finance has taken the position that Canada's first business is war until the war is ended and no matter what other interests suffer money must and will be provided for Canada's military and naval expenditure to the utmost limit required for equipping and sending to the front every available man who may volunteer for the service.

An appropriation of fifty million dollars was voted last August for the balance of the fiscal year. The Minister has already provided for funds in excess of [illegible] amount. It looks as if Canada's war expenditure would [illegible] exceed one hundred million dollars per annum. The Minister will provide this and whatever money is necessary. There will be plenty of money for war. The shortage will be for ordinary and capital expenditure until international markets permit further borrowing by the Dominion. At present there is no indication of this condition prevailing for some considerable time.

AN EARTHQUAKE SHOCK YESTERDAY ROCKED HOUSES IN TORONTO

Residents on Eastern Avenue Wakened by it Early in the Morning--Seismograph Says Shock Was Actual--First Felt in Toronto for a Year

Toronto, Nov. 18.--Toronto was visited by a genuine, live earthquake --the first in almost a year-- shortly before five o'clock this morning, and quite a number of residents in the eastern section of the city can testify to the reality of the shock. Mrs. J.I. Wilse, who lives at the corner of Laing street and Eastern avenue, was roused from sleep by it and gave the following account of her own experience to The News.

"Shortly before five o'clock," she said. "We were all awakened by the house rocking violently. Pictures on the walls began to swing, and several small articles on the dressing table fell to the floor. The vibrations continued several minutes then died down, and, shortly after, increased again to a lesser extent. Half an hour later several neighbors called up to see if we had noticed anything peculiar, as they all had experienced the same sensation. The shock seemed to be general throughout the district."

Observatory Confirms Report

Anxious to secure independent confirmation of the shock, The News called up Mr. James Young, seismographer at the Meteorological Observatory, who especially developed some twenty-five feet of film in order to verify the report and found that an earthquake shock certainly had been recorded. He was surprised, however, that the shock should have been felt so near home, as the seismographic film records what appears to be a distant shock, beginning at eight minutes to five this morning, and reaching its first maximum wave length about six minutes later, then receding and increasing again, over a period of approximately fifty minutes. This record, which cannot possibly be refuted, bears out absolutely the statement made to The News by Mrs. Wilse.

RUSSIANS NEAR INTERIOR--GERMANS OFFERING MOST ENERGETIC RESISTANCE

Paris, Nov. 18.--A despatch received here from Petrograd by the Havas Agency, is as follows:

A terrific battle of unexampled violence has been proceeding for four days around Soldau. The cannonading has been maintained night and day. The Russians are endeavoring at any cost to avenge their former check at Soldau and are throwing themselves at the Germans with indescribable fury. They have carried position after position by assault, in spite of the fire of the Germans.

Russians Near Interior

The Germans are offering a most energetic resistance, and their fighting is alternately offensive and defensive.

In spite of the torrential rains, which have turned the ground into a quagmire, the Russians are advancing toward the interior of Germany.

The Havas correspondent continues: They have captured ten big cannon, none of them damaged.

THE GERMANS THROW AWAY THEIR LIVES

London, Nov. 17.--5 a.m.--All reports from the scene of fighting in Northern France indicate that the weather conditions for the past few days have been terrible. Heavy rain, falling continuously for 36 hours, has turned all the roads into quagmires, while the trenches are flooded and the lowlands everywhere are largely covered by water.

Everything possible is being done to make the troops comfortable, to prevent their being flooded out of the trenches, and to avoid cave-ins. The trenches are being shored and boarded and the bottoms covered with brush and straw. Meanwhile the artillery battles continue.

The following story of the wiping out of 3,000 Germans comes from a wounded soldier from the Ypres front:

"The fighting at Ypres was terrible in violence. For forty hours we fought foot to foot with the enemy, employing every resource of infantry and artillery.

"On Sunday a regiment of 3,000 Germans attacked our positions. At a distance of 300 yards our artillery opened a terrible fire and mowed them down. They recoiled, but reformed and returned. This time they reached the hundred-yard mark and again [illegible] and reformed. With only a [illegible] of their original strength they advanced again. Our officers ordered us to hold our fire and let them advance. At 30 yards the order came to 'Let them have it.' We did and the German regiment ceased to exist. In less than an hour 3,000 men had been exterminated."

GENERAL JOFFRE
Commander-in-Chief of Great Britain's French Allies.

ISOLATED ATTACKS ON THE PART OF THE ENEMY, WHICH WERE REPULSED

Paris, Nov. 18.--The French official statement, given out in Paris this afternoon, says:--

The day of yesterday, November 17 passed much as did the day before. There was numerous artillery exchanges and some isolated attacks on the part of the enemy's infantry, all of which were repulsed.

From the North Sea to the Lys, the front was subjected to a fairly active bombardment, particularly at Nieuport and to the east and to the south of Ypres.

Near Bixschoote, the Zouaves, charging with the bayonet, brilliantly took possession of a forest which had been disputed between the enemy and ourselves for three days.

To the south of Ypres an offensive movement on the part of the enemy's infantry was repulsed by our troops. The British army also maintained its front.

From Arras to the Oise there is nothing new to report.

In the region of Craonne, our artillery on several occasions secured the advantage over the batteries of the enemy.

JUDGMENT RESERVED IN THE ASSAULT CASE

Eric Lundgren was yesterday charged with assaulting a Jew who operates a second hand store on Simcoe Street. Mr. O'Connell for the prisoner elected for summary trial by the Magistrate and pleaded not guilty. The Jew, the complainant was sworn in the regular way, but Mr. O'Connell insisted that the Jew, as is customary, with people of that faith, keep his hat on when sworn. County Crown Attorney Hatton conducted the prosecution. The Jew produced a book, required by law in such business describing the "Work" (watch) He gave prisoner $1.00 for the watch. Two weeks later the prisoner called and wanted his watch. Witness offered to let him have it for $1.75. Prisoner came back Saturday, accompanied by a friend, and asked for the watch, offering $1.25. The watch had been sold for $2.00. Swanson, the friend was drunk. Swanson claimed to own the watch. The two put him on the floor. Swanson hit him with a stove shaker, on the head, cutting it so that Dr. Morgan had to put in several stitches. He lost about a pail of blood. For the defense the accused both swore that the Jew attacked them with a stove shaker. They attribute the Jew's wound to his falling against the stove. Judgment was reserved.

The following members are detailed for musketry practice and shooting at miniature range, in the basement of the Armouries and are requested to report to the Officers in charge of this Department at the following hours:--

7.00 P.M.--C. Duggan, Frank Pratt Rev. Jas. Rollins, E. Dormer, E. W. Cuffe, L.J. Colling, H. M. Latimer, 8.30 P.M.--C.A.G. Spence, W. A. Crawley, G. R. Powell, M.S. White, W.G. Trantor, F.H.C. Bartlett.

9.00 P.M.--A.J.A. Marshall, H. M. Christie, Jos. Stewart, W. Rogers, W. G. Shiner, T.H. Theobold.

Any of the above members who are unable to attend are requested to notify the undersigned so that other members may be appointed in their places.

J. E. L. GOODWILL,
Captain.
J. F. LINTON,
Secretary.

FORMER LOCAL GIRL HOLDS A RECEPTION

Toronto Mail and Empire--"Mrs. Grant A. Smith held her post-nuptial reception on Friday last. The bride, who wore her wedding gown of white charmeuse with drapings of shadow lace, received her guests in the drawingroom, which was prettily decorated with carnations and ferns. Mrs. J.C. Smith, wearing a gown of amethyst satin, received with the bride while the tea room, which was exceptionally artistic, was presided over by Mrs. D.E. Smith, Mrs. Fred Garbutt, Milton, and Mrs. M.C. Smith the first hour, and Mrs. A.B. Coleman, Mrs. Allen Hesveson, Hamilton. Mrs. N.G. Smith poured the tea and coffee and served the ices the second hour, their aides being Miss Emily Williamson, Miss Jean Frid, Hamilton, and Miss Ethel Smith. Mrs. E. J. Moore ably performed the duties of matron of honor, while little Miss Mary Garbutt, in a dainty white frock, opened the door. The day was an ideal one, so many availed themselves of an opportunity of calling on Mrs. Smith in her beautiful new home on Water Street." The bride and Miss Mary Garbutt mentioned above are former Peterborough girls and sisters of Mrs. Robt. Gollop of this city.

BRILLIANT CHARGE DISASTER TO FOE

London, Nov. 18.--The Official Information Bureau today gave out a statement as follows:

Our third division was subjected yesterday to a heavy attack, first from artillery and then from infantry, the brunt of both falling upon two battalions of the division. These were shelled out of their trenches, but they recovered after a brilliant counter-attack which drove the enemy back in disorder for some 500 yards.

During the day an attack was also made on a brigade of the second division. In this the enemy was repulsed with heavy loss.

THE POULTRY HOUSE

Some Pointers Gathered From a Government Publication

Select a location that has natural drainage away from the building.

A dry, porous soil, such as sand or gravelly loam, is preferable to a clay soil.

In most localities the building should face the south, as this insures the greatest amount of sunlight during the winter.

Allow at least two square feet of floor space per bird.

Proper ventilation and sunlight mean a dry house and healthy birds.

The partial open-front house is conceded to be the best type for most sections.

The colony plan of housing poultry may be adopted to good advantage on many farms. This system does away with the danger of tainted soil.

The roosts should be built on the same level, two feet six inches from the floor, with a dropping board about eight inches below them.

Good roosts may be made of 2 by 3-inch material with upper edges rounded.

The nests may be placed on the side walls or under the dropping boards. It is best to have them darkened, as the hens prefer a secluded place in which to lay.

SIZES OF SILOS

Depend Upon Amount of Silage Required—How to Determine

The amount of silage required and the size of silo needed to hold it can be quite closely calculated provided the number and kind of animals to be fed from it are known before building.

An average cow or beef animal may be fed about thirty-five pounds of silage per day and the usual period during which silage is used in this latitude will be about 210 days. Large animals, or those that are being fattened, may consume considerably more than thirty-five pounds per day, but this has been found a fair average.

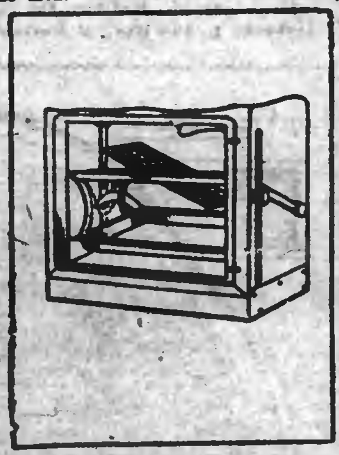
In a silo of ordinary depth the average weight of the silage is about forty pounds per cubic foot. Near the top of the silo, however, where the pressure is not great, it will weigh only twenty-five pounds per cubic foot, while at the bottom of a thirty-five foot silo it may weigh sixty pounds. Taking these averages, if a cow eats thirty-five pounds of ensilage in a day she will eat thirty-five fortieths, or seven-eighths, of a cubic foot per day; and with this as a basis it is easy to determine the number of cubic feet of ensilage required to feed a cow or any number of cows throughout the season. The diameter of the silo must be such that the stock on hand can use one or two inches of silage off the top each day during the winter and at least three inches per day when summer feeding of silage is to be practised. This is necessary to keep the silage from spoiling.

A silo ten feet in diameter is adapted to feeding ten mature cattle. One twelve feet in diameter will feed fifteen head, and one fourteen feet in diameter will meet the needs of twenty head; but if there are thirty or more cows to feed a sixteen-foot silo should be erected. These silos should be thirty or forty feet, or even more in height.—A. D. Wilson.

IMPROVED BROILER

Revolves on Pivot and Meat Can be Done on Either Side

An improved type of broiler for gas ovens has been invented. It can be moved up and down in the oven and turned about so that the meat is done equally on both sides. The broiler proper is pivoted to a framework that moves up and down in grooves on the inside end walls of the oven. By a lever outside this framework is operated. Like most broilers it is in two hinged sections that receive the meat between them. When they are locked the device can be revolved at will. A removable drip pan sets in the lower portion of the framework to catch the drippings from the steak, or chops, or whatever the meat may be. The advantage of being able to move the broiler up and down is that you can get it close to the flame or some distance off, according to whether you want it done quickly or slowly.



CAN BE MOVED UP AND DOWN

ORIGIN OF PAINTS

Ground up Mummies Furnish a Beautiful Brown Color

In order to furnish the innumerable delicate tints of paint required by artists, manufacturers have nowadays to ransack the world. Even mummies are called into use. Mummies are usually preserved in the finest bitumen, and this ancient bitumen has, in the course of centuries, turned the mummies a leathery-brown tint. It has been found that when the bitumen and the shreds of mummy are ground down by machinery, a beautiful brown pigment is the result—exactly the tint required for painting certain shades of brown hair.

Sepia is one of the commonest of artists' paints. It is a deep brown in color, and comes from a source equally strange. It is prepared from the black, inky fluid discharged by the cuttle-fish to blind and baffle its enemies.

Prussian blue is prepared from horses' hoofs, and is made by fusing the hoofs with potassium carbonate.

Raw sienna is soil from near Sienna in Italy. Burnt sienna, another common tint, is simply the same earth burnt.

The majority of pigments for making colors—that is, the dry powder—are obtained from minerals, but many pigments come from the animals kingdom. Cochineal, for example, comes from the dried bodies of insects. A kind of pitch is also used for certain pigments.

Our Friend the Cow

Of all animals the cow is most to be respected by man. She is more closely allied to him in her relations than any other quadruped, and in fact was brought across the ocean by him when he began to settle upon the American continent.

The most common name for a place in England is Newton, which occurs no fewer than seventy-two times.

ROUGH TACTICS WIN PENNANTS

Baseball General of Bygone Day Believes in Real Warfare on the Diamond

Patsy Tebeau, one of the greatest of old-time managers, has no use for "kid glove" baseball. When he heard that President Ban Johnson regarded Manager Birmingham's Cleveland players as "too rough" Patsy expressed the opinion that the mollycoddle days had come.

"Show me a ball club that is fighting every inch of the way and I'll show you a team that is after the pennant," he said. "This having players shaking hands every time they meet is foolish. It gives the fans the wrong impression. You've got to get the fighting spirit to win.

"We never thought of greeting our opponents. Our idea was to get out and beat them. I can see a runner sliding to first with me playing the bag and getting his head pumped with the ball. 'Think I'd apologize? Not Patsy Tebeau! 'Get your head out of the way and you won't get hurt,' would be more like it. About a year ago I saw a fellow steal second. He came up all dust, and what do you think happened? Why, the second baseman helped him dust his uniform. And that team finished last in the race. That isn't my brand of baseball.

"Rush the other fellows off their feet. Make them think you're tough. Scare them to death and you've got them licked. We used to sit on the bench and file our spikes. They had to be sharp to give when they cut into the ground and at the same time the other team knew we wouldn't give an inch in a pinch. One day I was sharpening my spikes when I heard a man on the other team say, 'When Tebeau slides into me you bet I'm going to get out of the way.' I had him scared, eh?

"There's a difference between rowdyism and aggressiveness. The aggressive player will be on top when the parlor boy is at the bottom. Off the field, oh, well, that's different. On the field fight them to the last."

PATSY TEBEAU

Fighting manager of the old Cleveland Spiders.

BEN TINCUP IS RICH

Indian Pitcher Plays Ball Only Because He Likes It

The majority of ball players are in the game for the amount of money they can get out of it; a few play it because of their love for the pastime. Ben Tincup belongs to the latter class. Tincup is a Cherokee Indian pitcher the Phillies picked up. He hails from Texas, and is said to be the richest ball player in the world, and probably one of the wealthiest men in baseball.

When the Indian comes of age in a few months his yearly income will be over $50,000 a year. He already has $30,000 stored away in a bank, besides being the possessor of 600 acres of valuable oil lands in Oklahoma, which the Government is keeping for him. So if Tincup fails to make good in the big leagues he won't have any cause to worry.

Since he is one of the few remaining Cherokee Indians, all the Oklahoma lands are held in trust for him. As soon as he is 21 years old he will go to Washington to collect the dividends which are accumulating for him. As Tincup's allotment of land was among the oil fields he is wealthier than many of the other survivors of the Cherokee tribe.

Preparing in Time

Antwerp has already commenced to prepare for the Olympic games, to be held in that city in 1920. A committee has been formed, and the support of the most influential persons in Belgium obtained.

The town authorities are to obtain a vote of several million francs for the expenses, and everything is being done to make the event a huge success. In recent years Belgium has come to the fore in international sports.

Forgot Bride For Dog

So anxious was Charles Humer, of Carlisle, Pa., a noted wing shot, to recover a black and white pointer that he had lost that he forgot that it was his wedding day. When he was told an hour before the wedding by his kennel keeper that the dog had disappeared he rushed out of the house and started hunting through the woods of his estate and the wedding party was getting nervous when he was reached by phone after finding his dog. He hurried to the bride's home to explain as best he could that he had "forgotten."

The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the toughest bone,
The constant cooing lover carries off the blushing maid,
And the Constant Advertiser is the man who gets the Trade.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 12[illegible].

My Useful Gift.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"PETER," said Mary at last, "you've sat and gazed at that letter long enough. What's in it?"

"Nothing much," I said with an effort.

"You look upset," said Mary.

"It's just—it's just that I'm a bit upset," I said. "At dad and mother's goodness. They've given us the $250 I owe them, for a Christmas present."

"Well, do you know, Peter," said Mary, in a glow, "I hoped they'd do that, but I didn't dare say anything."

Mary's One Hope.

It was so horribly sordid in this moment of my thankfulness that I couldn't answer. A mercenary streak in a woman always offends me horribly. Yet I do firmly believe that women, as a class, are much more mercenary than men. They will sacrifice bigger things for money than men will. I never can get accustomed to the horrible fact that the world is full of women who sell their souls for clothes—that many a sweet, pretty girl, who shrinks from the women on the street, sells her body to the wife-hunting millionaire.

"Why should they give us the money?" I managed to say it at last. "What made you think of it?"

"Oh, I don't know," said Mary airily. "I just did, that's all. Hurry up with your coffee, Peter. I'm dying to know what you've got for me."

I gulped down the rest of my coffee and nervously produced my Christmas gift. Now, Mary had wanted most of all a year's art instruction with Casetti, an Italian artist down town, but, tempted as I was to give her what she had talked of most, my prudence had in the end rescued me. I couldn't afford it and, therefore, I didn't.

Mary Is Disappointed.

I had bought her instead a warm red woollen dressing gown—a thing which she had needed badly and spoken of before Christmas loomed in sight, bringing with it a horde of more frivolous suggestions.

Mary's face fell.

"It—it's very pretty," she said. But I could see she made a great effort to receive it gracefully.

"Don't you like it?" I asked.

"Of course I like it," exclaimed Mary, with tearful brightness. "It's perfectly lovely, Peter, just too lovely for anything—but—"

When a woman begins to punctuate her conversation with lustreless italics, I always have a fretful sense of hypocrisy. So often I hear women say: "Mrs. L. is a perfectly lovely woman—just a dear, you know—but—" And the "but" is the fuse to the whole mine of insincerity behind it.

Mary's "just too lovely for anything—but" was quite enough for me.

"But—?" I hinted.

What I Drew.

"But," said Mary, "I did expect a year's course with Casetti. You remember I spoke of it? It—it's all right, Peter, truly—I'm sorry if I seemed disappointed; and I do need the dressing gown."

"I'm sorry, too," I said bluntly; "but Mary, I honestly could not afford that year's instruction with Casetti. It would count up more in a year than you realize. What do I draw forth from the Christmas grab-bag?"

I drew slippers and socks—I knew I would. I drew a tie that resembled a cubist sunset. Not that it was so brilliant, but it was delicately suggestive of spats and afternoon tea. And, then, Mary shot her final bolt.

"Peter," she said, stroking my hair, "since your father and mother have given you the two hundred and fifty, I can take the art course anyway! What do you think of that?"

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

Am 19 years old and this winter had a sweetheart who came about four or five nights of each week to see me. He kept this up for about two months, then he got so he didn't come but about three times a week. He was very jealous.

"So one Sunday while he was out of town I went down to a cafe with another boy friend of mine. A few remarks were made about him being so jealous and afraid for me to walk down the street with another boy. Now it so happened that an old girl of his who has just returned to the city heard these remarks and went and told him every word.

When he came back he didn't come to see me any more, but, instead, went to call upon this girl. Everyone said that he would keep company with her when she came back, for they had gone together for so long. He told me that he never wrote to her this winter (which he did) in order to keep me from being jealous.

I have left that town now and I don't know whether to write to him or not. I think a great deal of him and I know he did of me at one time. I thought that maybe if I did write to him he might show it to this girl. What would you do if you were me?

ANXIOUS.

WELL, that's what happens when you tell too much and too loud at the same time.

To begin with, you were very foolish to let any man take five evenings of your week—unless you were really engaged to him. No wonder he began to arrive a little less often.

Sugar is very sweet, you know, and so is candy. But just think of eating them for three meals a day. Nothing precious ever comes so easily—and nothing that is so easy to get ever stays precious—very long.

Honest and truly now, didn't you say what you did say just on purpose, for this other girl to hear? Didn't you want her to be a little jealous herself? And wasn't that why you talked so loud—and so much? So he was writing to her all the time—while he was making such desperate love to you.

Well, now, the best thing both of you two girls can do is to get rid of that young man just as fast as you can. He's made a fool of both of you—and undoubtedly there's a third dear little goose believing every word he says to her right now. Don't be so easily fooled by sweet words next time.

These easy love-makers have always had a great deal of experience. That's how it comes so easy.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

THE LATEST SWIMMING SUIT

Very Close Fitting So You Can Swim When You Bathe

WHEN you want a swimming suit, don't ask the saleswoman for a bathing suit. The latter is only first cousin to the former.

Annette Kellermann says every woman ought to swim. She also says that women can't swim if they are all "dolled up" in corsets and fluffy, ruffly suits, which incorporate all the styles featured of an afternoon toilet.

One of the new suits is shown here. It is of silk and wool mixture knitted like a fine sweater. The color is the new shade of green. There are knickers and a garment which is half sweater and half jersey, which fits the figure closely, extends down on the hips and is held at the waist by a white wash leather or rubber belt.

It is really a very smart and becoming affair. Lest it appear somewhat shocking to conservative women, there is a skirt either of the same knitted fabric, which is like the jersey-topped petticoats, or of waterproof satin in the same color. This fastens with snaps and may be shed as the swimmer leaves the beach for the water and donned again as she comes out of the ocean.

The little cap is of rubberized satin trimmed with rubber fruit. The parasol matches the suit in color and has a long white handle.

The newest bathing wrap is a fascinating painted cape of thin[illegible], most supple gray rubber cut long in front and back, reaching below the skirt of the suit and being shorter at the sides, so it just reaches the bend of the elbow.

It is trimmed all about the neck, down the front and over the sides with a garland of tiny rubber roses and leaves.

The majority of the bathing suits are in sombre colors, black or blue. There may be a bright splash of color in the trimming or the cap, but the fashionable bathing suits are not in rainbow shades.

Stockings and sandals give the opportunity for contrast, but I am told the best dressed women wear the same color as the suit, or black stockings with white sandals.

Suit, Parasol and Stockings All of One Color.

CITY FOLK AND COUNTRY COUSINS

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

PROF. THOMAS D. WOOD of Columbia University has been investigating the children—he and his committee. They've studied the children from Idaho, from Massachusetts, from Pennsylvania, from New Jersey and from Virginia.

They've been peering into throats and tapping chests, and measuring arms and weighing bodies, and fussing over the eyesight and fuming over the teeth. They've made histories of diseases and taken notes—and looked into records—and what Prof. Thomas D. Wood of Columbia University and his committee do not know about the American child, physically speaking, doesn't seem to be worth knowing.

And the thing that stands out at the very head and front of the report of that committee is—that the country child is below normal and defective, and in need of medical attention—in amazing percentage.

The city child is better nourished, better watched, better taken care of and better protected than the country child, says the report of the committee—and everybody is saying, "Well, did you ever?" and "Who'd ever think it?" at a great rate.

It does seem a little surprising—before you get to thinking of it—but it really isn't, after all. The rude health that is supposed to flourish in the country districts is just one of those things that ought to be true—and isn't.

Do you remember the first summer you spent in the country—not in the mountains or at the seashore—but in the real country? You couldn't find a soul to go for a walk with you—the woods were "too far," and the hills were "too hard to climb," and the meadows were "way off yonder."

And when you went to spend the afternoon with the daughters of a neighboring farmer you walked to their door through an orchard thick with perfume, and green with growing beauty—and found them sitting in a stuffy room making crocheted lace that never looked like anything except appropriate trimming for a wash-rag.

Health Shut Outside.

And they never even invited you into the orchard, though you hinted and hinted—and there wasn't a flower in the house, or a branch of green, and all the doors were shut and every window was down. Mother was in the kitchen frying doughnuts, and Sister was in the dining room sewing carpet rags, and Auntie was there painting china—perfect ladies, every one of them. They were absolutely struck dumb with horror at the very idea of traipsing out in the sun and getting all sunburned.

It's quite sane and sensible for her to shut herself in a stuffy house and have the headache. It's eminently proper for her to stew over a hot stove, and make so much jelly that nobody knows where on earth to put it. It's quite the thing for her to tear rags into strips, and sew them together again, just to be doing—but to walk for pleasure, or to ride for fun, or to drive for the air—why, the very idea!

That's the sort of place that the country child comes from. The child who sleeps in a room with the windows tight shut and locked, from one year's end to the other. The child who eats fat pork, saleratus biscuit and sorghum molasses three times a day. The child who has a cough and is kind of peaked for months before any one thinks of sending for a doctor and finding out whether it is tuberculosis that makes him cough or not.

Go into any country school and you'll find half a dozen children who are called by the teacher "sort o' queer."

I asked a country school teacher about two of her boys just last summer. "Oh," she said, "Dan's an odd stick—always was, and always will be. I never bother him much about lessons. And Mary—why, Mary's two sisters were in my room last year, and they were both queer, the same as she is."

And nobody with half an eye could look at poor Dan without seeing that he could hardly breathe on account of adenoids—and that little Mary was slightly deaf, and a bit near-sighted—and there was nothing else in the world the matter with the poor child. If either of those children had been in a city school they would have been examined and treated—and cured, as a matter of course.

How can country children be healthy, when they are born of country mothers and fathers?

Did you ever see a woman past thirty in the country who didn't look every day of her age, and ten years more at that? Did you ever know an average farmer of forty who didn't look sixty and act it? Why, they begin to talk about getting along in years when they turn the corner at thirty—in the country.

What's to Be Done?

And, then, the moral surroundings. I don't see why a boy is any better off hobnobbing with some wandering tramp of a hired man in the barn Sunday afternoon than he would be joining some boys' club in a neighborhood house in town.

The city does take the character and the individuality out of a child—there's no question in the world of that. Every big man and every big woman in America was born or brought up in the country—but big men and big women are the exception. What are we going to do about the rule?

Of course, when you take care of people all the time, they may not be quite so able to take care of themselves sometimes, but, on the whole, is there anything so very astonishing about the report which Prof. Wood and his assistants have made? I wish I could be surprised at it—but somehow I'm afraid I'm not.

I was born and brought up in the country myself, and I've seen every member of a family down with typhoid fever, and not a soul in the village trying to find out whether the water that these people drank was contaminated or not.

I've seen a whole school full of children drinking water which came from a well at the edge of an old-fashioned country graveyard, and there was great talk of the dispensations of Providence whenever one of the children who drank that poisoned water sickened and died.

City people are accustomed to meddlings. We're used to the gas man and the garbage man, the water man and the electric light man, the board of health and the board of education—and we're thankful to the person who calls us up over the 'phone and tells us that there's a defective sewer in our premises, and that we must attend to it at once—or pay the penalty.

You call up a farmer and tell him that the water from his well is dangerous because it drains from a manure pile, and he'll tell you to mind your business. And you'll have to mind it—or get into trouble.

You've pointed out an interesting state of things, Dr. Wood. Now, then, what are we going to do about it?

Do tell us in good, plain English—so that we can all understand.

The NUMBER NINE and Its ODDITIES

HERE is a chance for the little ones to do some figuring [illegible] the number [illegible] for the [illegible] the rule [illegible] the number [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] you once use it you can't get rid of it. It will turn up again, no matter what you do to get it "down and out."

All through the multiplication table the product of 9 comes 9. No matter what you multiply with or how many times you repeat or change the figures, the result is always the same.

For instance, twice 9—18; add 8 and 1 and you have 9. Three times 9—27; 2 plus 7 make 9 again. Go on until you try 11 times 9—99. This seems to bring an exception. But add the digits—9 and 9 make 18, and, again, 1 and 8 make 9. Go on to an interminable extent, and the thing continues.

Take any number at random. For example, 459 times 9 equals 4131, and the digits, added, make 9 once more. Take [illegible] and again you have 5 and 4.

Take any row of figures, reverse their order, and subtract the less from the greater—the total will certainly be always 9 or a multiple of 9. For example, take 5071—1705 plus 3366. Add these digits and you have 18—and 1 and 8 make the familiar 9.

You have the same result, no matter how you raise the numbers by squares and cubes.

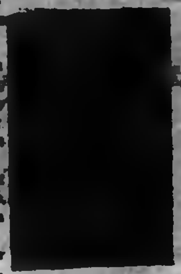
One more way is shown by which number 9 shows its strange powers. Write down any number you please, add its digits, and then subtract the sum of said digits from the original number. No matter what numbers you start with, the sum of the digits in the answer will be 9.

Try these experiments and you will be delighted with the exact manner in which they prove the statement. Some clever puzzles have been made based on these fixed principles.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Neglect of First Teeth Causes Ills in Later Life

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).



DR. HIRSHBERG

JOHNNY returned to school with this note from his mother:

"Dear Teacher: You keep tellin' my boy to brush with his paloto. Mayb rich children has got palotos, but how about when there father only makes $1 a day and has got six children to keep? First its one thing, then its another, and now its palates. That's the worst yet."

It is much the same with Johnny's first teeth. First it's one thing and then it's another, and many mothers, despite the free dental clinics, still lay their neglect of a child's milk teeth to their own poverty.

Like Topsy, most children are allowed to "just grow up" without regard to the condition of their teeth. Although they are commanded to "wash their faces," "don't dare to sit at the table with dirty hands" and "it's about time you practised your music lesson," never a word is said about "clean your teeth" or "stop in at the dentist."

Neglect of a child's first teeth is responsible for more ills of adult life than is usually realized. The fact that the first teeth act as arches to resist the inward pressure of the lips and to maintain cosmetic symmetry should make their importance mean assiduous attention from earliest infancy onwards.

Guides to Second Teeth.

If the first teeth are correctly safeguarded, the permanent and second teeth slip snugly into the grooves of the first. They are thus retained in proper place, interlocked by their cusps. Cusps are the projections of the crown of a tooth.

Spaces should not be allowed between the first teeth. If so, where the points of contact are lost pressure of the lips crowd the teeth. This causes deformity of the second set.

The first teeth should, if possible, never be drawn out. When this occurs the second teeth have to force their way through the toughened, scar tissue of the gums.

If the first teeth decay, especially the pulp, germs enter and infect them, abscesses form, and serious mischief ensues in the gums. When this misdemeanor occurs, the roots of the first teeth fail to be absorbed, and become obstructions to the second ones. It causes the latter to become crooked.

The economic fallacy that "it's no use to spend money to fill the first, because they have to come out soon anyway," is one of those corrupting influences which saps the very vitals of civilization.

Cavities in the first teeth not only work ultimate damage to the permanent teeth, but they mar beauty, cause pain, and, worst of all, become the nesting place for some stray bacillus of tuberculosis, joint fever, diphtheria or a worse malady.

Ills from Neglect.

The wise modern mother must sacrifice her own duties, her own pleasure, and even a child's schooling, if need be, to have his teeth properly filled and looked after.

If general knowledge kept pace with the facts: if mothers, grandmothers and neighbors thoroughly understood that the weak chins, protruding lips, ugly faces, coated tongues, chronic constipation and other life-long complaints were caused by their failure to take advantage of many useful procedures there might be a different story to tell in the statistics of aches and pains of adult life.

Answers to Health Questions

R. C.—My dentist, who is a professor and recognized all over the world, says that the deposits around two of my receding gums are "uric acid" from the stomach and the blood, to which he says I am subject. 2—Why, if this is true, does the uric acid attack only two teeth and not the others? 3—What effect has milk of magnesia on this?

Your professor of dentistry is enthralled, as are most dentists, in the ancient delusion of "uric acid" nonsense. These deposits are not "uric acid," despite what the professor says. 2—Slight defects in teeth, gums and tissues generally cause food, bacteria and debris to collect in the sore spots, and a mixture of salts, acids and coagulated albumen gather there. 3—Milk of magnesia is a mechanical and a chemical cleanser.

Use the electric brush and massage your scalp well with the finger tips to prevent the hair falling out.

For dandruff try this: Resorcin, 10 grains; sulphur, 30 grains, and red vaseline, with any pleasant scent, one ounce. Massage this well into your scalp on alternate nights.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

The bean has a delightful history, and there is just enough doubt about its origin to keep one interested. It has been known for centuries, and has had all manner of evil attributed to it. There was a time when beans were supposed to cloud the vision of the one who ate them, and to cast a spell upon him.

Cucumbers belong to the same family as the gourd and the melons. They are supposed to have been grown in India ages ago.

Tomatoes came from Peru and Mexico, and have an interesting history. There was a time when they were not considered fit food for human beings. Certain superstitions have been woven into their history. Later, when they were introduced into North America, they were known as "love apples."

Apples were eaten by the ancient Romans because of their health-giving properties. They are natives of Asia and grew wild, the original apple being very much like the crabapple which is now used for jelly.

There has always been more or less botanical controversy [illegible] the ancestry of the peach. It is generally agreed that it came from [illegible]. Some botanists contend that it is of the same family as the almond. Others give the credit of its first cultivation to Persia, where it is called "Persian apple."

Strange as it may seem, the pear and the rose have a family connection which is peculiar. They seem also to have had similar beginnings.

Three Minute Journeys

WHERE FARMERS WORK TO MUSIC

By Temple Manning

IN Central Soudan, which lies in the heart of Central Africa, I found unexpected hospitality among the Gwari. These strange black men have a high degree of civilization, particularly in farming pursuits. They have a number of towns in which one may see peculiar customs still current, but it is on the farms just outside of these towns that I found the greatest interest.

All work that is of any importance is carried on to the accompaniment of music. The bandsmen go out to the fields with the workers and stand around, dressed in monkey or goat skins, playing the fife or a drum. Sometimes, on state occasions, there will be an entire native band made up of fifes, drums, pipes and native violins.

Whenever there is any work being carried on, the big men of the village are to be found in the fields, smoking their pipes, each having brought his quota of workers. It is very curious to watch them as they stroll around. Here they will stop and solemnly salute the workers for their energy, and across the field they will again come to a halt and rebuke some other worker for his slackness.

The old men are sure to be found under the trees smoking their pipes, while other bandsmen of equal rank, but of less age, are beating their drums to cheer their less lofty companions on to greater labors. But at a wart-hog be flushed in the nearby woods and every one will desert the work and give chase.

Off through the woods they will go, the drum men giving an occasional rally to urge them on, until the dog has brought the hog to bay. Then the men stand and watch the combat between the dog and hog, shouting loudly and making unbearable noise. But, when the hog has been dispatched, they all hurry back to their work and the bandsmen beat their drums the harder to make up for lost time.

Keeping to the Drum.

CHEAP RATE ADVERTISING

(To the Editor of The Times)

Sir,—Many of us have been thinking of forming a league for the suppression of free advertising. I am sure your excellent journal will agree with that plan. It is all very well for public men or people generally to air their views on public matters. That is the way committees develop. That was the life and soul of the greatest city of ancient times, Athens. But private parties are sometimes too fond of advertising themselves at the public expense. In Peterborough at any rate, and only for its good or for the newspapers' good either, Mr. Editor. Now for example, what is the good of long reports about cases in the police courts where Lawyer So-and-So appears to be a great criminal counsel or a man of parts? He defends some beast who ten to one ought to be in gaol or get the lash, and all the nasty business is brought before the public. I don't want my growing children to read such stuff. It [illegible] all the good their parents can do them. Indeed, [illegible] [illegible] and frequently all [illegible] Lawyer So-and-So wants is cheap advertising at the [illegible] cheap rate. Well! It's too cheap, Mr. Editor, altogether too cheap and too nasty. A committee [illegible] brought a very clever man here to teach the grown-ups how to behave themselves in ordinary matters of every day life, sort of how to hold their knife and fork, don't you know. Dr. Gordon is a fine speaker, and I think did good. But what would he say to the drunks, [illegible] "brought out" by lawyers who ought to wait to shine in more elevated circles in the upper courts. If they can. Brought to be decent, [illegible] did not appear in these cases much of the "good" of long reports would not arise and we would have fewer such reports. The criminal or drunks when punished get what's coming to them without being dangled before the eyes of the community and when innocent, instead of getting off they are still pointed at by the gossips as "havin bin in court" [illegible]. [illegible] of the advertising. I have heard of. It is no good and I can tell you it ought to be stopped. And while I am at it Sir it is all wrong for people to shoot in the newspapers from behind hedges, the way they used to do at home (you haven't any hedges in this country), at our public men. Its cowardly and doesn't give the man attacked half a chance. It does no good for no self-respecting man would read [illegible] "Well! If that is true why don't he put his name to it?" That kind of attack is never resorted to by self-respecting people. It's only the "niggers" that get behind the hedge or the woodpile Mr. Editor and the public knows it.

Great Cost of the War

As the present European war is the greatest in the preserved history of mankind, so also is it beyond all comparisons the most costly. The wealth being expended would have confused the imaginations of a Croesus, would have exhausted the treasuries of the world in a period not extremely remote. When the British Parliament reassembled this week the House of Commons without a dissenting voice voted an appropriation of $1,125,000,000, a sum larger than the entire national debt of the United States as reported last year. With the same unanimity the House authorized the raising of a million more troops although, as Premier Asquith stated, 1,200,000 already are under arms.

These immense provisions for the immediate future indicate an inexorable fixity of purpose on the part of the British government and nation. Germany's determination is undoubtedly as positive, and the resources of that country are still great in volume and diversity. The war may last long before either side is exhausted. Meantime its cost in treasure and in blood is becoming of volume almost incomprehensible, and vast is the burden which must lie upon Europe for generations to come.

The Difference is Wide

A correspondent who says he is a constant reader of this newspaper, mentions a recent article on the bomb outrages in New York City, in which the criminals were mentioned as "reds," and in a temperate, kindly manner he asks if socialists were meant, he being a socialist and calling himself a "red" on account of the color of the flag the Social Democrats of various countries have adopted. The word was not used with that intention, intelligent people generally appreciating that Socialism is not inconsistent with pure citizenship and the most benevolent of motives.

But red is the color of blood, and the red flag has long been symbolical of revolution, and its adoption by Socialists in France and other parts of Europe is not remarkable in the light of nineteenth century history. That ignorance is prone to confuse socialism with anarchism, and the anarchists have frequently proclaimed themselves as "reds." In the United States the term has been commonly applied to their cult. The Chicago anarchists were called "reds" thirty years ago.

Cure Children's Colds By External Treatment

Mothers Will Find Nothing So Speedy and Reliable as Old-Time "Nerviline"

It's really a shame to upset a young child's stomach by internal dosing, when external treatment will so promptly break up a cold.

When your boy comes in after play with his feet soaking wet, his throat hoarse and sore, his little chest tight and congested, just apply Nerviline. Give him a vigorous rubbing over his throat, and put lots of Nerviline on his chest and rub it right in. To make Nerviline penetrate more quickly cover his chest and throat with a hot flannel bandage. This treatment WON'T fail. Your boy will be feeling better in half an hour, and you will have the satisfaction of knowing you have warded off perhaps a cold or grippe, or illness that might have laid him up.

Nerviline is mighty good for preventing colds and for breaking up a bad one, too. For general family use it cures all sorts of external aches and pains—you simply can't beat it. Try it for earache, toothache, neuralgia, sciatica, lame back, rheumatism, or lumbago. Wherever there is congestion, inflammation or pain in the joints or muscles, Nerviline will cure mighty quick. The large 50c. family size bottle is so economical, so useful, it should be in every home. There is also a small 25c. size. Dealers anywhere sell Nerviline.

INVASION ALARM IS A DREAM

London, Nov. 17.—"Regarding your conduct in the event of an enemy landing in the neighborhood of Eastbourne, I am commanded by the Army Council to inform you that there is nothing in the present situation which would warrant the assumption that invasion is probable or imminent and that the various defensive works, constructed in the United Kingdom, are only the normal precautions taken by every maritime power in the time of war."

Such is the answer of the War Office to talk of invasion which has been current lately. The extract quoted above is taken from a letter received from the War Office by a civilian, who had asked for instructions in the event of an attack upon England. It will bring comfort to the few people who have been alarmed by the desperate efforts of the Germans to reach Calais and by the press announcement of their intentions to make England the next object of attack.

Reliance on the Fleet

Generally, however, the statement does not come as a surprise. In permitting the public to entertain entirely erroneous impressions of the impregnability of Antwerp, the military authorities blundered. It would have been much better to have prepared the people for that loss. When Ostend also fell into Prussian hands, the press, as a whole, took the bit between its teeth, and London newspapers were full of articles written, we think with the definite purpose of preparing the public with every possible emergency. There was talk of raids on the English coast, of huge German guns which would whirl projectiles half way across the channel, of unparalleled activity in the construction of Zeppelins which were to attack the British fleet and later Great Britain.

The result of the "invasion" articles was to create some measure of alarm, though from the Canadian letters we have received, We believe that there was much more concern in the Dominion than there was in the United Kingdom. Englishmen have too great confidence in their fleet to entertain serious thoughts of invasion for any protracted period. That fleet still commands the seas. The Kaiser must smash it before he can attempt serious operations against the British coast. Anxiety, too, was early set at rest by the realization that Germany was deliberately attempting by press propaganda to create panic in the British Isles. Soon the tide turned and there was some criticism of English papers for "assisting" the Germans in their "scare" campaign.

Now London is tranquil. The first great attempt of the enemy to take Calais has failed. There is reason to believe that they will meet with no greater success in a second effort. But it is realized that men and ever more men must be thrown into France to strengthen the allies, and recruiting is going on with renewed activity. By the spring Britain will be ready to throw a million men into the field. Then the Kaiser will find what it means to challenge half the world.

FISH STORIES

Lightning Killed a Bass Weighing Eleven Pounds

From the Eastern Townships of Quebec there came a story of an eleven-pound black bass killed by lightning. That was pretty good. Nobody had over seen an eleven-pound black bass before in the world, and nobody had ever seen a fish killed by lightning. The story was a double-edged stroke of genius. Next from the New England States there came a story of a lad who rammed his fist into the gills of a fish in diving and landed another big one. And this was followed up by a story from Baltimore, where an old tar tells of having his ship lifted out of the water on the back of an enormous whale.

A Viper Killer

The official viper-killer of France has a dress composed of 900 skins of venomous reptiles. He receives a small payment for the head of every viper he destroys.

Ensuring Potato Crop

Canadian western farmers are remarkably ingenious in assuring themselves a crop. At least they are reported to be. An Ontario farmer tells of an incident that occurred when he was paying a visit to a relative farmer in the Canadian West. He followed the trail for many miles and finally found his relative digging in a field. The man dug about eight inches and rooted out a good hill of potatoes. He dug to another depth and revealed a second hill. At still another depth a third hill of potatoes was forthcoming.

Mystified, the farmer from the east questioned the digger concerning the magnificent crop of potatoes, by hills, three deep. "Well," he said, "we plant them three deep this way in order to be sure of one crop at least. You see, in a dry season the upper hill is killed by drought, and in a very dry season the second hill is also lost, but it never gets so dry that the bottom hill is destroyed. On the other hand, when the season is wet the bottom hill rots, in a very wet season the middle hill goes as well, but it never gets so wet that the top hill is destroyed. In the third place, in a favorable season the result is three crops, as you see.—Toronto Globe.

WITH THE SOCKEYES

An Irresistible Lure to the People on the Coast

A rare and beautiful spectacle, seen once a year in coast towns like Vancouver, is that of the flotilla of fishing boats which dot the fresh and salt waters. It is at night when the beacon lights of these cities of boats beckon from across the waves that the interested observer gets anything like an adequate conception of the number of those who hearken annually to the call of the sockeye which has since time immemorial proved an irresistible lure to the dwellers of the Pacific. These temporary boat cities claim an interesting variety of citizens for their floating population, from the man who is out for the mere sport of it to the cannery representative on business intent. It is an occasion when all nationalities are at one in a common interest, and the white man, the Japanese and the Indian sink their tribal differences at Neptune's altar. Along the shores of civilized and populated districts the salmon-nets are the chief ammunition of warfare and the sibilant, syphon-like sounds emanating from the wooden buttons which buoy them up from the boats possess a weird fascinating music unlike any other sound existent, and which invariably associates them with salmon hunting in the Pacific. In the wilds up the Fraser the Indian may be seen fishing in a more primitive manner with his home-made dip-net. But he is none the less skilful for that, and one might think that he is in league with the sockeye, so thoroughly is he versed in the secret of their ways and so successfully does he capture them. He is the most picturesque of all the fishermen and the unconscious harmony of his rhythmical movement as he raises and lowers his awkward dip-net from some precarious niche of the canyon walls fits him with the picture as perfectly as the jack pine under whose shadow he works.

THE FARM WOODLOT

Free Expert Advice Obtainable on the Subject of Proper Care

With the increasing inaccessibility of the forests and the consequent high price of wood, the small wooded areas common on the farms of Canada are also increasing in economic value. They frequently occupy soils unfitted for agriculture and with a little care can be made to furnish the farmer with a continuous revenue in fuel, fence-posts, rails, poles and structural timber.

Unfortunately these woodlots are frequently allowed to deteriorate through carelessness or lack of knowledge on the part of the farmer. He takes great care to farm his agricultural lands to the best advantage, but often fails to realize that by farming his woodlot with the same care, he could get the same increase in productiveness. Cattle and weeds are not permitted in a wheat-field, yet in the woodlot the cattle range at will, and instead of removing the weed-trees the farmer allows these to increase in number, removing only the trees best suited to his purpose.

To save the farmer from himself, the Dominion Government appointed a technical forester with head-quarters at the Forestry Branch, Ottawa, whose principal duty is to answer all inquiries, and give free advice on these matters. If necessary, arrangements can be made for a personal inspection of woodland properties by this expert. No conditions are imposed on the owner of the woodland, it being assumed that he who is anxious for advice will accept it when given. The expert looks over the stand, determines what species of trees are best suited to the soil and to the local market, shows how to improve the character of the crop and its rate of growth by proper thinnings, and, if desired, gives advice regarding tree-planting, hardwood-coppicing, felling-methods and the most profitable sizes to be grown.

HENS AS BAROMETERS

A poultry fancier near Durham, England, produced curious results by altering and alternating the food given to his fowls.

It is known to many who have reared canaries for the market that Cayenne pepper, put into their food results in a notable difference in the character and shade of their plumage, giving the feathers a smoothness and reddish tinge which adds very much to the sum for which the birds may ordinarily be sold.

If the same ingredient be added to the diet, especially of white hens which have been hatched from carefully-selected eggs, their feathers become pale rose, and they flush to a brilliant red when the weather is damp and a storm is approaching. These hens thus become veritable barometers, and the progression of color from pale to brilliant is so exact that a scarlet hen stalking about the barnyard is regarded as certain prophecy of a storm which may be as much as twelve hours distant.—Tit-Bits.

Clay in Concrete

Although the effect of clay on the strength of concrete is not definitely known, its presence is presumed by most engineers to be an element of weakness.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs — all young foxes — good for at least 20 years. This Company has bought some of this year's cubs on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in handling foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $[illegible] worth of stock for themselves. $[illegible] worth has already been disposed of, leaving $[illegible] to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent., in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say— "We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $[illegible] and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to the shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs shipped from Prince Edward Island, Canada, to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each: 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the fine ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four foxes, this is equal to 40 pairs, and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., yet should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain English what we can do for you—and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business—and judge for yourself [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown [illegible] newspapers.

The Thrifty Frenchman Finds the Ring Stepping Stone to Fortune

Georges Carpentier, the French pugilistic champion, is very fond of stage life which his success enabled him to take up; also he is proud of his ability to make a huge income by his ring and theatrical engagements.

"It is very strange to be making so much money in such a pleasant way," said Carpentier. "When my manager discovered me I was 15½ years old, and I was earning only a franc a day in a coal mine. When he wished me to go in for training my parents were unwilling to lose even that amount of money, but he said he himself would pay the franc a day.

"In my first year I made $100 in the next $700, in the third $5,000, in the fourth $20,000 and now I am making about $50,000 a year. My parents, to whom I gave my first $5,000, rejoice very much in my success, and, indeed, I think there are few who at my age make as much money as I have been able to."

Glorious War

M. Philmore, a French statistician, calculates that the war in the Balkans cost the belligerent countries $800,000,000. The money went for ammunition that was fired away, arms that were largely lost or broken, for soldiers' clothing that was worn out, food, etc. There is nothing material to show for it. The situation is as if a fire had swept over the land and destroyed so much property. The countries as a whole and the people individually are poorer than they were when the war began. Their case illustrates what the waste of war means.—Montreal Gazette.

MONEY IN WOODLOTS

Scientific Principles to be Followed to Secure Best Results

There is no part of the farm which will give bigger returns for so little expenditure of time and labor as the woodlot, says Mr. B. R. Morton, expert forester for the Dominion Government, and there are three ways in which the farmer, by the exercise of ordinary common sense, can vastly improve the composition, production and reproduction of his woodlot.

The first thing necessary is to improve the character of the crop, which can be done by cutting down and using for firewood all diseased and deformed trees, as well as such species whose presence in the woodlot is not desirable. Only too frequently is the method of cutting exactly the reverse. The best trees are cut, often for purposes for which an inferior wood would serve. Firewood probably yields the best returns for a small acreage and for this purpose rapid-growers such as poplar, ash and elm should be encouraged, which should make an annual growth of from one-half to one cord per acre. Basswood, too, will be in increasing demand because of its rapid growth, because it coppices readily and because of its value in small sizes for the manufacture of excelsior, cooperage stock and other small articles for which the wood is particularly adapted. Maple reproduces readily, and although not a rapid grower, it nevertheless yields a substantial revenue when it becomes large enough to tap. Soft woods like spruce, balsam and pine grow much more rapidly than hardwoods and might be advantageously grown for fuel or pulpwood.

When the most suitable species have been selected and the weed-trees removed, the woodlot must then be thinned until the crowns of the best-formed remaining trees are seen to barely touch.

The third requisite in the scientific farming of the woodlot is that the cattle be kept out, especially after heavy cutting, when reproduction is most desired. Cattle are just as injurious to a young crop of tree-seedlings as they are to a young crop of grain. They may indeed eat the grass in the woodlot, but they would just as soon, if not sooner, eat the young and tender hardwood shoots, and the same can be said of sheep. Even coniferous seedlings are not immune, so that certainty in production is only assured by fencing off the cut-over areas.

ABOUT WOOD-FILLERS

The Man Who Works About the Home Needs This Information

Open-grained woods require paste filling. [illegible] "hard woods." The varieties found in use are ash, beech, butternut, baywood, black walnut, chestnut, elm, mahogany, oak and rosewood.

Close-grained woods such as bass, cedar, redwood, gum, poplar, cypress and whitewood are filled with liquid fillers, being [illegible].

There is another class of woods that occupy an in[illegible] place, though they might properly be classed with the close-grained woods, namely, birch, cherry, circassian walnut and maple. They are sometimes filled with paste filler, sometimes with liquid filler.

Chestnut and some oaks are very open-pored and not only require filling but often two fillings and a stiff paste. The purpose of the paste filler is to fill up the openings in the tissue of the wood, the liquid part of the filler saturating the tissue and so to some extent preventing the wood robbing the varnish coat and occasioning pin-holing, etc. For this purpose it is best to sometimes apply a coat of liquid filler over the paste filling, and in some instances another coat of paste filler over the liquid is best. In any case the idea is to form a hard and impermeable foundation for the varnish coats that are to follow.

A filler should be colored to match the wood; but should be made a shade or so darker. The following is a very good formula for making a paste filler: Mix two parts of best coach japan and three parts of raw linseed oil, both by weight. To this liquid add enough finely pulverized silica to form a stiff paste. The mass needs to be thoroughly mixed.

A white liquid filler is sometimes desirable, and the following is a good one. In one gallon of raw linseed oil put two pounds of pale powdered resin, and place in a suitable vessel on the stove until the resin has melted, stirring meanwhile. Then remove from the fire and add one pint of white japan dried and two quarts of turpentine; stir well, then set aside to cool; when cold, stir in eight ounces of corn starch. After which thin with turpentine and pass it through a strainer.

ARTIFICIAL PEARLS

Most of Them Merely Glass Balls With Lustrous Coating Inside

The industry of manufacturing artificial pearls has developed enormously of late years, both in extent and in the remarkable degree of perfection which these imitations of the natural gem have attained; some of them almost defying detection save under the close scrutiny of the keenest experts.

The simplest forms are uniformly spherical and are merely glass balls blown by means of tubes of varying sizes. More ingenious and more natural-looking are the irregular pearls or perles goitreuses. To produce these the workman sometimes merely touches the ball momentarily with the end of a redhot tube, thus melting the glass at the point of contact and drawing it out irregularly. In other cases he touches one spot or another of the ball to a flame, at the same time blowing gently in the tube. The ball is pierced by two holes, one of which is caused by the breath of the workman, and the other by the hollow in the tube at the moment when this is detached from the pearl by means of a slight tap.

These balls are then merely coated inside with a preparation known as "essence of the Orient." This, despite its elaborate title, consists merely of pure water holding in solution the scales of the little fish known as the bleak-fish. The operation consists in the sucking of the liquid into a tube drawn out to a fine point and then blowing it into the glass bead, which is then given a rotary motion to spread the coating evenly.

The beads when coated are placed in a sieve whose bottom is covered with parchment and shaken incessantly till dry. Finally they are filled with wax so as to be less fragile and a little heavier.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

A REAL ESTATE YARN

Ex-Mayor Waugh of Winnipeg told a real estate yarn in a way that was as [illegible] as the story itself. A real estate agent, selling California city lots in the mid-West, entered a town when it appeared to be deserted. Discovering that the town was virtually paying its respects to one of its departed citizens, the agent, seeing no chance of doing business, joined himself to the company of mourners in the cemetery chapel. He entered as the clergyman was asking anyone who would like to say a word in memory of the deceased, let him now come forward. No one accepting the invitation, despite a repetition of the request, the real estate salesman rose and respectfully said: "Mr. Minister, as no one seems anxious to say a word for the deceased, and as I didn't know him when he was alive, perhaps you will permit me to tell you something about some California lots that I have to sell."

BUSINESS IN 2,000 B.C.

The Babylonians and Their Neighbors Knew of "Short Cuts"

The deciphering of the old Babylonian records of clay have revealed some very interesting facts with reference to business life two thousand years before Christ. In many cases these records relate to trade transactions, to business disputes, incident to the ordinary, every-day doings of the merchants, and to their troubles as to the title to property. There are even data to show how the Babylonians and their neighbors conducted their accounting systems. Nearly four thousand years ago these people had so far progressed in "business" that it was actually found necessary to enact special laws to deal with those who were trying the "short cuts" to wealth. The young man with "prospects," like his prototypes of to-day, was wont to utilize these prospects in negotiation with the professional money-lender. The banker of Babylon deposited regularly and issued his brick "cheques" and bills of exchange, and the law intervened, as it does to-day, to uphold the rights of property. Most careful accounts of revenue and expenditure were kept. These show in many cases that investments in loans and purchases of land, as well as other profitable dealings, were a regular part of the fiscal activities.

BUILDING MATERIALS

Valuable Resources Being Gradually Opened up in Western Canada

With the exception of British Columbia there is very little building stone produced in Western Canada. This is due to two causes. First the rocks which underlie the developed portions of the Prairie Provinces are of comparatively recent age, and are, consequently, soft in character and weather rapidly; second, there are very few rock exposures in the settled portions of these provinces, except in the Rocky Mountains and the foot hills. In British Columbia there are large potential resources of building stone. They have, however, been developed only in certain localities on the Pacific Coast, and have been confined to Cretaceous sandstone and certain volcanic rocks, situated on Vancouver Island and adjacent islands. Varieties of marble are also quarried on Texada Island.

MANGELS FOR POULTRY

A Cheap Food to Grow Where There is Room

In the production of mangels as a poultry food, very small areas, or comparatively large ones, show a decided profit when given over to the culture of these beets. They have proved to be one of the best and one of the most popular of the roots used as poultry food, because of their ease of growth and of their very heavy yielding qualities. They grow to immense size, and will produce a good many tons of roots per acre on good soil, are easily stored with little expense, and are highly relished as a part of the daily ration throughout the winter months.

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell [illegible] at the Crooked Billet.

GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and larger packages. The large package means greater economy.

CRICKET IN ENGLAND

Some Sarcastic Comment by a Lover of Amateur Sport

When I come across a man who decries the glorious game of cricket, writes George Robey in "Answers," the warlike spirit of my gladiatorial forefathers inspires me, and I want to slay him.

I don't say that first class cricket is an ideal game from the spectator's point of view; but, after all, it was fashioned for the players, not for idle onlookers, and I don't think I have met a practical player who has anything to say against the present condition of the game.

But, of course, if it is necessary that cricket be brought up or down to the business level of Association football; that the gentlemen and sportsmen who govern the game are to throw aside the old traditions and become keen seekers of dividends; and that "gates" are to be secured at any price, then the game must be forced upon the public.

First of all, the game must be discouraged at our schools and on our open spaces, because, once cricket is learned by the younger generation and "the seed is sown," I know of nothing which will turn a player into a spectator, and so secure gates.

But, before doing this, we must, at least, provide sport worthy of good patronage. Three-day matches are long-drawn-out affairs, and only made necessary by the fact that skill is opposed to skill. But if big "gates" are necessary, science is not wanted; the enjoyment of those who actually play is a something unworthy of consideration.

Excitement must dominate cricket completely; and so it will be necessary to curtail the time spent on a match and crowd into, say, two hours, an international game, or a County Championship fixture.

We must condense the game by giving each man on the side an innings of five minutes, both sides fielding.

The eleven scoring the greater number of runs in the allotted period, would, of course, be declared the winners. At all matches played in fine weather a military band should be in attendance. I fancy I can see C. B. Fry and Jack Hobbs endeavoring to take a ball off the middle stump and place it to leg when a selection of "rag-time" is given.

I have always understood that "money talks;" so if we desire absolute success in cricket from the spectacular point of view we must talk and think in thousands, as they do in the more refined world of football.

But—and a very big "but"—why do we want to make the game more attractive to the spectator? Cricket is a game, and not a business; and as a glorious branch of sport I know of nothing so full of pleasure.

FROM ROD AND CHAIN TO PROUD POSITION

Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie of Ontario Started Busy Career With Surveyor's Gang

It was no surprise to those who have watched the career of the man when Lt.-Col. John Strathearn Hendrie, C.V.O., M.P.P., was elevated to the distinction of Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario. It was one of the essential steps in the crowning of a career which gave great promise ever since the youthful days when he started out upon the earning highway of life by carrying a rod and chain for an engineer's gang on railway construction.

Of the physical type which gives evidence of latent power, of the mental capacity which has enabled him to grasp great problems in the commercial world, of the mixing type which has permitted him to gain many tokens of the popular esteem of his fellow-citizens, of the political astuteness which has won the silent approval of his followers, John Strathearn Hendrie is now reaping the harvest of his earlier industry.

Still in His Prime

Colonel Hendrie is still young in years for a man who has gathered about him so many of the world's good things, his fifty-seven years sitting upon him lightly. Grizzled of hair and moustache, there is still a [illegible] about his features which bespeaks many more years of usefulness.

There is Scotch blood in his veins, both parents having emigrated from

COL. THE HON. J. S. HENDRIE

Ayrshire, and he is also of Huguenot descent. His education was received at the Hamilton public and private schools and at Upper Canada College, after which he responded to the belief that there is nothing quite so effective as a personal grounding in the practical side of a life work. He became rodman and assistant engineer on the construction of railways, working both in Canada and the United States, from which position he speedily rose until he became manager of the Hamilton Bridge Works.

Hamilton, being Col. Hendrie's home city, gave him all his honors, except the last. His business enterprises have been diversified, but it was not until he was chosen Mayor of Hamilton in 1901 that his merits as a citizen were recognized in tangible form.

Elected to the Legislature

The following year saw him in the Provincial Legislature as a follower of Sir James Whitney. Recognition from the Ontario Government came in 1905 when he was selected a Commissioner for the Hydro-Electric, and the same year saw him admitted to the Cabinet as a Minister without portfolio.

In and about the chambers of Parliament Col. Hendrie is looked upon as a silent man, somewhat indifferent, and when upon the floor of the House no one can accuse him of verbosity. One who has watched the proceedings of Parliament for years, vouches for the statement that in his last four sessions he did not make a speech in the House. One might see him sauntering into the chamber hours after the deliberations began, apparently paying little attention to the routine of Parliament, sinking back in his chair and watching with the attitude of one to whom all this was an old story. But while Col. Hendrie watched in silence, he also worked.

As a Soldier

In the military world his ardor was felt for years. His first activity came when he linked his interests with the 4th Battery of Canadian Field Artillery, in which company he had risen to the rank in 1909. It is interesting to note that Col. Hendrie has always been an advocate of compulsory military training. In private life a fondness for horses has been one of his features, and he has done much to promote that sport. He is a member of many clubs and also a past president of the Canadian Artillery Association, the decoration of C.V.O. coming during his command of the Canadian Artillery at Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in 1897

THE STRAIGHT EDGE

One of the most difficult problems in practical mechanics is to make a straight edge. How difficult it is may be judged from an incident that occurred in the shop of a celebrated astronomical instrument maker.

A patron asked what would be the price of "a perfect straight edge of glass thirty-six inches long."

"It cannot be made perfect," said the instrument maker; "but it could probably be made with a limit of error amounting to only a fraction of a wave length of light."

"How much would that cost?"

"About $40,000."

It turned out that the customer wanted the straight edge for a scraper, and that an error of one sixty-fourth of an inch would not bother him.

THE ICEBERG DANGER

New Devices for Warning Ship of Approaching Danger

Since the terrible Titanic disaster, scientists and engineers have devoted much time and attention to devising means by which ships may detect the vicinity of icebergs. The old method consisted of lowering a thermometer into the water when the iceberg zone was being approached, the distance of the icebergs being judged according to the temperature of the water in the vicinity.

Since the increase in the speed of big liners, however, this method has been found to be quite inadequate, being neither safe, quick, nor accurate. One of the most reliable inventions for detecting icebergs at sea seems to that of Dr. Copland, of the University of Leeds, who invented an apparatus which detects the presence of icebergs by giving readings of the saline contents of the water. The nearer an iceberg is to the ship the less is the amount of salt held in solution in the water. The Canadian Government assisted Dr. Copland in his investigations.

Another invention of which high hopes are entertained is what is known as the microthermometer, an instrument enabling very much closer readings of the temperature of the water to be obtained than is possible with an ordinary thermometer. It is also self-recording.

Submarine signalling, too, for the prevention of disasters in foggy weather, is also being closely studied by experts, for it is recognized that there is much room for improvement in the signalling apparatus used at the present time on board ship.

The modern system of submarine signalling consisted of bells sunk in at least 30 feet of water, operated by electricity or pneumatic or hydraulic pressure. It is said that a submarine bell can be heard at a greater distance than any foghorn, siren, or any other generally used air signal or device, and it is recorded that one of these bells was heard at a distance of from ten to fifteen miles.

The receiving apparatus is very simple, consisting of two cast-iron tanks, which are placed below the water-line on either side of the ship's bows and in contact with the shell of the ship. In each tank is the microphone, which is connected by an electric telephone system with the bridge. There the navigating officer has suitable receivers and switches which enable him to listen on either side of the ship. If he alters the course of the ship on hearing the bell so that the intensity of the sound is equal on both sides of the ship then the bell lies straight in front, and according to the intensity of the various sounds he is able to avoid danger.

removably fastened to the straps. The clips, for example, are run through a bunch of fabrics and hooked onto the straps. The bunches are mounted in the case in transverse rows, with room enough between them to permit of the free and smooth rolling of the strip without wrinkling or creasing the goods. If the salesman desires to remove any particular bunch of samples for closer inspection he can do it—and replace it—instantly.

CARE AND NEGLECT OF FARM MACHINERY

Proper Housing Over Winter Trebles Life of Binder—Interesting Data Gathered Over Wide Area

Recent investigations by the Conservation Commission reveal some very interesting facts regarding the effect of care, or neglect, as the case may be, upon the life of machinery on the farm. Between 30 and 35 farms, divided into three districts, were visited in each of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

In Saskatchewan, out of 34 farmers visited by the Commission's representative, 76 leave all of their implements out of doors. On 73 of the farms, there were no implement sheds of any description. On 21 of the farms, sheds large enough to cover a part of the implements were found, in most cases this being only a buggy or a democrat, but not on one single farm was the machinery all housed. Not one farmer was found who painted his implements to protect them from the weather.

In Manitoba only 14 out of 96 keep their machinery under cover during winter, while 44 claim to keep a part of it inside. On 34 of the Manitoba farms no provision whatever is made for protecting implements, and only four claim to have done any painting.

In the three districts visited in Alberta, mixed farming is carried on extensively, making more barn room available, so that implements are more likely to be protected, but even here, 37 out of the 92 visited leave all machinery out of doors.

In one district in Ontario where 40 farmers were visited, every man housed his implements during winter, although none of these men do any painting. In the Ontario district visited where the implements are housed, the average life of the binder was found to be between 16 and 17 years. Many binders were seen which were in good running order after cutting 20 seasons' crops.

In Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where so much of the machinery is left out of doors, the average life of the binder as given by the farmers is about 7 years, which is less than half that of the binder protected from the weather. Many binders do not last as long as seven years. One farmer near Rosedale, Sask., who, after 12 years, was retiring from the farm, had an auction sale. His binder after cutting 12 crops sold for $65, or 50 per cent. of the original cost, and his other machinery at proportionately high prices. It had all been well housed and the necessary painting and repairing had been done to keep it in good order. On a neighboring farm a binder which had cut only three crops, but which had been neglected and had stood out of doors, was being relegated to the scrap heap and a new one was being purchased.

An implement shed costs money, but if its use will double or treble the length of time the machinery will last, it is a good investment. Farmers often say that they can not afford to build a shed. The truth is, they really can not afford to be without one. Apart from the additional power necessary for operation, the depreciation on unhoused machinery on the average sized farm is so great as to amount to much more than the cost and upkeep of an implement shed.

BURDENSOME NAMES GIVEN TO CHILDREN

One Girl Loaded Down With Twenty-six, One For Each Letter of Alphabet

Probably the most burdensome name ever bestowed on a child was that given by Arthur Pepper, a laundryman of West Derby, Liverpool, to his daughter, born in December, 1883. It comprised one name for every letter of the alphabet, and was certainly ingenious in its way, running: Anna Bertha Cecilia Diana Emily Fanny Gertrude Hypatia Inez Jane Kate Louise Maud Nora Ophelia Quince Rebecca Starkey Teresa Ulysis Venus Winnifred Xenophon Yetty Zeno. P, of course, was provided in the surname, Pepper.

Hundreds of examples of this poor form of parental wit were brought to light by an investigator. Noah's Ark Smith, Sardine Box, Jolly Death, Judas Iscariot Brown, One-too-Many Johnson, Not-wanted Smith, Boveril Simpson, Merry Christmas Piggott, Odious Haskin, Anne Dashed Davis, are the names of children probably living who will have to bear them through life. How can such children observe the Fifth Commandment?

There was for a long time a curiosity in nomenclature on the Australian pension list. His name was "Through - much - tribulation - we - enter - the - Kingdom - of - Heaven Smith." The officials of the Pension Department very pardonably abbreviated him into "Tribby Smith."

It is not surprising that the names of Dickens' characters—odd though they are—should be found in real life, for it was from life that many of them were taken. Some, as we know, were copied from the names over shop doors, etc., but this was not the novelist's only source of selection. Among his papers John Forster found carefully-drawn-up lists of names, with the source from which he obtained them, and the longest lists were those drawn from the "Privy Council Education Lists." Some of the names thus noted are too extravagant for anything but reality—Jolly Stick, Bill Marigold, George Muzzle, William Why, Robert Gospel, Robin Scrubham, Sarah Goldsackle, Catherine Two, Sophia Doombey, Rosetta Dust, Sally Gimblet!

Lest We Forget.

As Local Option has proven a failure in Victoria County, the Canada Temperance Act may be submitted to the electorate. Our older citizens will remember how successful the Canada Temperance or Scott Act was in Peterboro. It was carried here by some 3000 majority. On the vote for its repeal some 19 votes in the whole County were cast for maintaining it. Local Option even though possibly not a success in every municipality is a thousand fold better for the cause of Temperance than an act that was simply a farce in this County.

The Curling Season

Applications for membership in the Peterboro Curling Club are now being circulated and generally signed. The Times, in conversation with a leading local curler yesterday, was told, practically, "Some men think it a hardship to have to apply annually and pay $10 for being a member in advance. This however is explained by the fact that of the payment for membership was not payable in advance, a few men, with the best intentions, would join and then through the exigencies of business or other duties, would drop out. In the meantime the various rinks are nominated with the delinquents names used. But when a man has paid his $10 he may be depended upon to play.

TRY THIS IF YOU HAVE DANDRUFF

Or Are Bothered With Falling Hair or Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that never fails, to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find too that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy and silky and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out but it makes it straggy, dull, dry, brittle, and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all that you need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

BRITISH TOO MUCH FOR THE PRUSSIANS

London, Nov. 17.—Colonel E. D. Swinton, the official observer at the British headquarters, gives today a further chapter in his narrative of operations at the front, bringing up his account to November 18. His latest report describes the fierce attack of the Prussian Guards on the British lines in the neighborhood of Ypres.

Colonel Swinton's report, issued through the official press bureau, follows:

The diminution in the force of the German rush to the west has not lasted long. The section of the front to the north of our forces was the first to meet the recrudescence of violence, in the shape of an attack in the neighborhood of Dixmude and Bixschoote.

Hard Fighting For a Week.

Our turn came next. After eight days of comparative relaxation we were under constant pressure from Sunday, November 8, to Tuesday the 10th. The next day saw a repetition of the great attempt of the Germans to push through our lines to the French coast.

What was realized might happen, did happen. In spite of the immense loss suffered by the enemy during the five-days attack against Ypres, which lasted from October 29 to the 2nd of this month, the cessation of their more violent efforts on the latter day did not signalize the abandonment of the whole project, but merely the temporary relinquishment of the main offensive until fresh troops has been massed to carry on what was proving to be a costly and difficult operation.

Repeated "Local" Attacks.

Meanwhile the interval was employed in endeavoring to wear out the Allies by repeated local attacks of varying force and to shatter them by a [illegible] and concentrated bombardment. By the 11th, therefore it seems that they considered they had attained both objects, [illegible] that day they commenced the desperate battle for the possession of Ypres and its adjacent [illegible]

Though the struggle has not yet come to an end, this much can be said: "The Germans have gained some ground, but they have not captured Ypres."

In repulsing the enemy so far, we have suffered heavy casualties, but battles of this fierce and prolonged nature cannot be but costly to both sides. We have the satisfaction of knowing that we have foiled the enemy in what appears to be at present his main object in the western theatre of operations, and have inflicted immensely greater losses on him than those we have suffered ourselves.

ERNIE MARKS COMPANY.

The "Ernie Marks Stock Company" supporting Ernie and Kittie Marks, will come to the Grand Opera House for an engagement of five nights and two matinees commencing Tuesday, Nov. 24th. In returning to your city this season, Ernie Marks, has selected an all new cast of players, each one being a finished performer and sure to maintain the high standard which has made the "Marks Bros" the most popular and successful shows on the legitimate stage to day. Thus assuring the theatre goer for whom "the Play's the thing" of a wide choice of genuinely entertaining plays: For it goes without saying that when a piece is revived for stock production it has certain qualities of durability, which a great many new productions lack. It has, so to speak, passed the experimental stage and shown itself to possess definite elements of popular appeal. Thus the reason for success of stock plays since the origination of the theatre, no other form of entertainment has pleased the lover of amusement for such a number of years. The company which Mr. Marks, has engaged this season is by far the best he has yet offered the public. Among which is some vaudeville headliners engaged at the highest salary ever paid by a stock company on tour. Every piece is elegantly costumed, neither money, time or brains has been spared to have one of the best shows put on the road this season, its a good bet that the popular play house will be filled from pit to dome during the engagement here. Popular prices, 10, 20 and 30 cents. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday. 10 and 20c. Reserved seats on sale at Box Office Saturday morning at 9 a.m.

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If cross, feverish, constipated, bilious, stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative to-day saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time to empty their bowels which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue mother! If coated or your child is listless, does not eat, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, full of cold or has sore throat, or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless and in a few hours all this constipated poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough inside cleansing is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of the counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs" which has full directions for babies, grown ups and children of all ages plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

DOGS OF THE WILD

Australian Dingoes or Wild Dogs Easily Domesticated

Although the highest authorities agree in stating that the dingo was at some remote period introduced into Australia, and that it subsequently reverted to a wild state—like the "wild" horses of the Andes—there are still those who regard this dog as one of the original wild dogs from which our domestic dogs are descended. In any case, the breed is one of very great antiquity, and therefore of the highest interest to all dog lovers.

The dingo is about the size of a collie and much resembles a wolf in appearance and habits, but he is much more easily tamed. Those who know him best are warm in his praise, declaring that the dog may not merely be tamed, but is capable of easily acquiring useful habits, and of becoming a good companion. Even his voice alters as he comes under the influence of domestication. In course of time he learns to bark, an accomplishment unknown to the dingo of the wild.

Field Marshal Lord Roberts, Hero of the Boer War, Laid to Rest Beside the Duke of Wellington

Belgians Fight From Boats in France's Flooded Area

LAST SAD TRIBUTE PAID TO BRITAINS DISTINGUISHED GENERAL

Thousands Stood Reverently Uncovered in Rain at Lord Roberts's Funeral Yesterday--Military Honors for Nation's Hero

London, Nov. 19.—The body of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, the hero of Great Britain's South African campaign, probably the best known leader of the British army today, and the idol of the enlisted men, was laid at rest in St. Paul's Cathedral today.

Lord Roberts died in France at the headquarters of the British expeditionary force the night of November 14th of pneumonia. He was in his 83rd year. His body was returned to England yesterday. Last night there were private services at his home in Ascot, and today occurred the public funeral.

Lord Roberts rests beside the hero of Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington, Lord Nelson, Lord Napier, and other heroes of Great Britain's Indian and African wars, with whom he had been associated in his more than half century of distinguished military service. It is recalled today that it was just 62 years ago that the body of the Duke of Wellington was interred in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Lord Kitchener, Secretary of War; Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, Lord Grenfell, Admiral Sir E.H. Seymour, Sir Evelyn Wood, and other prominent naval and army officers followed the caisson bearing the flag-draped coffin through the streets of the city. The thoroughfares were lined with soldiers and massed with hundreds of thousands of Englishmen who all stood with bared heads in a drizzling rainstorm as the body of Great Britain's most beloved military leader passed.

NOW A FLORIDA HIGHLANDER INSISTS ON THE SCOT'S KILT

Toronto, Nov. 19.— A request for permission to enlist in the defence of the Empire was sent to Mayor Hocken all the way from Sunny Florida, reaching the city today. The letter containing the offer is addressed to "The Honorable Mayor of Toronto," and reads:

"I am Highland Scotch by birth, yet I have been here in Florida since a boy of 16 years. Is there a chance to enlist in a Highland regiment? I want to go to war, just as my father and my grandfather did, in their 'kilts.' I will not condescend to wear the miserable khaki uniform that they now wear. I will go as a Highlander or not at all. I am not asking anything. I am certain to pass the physical examination and I can pay my own expenses. I only take a pride in keeping up the record of the Hays family as being kind of 'handy' when it comes to fighting."

The letter is signed "Dorancil G. Hays, West Palm Beach, Florida."

NEW TELEGRAPH SYSTEM NOW FOR WESTERN CANADA

The announcement is made recently that the work of wiring the new territory opened up by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway has now been completed and a number of young cities in British Columbia are enjoying for the first time a commercial telegraph system with the East.

Winnipeg and Prince Rupert are by this means placed in direct telegraphic touch. The first message carried over the wires was sent by the Mayor of the Pacific coast to the Mayor of Winnipeg, and expressed the satisfaction felt in the West at the inauguration of complete telegraphic activity which are expected to give new impetus to business.

Mayor Newton's Message was as follows:—

"His Worship the Mayor,
"Winnipeg, Man.:

"The City of Prince Rupert, B. C., through me, as Mayor, sends greetings on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific telegraph service from this City to Winnipeg. Prince Rupert views this consummation as the most important step towards more closely binding this Province with this northern part of the Dominion, more particularly coming as it does, at such an important crisis in the history of our Empire, when it is so important that all Canada should act as a unit.

"S. M. Newton, Mayor."

This message was filed at Prince Rupert at 10.10 a.m. Central Time, was received at Winnipeg at 10.15 a.m. Central Time, and was delivered to the Mayor at 10.25 a.m.

Mayor Deacon's reply was as follows:

"S. M. Newton, Mayor,
Prince Rupert, B. C.

"The City of Winnipeg heartily reciprocates your kind greetings on the inauguration of the Grand Trunk Pacific Telegraph service and trusts that this may lead to the opening of a great volume of new traffic between the Pacific Coast and the Orient and our own City, and that the completion of this new great highway of commerce may lead to the early development not only of the territory of Northern British Columbia but to the prosperity of [illegible] and to the [illegible] of the Empire at large.

"T. R. Deacon, Mayor."

This acknowledgement was filed at Winnipeg at 11.00 a.m. and was delivered in Prince Rupert, [illegible] miles distant, twelve minutes later—an indication of the quality of the service given on Canada's new telegraphic system.

Belgian Troops Fight From Boats in France's Flooded Area

The Russian Army Meets With a Temporary But Insignificant Reverse Before Warsaw But Everything Points Towards Their Final Victory

BRUGES, BELGIUM, NOV. 19.—FIGHTING BETWEEN THE GERMAN AND ALLIED FORCES IN THE INUNDATED TERRITORY BETWEEN DIXMUDE AND NIEUPORT, ON THE NORTH SEA COAST IS NOW FREQUENTLY BEING CARRIED ON IN BOATS.

ARTILLERY, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN THE WAR, HAS PROVED INEFFECTIVE, BUT PERSONAL BRAVERY AND ENTERPRISE ARE COUNTING FOR MUCH AND THE BATTLE IS BEGINNING TO RESEMBLE THE CLASSICAL SIEGE OF LEYDEN IN THE 16TH CENTURY WITH RAIDS AND COUNTER-RAIDS BY MEANS OF FLAT BOTTOMED BOATS.

TWO CORPORALS OF THE SEVENTH BELGIAN INFANTRY HAVE BEEN MADE KNIGHTS OF THE LEOPOLD ORDER FOR TRANSPORTING FORTY MEN, INCLUDING FIFTEEN SEVERELY WOUNDED, ACROSS THE INUNDATIONS UNDER HEAVY FIRE.

THE BATTLE IN ITS PRESENT STAGE, ARMY OFFICIALS SAY, MAY LAST SEVERAL MONTHS.

London, Nov. 19.—The unexpected blow delivered on the Russian centre by Von Hindenburg, with the German army which has retreated from before Warsaw was the predominant feature of the news reaching London today from the eastern arena. No change of importance has been recorded for some days past in the western arena, where Flanders is still the scene of heavy fighting. In spite of adverse weather conditions and the flooded trenches, the Germans appear to be holding their positions from which at intervals they launch the attacks for which the territory from the Belgian coast at Arras has become famous.

The allied warships are still off the coast, hurling shells inland when opportunity offers. The Belgian army remains in the region where the floods have been the worst, and some despatches say that in certain places they have been fighting from small boats.

Having for the time being thrown back the Russian advance toward the German frontier of Posen, General Von Hindenburg is the hero of the hour in Berlin. There is much criticism in Berlin of the German retreat from Warsaw, but if the present marked revival of form proves permanent, the German centre doubtless will retrieve its reputation just as the allies retrieved themselves almost at the gates of Paris. The German wedge from Posen would appear to have driven the Russian centre more than fifty miles back from the frontier, so that the line is now about midway between German territory and Warsaw. Elsewhere along the great eastern front the Russians where they are not progressing, seem to be holding their own.

Berlin, Nov. 19, via London.—A German official communication given out in Berlin says:

The situation in West Flanders and in the North of France is unchanged.

A German aviation squadron encountered some of the enemy's aviators while making a reconnoitering flight and caused them to descend, one of them falling. One of our flying machines is missing.

A fierce French attack in the region of Servon, in the western slope of the Argonne forest, was repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy. Our losses were very small.

In the eastern theatre of the war the newly-commenced battles are proceeding.

THE ENEMY'S INFANTRY IS ALL SET WAS GIVEN A DAY OF REST

Paris, Nov. 19.—The French official announcement given out by the War Office today says:

"On the north yesterday was marked by a renewal of activity on the part of the enemy's artillery, particularly between the seacoast and the Lys. There was no infantry attacks in this region.

"Between the Oise and the Aisne, the operations in the vicinity of Tracy-le-Val had a termination very favorable for our troops. It will be remembered that we took possession of this village several days ago. The day yesterday the Germans endeavored to reconquer it.

"After having captured our first trenches they succeeded in making their way as far as the centre square in the village. Here, however, a vigorous counter attack delivered by our Algerian contingents drove the enemy back, wrested from him all the ground we had lost, and inflicted on him very heavy losses.

"In the Argonne we have maintained our position. Along the rest of the front there is nothing new to report."

NAVAL ENCOUNTER IN BLACK SEA TURKISH CRUISER IS DAMAGED

RUSSIAN VERSION.

Petrograd, Nov. 19.—There has been a naval encounter in the Black Sea between Russian and Turkish warships. No definite news of the outcome has been received here as yet beyond the fact that the Turkish cruiser Goeben sustained serious injury.

GERMAN VERSION.

Berlin, Nov. 19.—By wireless to the Associated Press.—A Turkish fleet has engaged a Russian squadron composed of two battleships and five cruisers off Sebastopol according to an official report reaching Berlin from Constantinople to-day.

One of the Russian battleships was seriously damaged and the other vessels, with the Turkish ships in pursuit, fled to Sebastopol.

EMBARRASSING HAIRS CAN BE QUICKLY REMOVED

(Beauty Culture)

Hairs can be easily banished from the skin by this quick, painless method: Mix into a stiff paste some powdered delatone and water, spread on hairy surface and in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be free from hair or blemish. Excepting in very stubborn growths one application is sufficient. To avoid disappointment, buy the delatone in an original package.

MANY ATTACKS ARE REPULSED

Paris, Nov. 19.—The French official statement, given out in Paris this afternoon, says:—

The day of yesterday, November 17 passed much as did the day before. There was numerous artillery exchanges and some isolated attacks on the part of the enemy's infantry, all of which were repulsed.

From the North Sea to the Lys, the front was subjected to a fairly active bombardment, particularly at Nieuport and to the east and to the south of Ypres.

Near Bixschoote, the Zouaves, charging with the bayonet, brilliantly took possession of a forest which had been disputed between the enemy and ourselves for three days.

To the south of Ypres an offensive movement on the part of the enemy's infantry was repulsed by our troops. The British army also maintained its front.

FORMER LOCAL MAN INJURED

St. Catharines, Nov. 19.— George Gagnon, a Hydro-Electric lineman at work on the high potential circuit near St. Catharines sub-station, today came in contact with a 2,200-volts current grounded and fell to the three-phase wire system below. He was seen from the sub-station and the power of the entire system was immediately shut off. He was seriously burned on one hand and one foot, but is expected to recover. He comes from Peterborough.

PREFERENTIAL TREATMENT OF BRITISH AND ALLIED GOODS

Melbourne, Nov. 19.—A novel step is about to be taken by the Government of South Wales, with a view to preventing any cornering of the wheat supplies. The [illegible] and [illegible] to introduce a bill immediately giving the Government full power to purchase the whole coming wheat crop of the country at five shillings a bushel. He estimated the deficiency in this season's crop at a million bags. The Sydney municipal council has decided upon a preferential treatment of British and allied goods during the war. A five per cent. preference will be given to British merchants and five per cent. to the allies.

CALLING OUT OF TROOPS GIVES PUBLIC UNNECESSARY WAR SCARES

General Hughes Says Toronto's Recent Test Disturbed Populace--Hard on "Nerves" Cause of Scares --Careful Watch Kept on Border

Ottawa, Nov. 19.—General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, issued instructions today to all officers commanding districts that no further mobilizations of troops are to be ordered without full notice being given to the general public. General Hughes states that it was understood that this was to have been done in Toronto, but that it must have been overlooked. The Minister takes the ground that the calling out of the troops without notice to the public causes unnecessary war scares, injures recruiting and has a demoralizing effect on the health and the nerves of the people. Something, he said, must be done to stop the [illegible] excitement.

"The people may rest assured," said General Hughes, "that the most careful watch is being kept on every part of the United States border as well as in Canadian centres for any threatening marauding raids, but the Militia Department will not lend itself to intensify any feeling of panic. If mobilization is to be practiced it can be done just as well by having ample notice given to the public that it is only a practice, otherwise it will be the old cry of 'wolf, wolf.'"

"No call for mobilization should ever be given unless in case of real emergency and all practices should be so notified to the public."

Respecting Those Winchesters.

In regard to the purchase of rifles by the City of Toronto, General Hughes explained today that he was asked by the Board of Control to give an opinion on the purchase of several thousand Winchester 30-30 rifles. He declined to offer any opinion, but warned them that the Winchester 30-30 was not a military rifle. He further suggested that before investing the money of the city they should consult an expert purchaser and recommended the firm of Rice Lewis and Company, of Toronto, to be consulted.

DISAPPOINTMENT IN ENGLAND OVER NON-APPEARANCE OF ZEPPELINS

Manchester, Eng., Nov. 19.—Speculating on the possibility of a Zeppelin raid on London, the Manchester Guardian says there is a noticeable feeling of "disappointment" in England over the non-appearance of these airships. While the Zeppelin would not be really welcomed, there were those at home so hungering for excitement that as a whole England seemed ready to take the risk.

It was coldly calculated that even if fifty Zeppelins were sent over, their concentrated devastation could not cover more than six acres—or if they dropped all their bombs on the "square mile" that makes up the city of London proper "they could kill something under one in a hundred of the people who happened to be there."

"Over the whole of London, taking the Metropolitan Police area, the chances of escaping would be about 70,000 to one. Over what may be described as the central area of London, within which a Zeppelin might be expected to operate, the chances of escape would be about 15,000 to one."

"Personally, I think it would be a good job if the Zeppelins did come. Even if they did drop a few bombs, the stimulus to recruiting would be worth what little damage was done," says Frank Hedges Butler, who is founder of the Royal Aero Club.

SIDE-SPLITTING COMEDY, WITH MUSIC AND DRAMA

The Imperial Musical Comedy Company presented the merry musical comedy "The Girl from Broadway," to a large and appreciative audience in the Grand Opera House last night. Each play staged by this talented aggregation is pleasingly interspersed with vocal and dancing numbers, and an enjoyable evening is always assured. Last night the male trio, as usual won demonstrative applause; in fact the musical numbers reflect considerable credit on the company. Mr. Harry Feldman's comedy is original and irresistible. Holders of lucky coupon tickets were awarded presents from the country store, and Mr. Harry Feldman's distribution of the miscellaneous assortment of store goods to lucky ticket holders last night offered an exceedingly entertaining and laughable quarter of an hour.

Mr. Nelson Adair, the double voiced wonder, won enthusiastic commendation, and Mr. Christie's laughing specialty was a clever piece of comedy singing.

Tonight "The Elopers" will be presented, and a live blue eyed baby given away to the lucky ticket holder. We have Mr. Feldman's word for it that this presentation will be made.

Heaviness of Platinum

Platinum is the heaviest commercial metal known. Its specific gravity is 21.5, as compared with 19.36 for pure gold and 10.53 for silver. Briefly, platinum is 21½ times as heavy as water, more than twice the weight of silver and heavier, bulk for bulk, than pure gold. It is softer than iron, but somewhat harder than copper.

SPORT SACRIFICED

Money the Only Consideration in Profession Baseball

Organized baseball seems to be on the verge of losing its last vestige of sport for sport's sake, according to W. J. MacBeth, a New York sporting writer. The commercial end of the enterprise overshadows all else. The magnates are out for the money and make no bones of the fact. The lust for gold is as deeply rooted in the minor leagues as in the major organizations.

The two big circuits depend upon patronage for financial gains. Because of this it is necessary for them to secure the very best talent to display before the public. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are expended every season by each club in the National and American Leagues for the sole purpose of fortifying for the future. Every club owner has several highly paid scouts beating all around the country in search of likely looking "bush" timber. Some have as many as six sleuths under salary. Besides these, there is a grand army of amateur sharps who do business on a commission basis. This policy of near extravagance is all well enough for first division aggregations; the end more than justifies the means. But it is a serious drain upon the pocketbook of the unfortunate holders of second division franchises.

Because of their weaknesses, second division clubs in the major leagues call for the greatest expenditures. This makes their lot all the more severe. The money is put up on a sure gamble, because a club away down in the race is lucky to make interest on investment. The leading teams which might well afford to speculate in talent, have not the same crying need to do so. But these leaders usually string along in a sort of "dog in the manger" fashion and often corral most promising talent which they cannot possibly use, just to keep it away from some lowly rival that might utilize it to the disadvantage of the strong.

GEORGE SISLER

phenomenal young pitcher of Michigan University. Joe Sugden, the Detroit scout, says of him: "He has the best curve of any left-hander I ever looked at." Few college players know how to run bases and not many slide properly. Sisler is an aggressive runner and has the hook slide down to perfection. His one fault seems to be over-anxiety to hit. He is almost as brilliant as an outfielder as in the pitcher's box where his specialty is the spit-ball.

OLD RACING TERMS

Fine Distinction Between Stake and Purse Often Overlooked

The old and well defined term "stake" receives some rough handling on the trotting turf when races are reported by art critics, golf experts, baseball writers or any person who happens to be available when the trotters come to town. Some of the trade papers of the trotting turf and even track officials themselves seem at times unable to recognize the plain distinction between a purse and a stake.

From the earliest period of racing the term stake, or sweepstakes, has always been used to designate a race for which the prize is the total amount of money contributed by the nominators, all of which belongs to the winners. This is the definition incorporated in the rules of the National Trotting Association, and the same meaning is given to the term sweepstakes in the New York Jockey Club's rules of racing. A race is still a stake when money or other prizes are added to the entrance fees or subscriptions, but is never a stake if the prize is less than the total amount paid by the nominators. In a "stake" the association promoting the race merely holds the entrance money in trust for the nominators.

A purse is a fixed sum offered by the promoter of the race, to which the nominators do not contribute. All entrance fees in such a race belong to the association, and if they amount to more than the purse, as often happens on the trotting turf, the association profits to that extent, and the purse remains the same as if there were only two or three entries.

Ever since instalment purses came into vogue on the trotting turf, there has been a tendency to call all early closing races stakes. As a matter of fact there are few—very few—stake races on the trotting turf, most of the promoters preferring to offer purses so that they need not pay out all the entrance money in case this exceeds the face of the purse. Even the futurities in harness racing are nearly all purses instead of stakes, and for the reason just mentioned.

Articles to the value of nearly $1,[illegible] are pawned in London every week.

SALMON INDUSTRY

Quebec Man Started First Packing House on Pacific Coast

Notwithstanding the fact that the first salmon cannery on the Pacific Coast was erected in United States territory—on the Sacramento river—it is interesting to note that it was the creation of one who had learned the canning business in Eastern Canada. This man, Hapgood, had worked in a lobster factory in the Baie des Chaleurs, Que. A school mate named Hume, from Augusta, Maine, who had been to California and returned home, had told Hapgood of the abundance of salmon on the Pacific coast, and Hapgood saw no reason why salmon should not be canned as well as lobster, and entering into partnership with Hume, erected the first Pacific coast cannery in 1864. A year or two later witnessed the establishment of the industry in British Columbia.

In 1876 the total pack of the province was but 10,000 cases of 48 pounds to a case, while now the production of the canneries is around a million cases per year. Many changes are observable in the industry. With the increasing demand for salmon, other kinds than Sockeyes have been increasingly canned, and now a considerable proportion of the pack consists of hitherto neglected kinds of salmon. Then again the Indians and white fishermen are being gradually displaced by Japanese.

Perhaps the most remarkable development is that of the Dog Salmon industry. These fish were until recently regarded with contempt, but so great is the demand from the Japanese market, that more than 3,000 tons, dry salted, have been exported in a single year from British Columbia. Just as the turkey is the universal Christmas dish with us, so a salted dog salmon is the chief item at New Year's feasts in Japan. The average price of a seven pound dog salmon in Japan is said to be fifty cents.

ORIENTAL MENACE

Presbyterians on Coast See a Real Asiatic Peril

The Westminster Presbytery, representing that denomination in Vancouver and all the lower mainland, passed a long resolution as to their policy on Oriental immigration. They view with alarm the ever-increasing arrival of Orientals, whose influence is felt in social, economic and even moral conditions. They add:

"The situation is already exceedingly serious. One in every nine of our population is an Oriental, and as a large proportion of their members are men, it means that one man out of every five in British Columbia is an Oriental.

"This Presbytery would therefore urge that an understanding be arrived at between our Government and the various governments interested to exclude Oriental laborers until the population of Orientals to Occidentals is one to thirty of the population of British Columbia. In case of Hindus already residing here, we urge they be allowed to bring in their wives, providing that no other members of this race will be permitted to enter Canada until the above condition is reached, when the question may be re-opened."

NEW ICE CUTTER

Saw Carried in Frame That is Mounted on Pair of Wheels

The old style way of cutting ice was by the use of a long hand-saw, sometimes operated by two men. A western man has designed a machine for the purpose and it is said that with this machine one man can cut ice quicker than two men could with the hand-saw. A frame with spaced side bars, is mounted on a pair of wheels. Between the bars, at their lower end, a saw is mounted and this saw is driven up and down by a chain gear that is operated by the turning of a handle at the top. Adjustable gage shoes are pivoted at one end to one of the side bars and these shoes keep the saw running straight, so that the cut it makes is at all times the same distance from the former cut that it must parallel. The saw in this machine, instead of being of the regulation stiff blade type, is in the form of a chain.

THE ENGAGEMENT RING -:- -:- -:- By Michelson

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

No use trying to be casual and off-hand about a thing like that—OFF-HAND really would be GOOD about an engagement ring if any one could contrive it! On the contrary she is immensely conscious of it from the moment it is fitted, and particularly when she comes into the group where it is most important to show it.

Then the chorus of exclamations! If you are an extraordinary person, particularly the kind of extraordinary person that knows all about the feminine heart, you will be able to guess what every girl in this group MIGHT be thinking. If you can guess that you're a WONDER.

Of course there would be as many kinds of thought as there are kinds of girl in the group, and—yes—the thoughts would depend on lots of things. O YES!

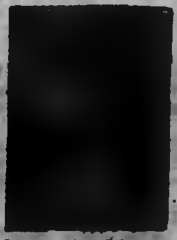
The Teapot Tempest.



LEONA DALRYMPLE

At breakfast we were both pretty tired and downcast.

Mary made a sprightly effort at conversation, but it was plainly an effort and I didn't follow her lead. Why talk when you feel all in?

"Wasn't Mr. Alvin funny," she said after a while, "when he rapped on the wall last night with the broom handle? I suppose the sound of our voices did bother him."

"He's an old bear," I said savagely, "and I know darn well he stole my milk this morning. It was gone."

"Maybe the milkman only left one bottle," said Mary.

"Well, why should he take it?" I insisted. "It was as much mine as his and likely it was on my porch."

We laughed a bit about Mr. Alvin and the milk, in the fashion of people who carefully avoid some forbidden subject and wander all around it.

There was just one thing, however, that I wanted to know, and presently I pushed back my coffee, and the newspaper I had been trying to read, and took the bull by the horns.

"Mary," I said, "you're not going to borrow money from your mother again, are you?"

"I—I don't suppose so," said Mary in a faint voice.

"You're going to promise," said I. "We'll have to fix it that way. You'll promise?"

"Yes."

"And you won't permit her to give you any or lend you any? We must abide absolutely by our decision to divide what's left at the end of the month, and simply make that do for personal expenses and clothes."

Mary looked flushed and uncertain and unhappy again, as she always does when we get on the subject of economy, but she was tired and subdued this morning and a little more tractable than I had seen her in months. She said, in a still small voice that was [illegible] to learn that she would do her best, and that she hoped I'd apologize to her mother. This latter hope I ignored. If Mary and I begin to row again it was unlikely I'd get to business that day.

I asked for some more coffee. Mary poured it and looked [illegible] out of the window.

A Secret Engagement Is a Criminal Folly

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am secretly engaged to a young man whom I love dearly. He says just as soon as he works himself to a standing where he can provide for me as I have been provided for at home we will announce our engagement.

Since then he has had a promotion which keeps him busy most of the evening. He said he would be awfully tired until he got used to it and that he would stay home and rest instead of coming out. But, instead of resting, he went down town and my brothers saw him. He was with some other friends. My brother went over to his house Thursday to see him and he was gone to the show. Don't you think that if he loved me he would come to see me more?

Several times he has acted unmanly and afterward asked forgiveness, and I forgave him. I also humor him, I afraid, a little too much.

One of our lady friends is giving a musical entertainment and my sweetheart and I are invited separately. But I find I am not able to attend, so I sent my regrets. Now, my sweetheart was very anxious to go. But it wasn't arranged for him to come for me.

Please tell me if he should go anyway. How should I treat him when I see him again? If he should come to see me instead of going, how shall I treat him then?

IGNORANT SHIRLEY.

WHY, you poor, dear child you—do you live all alone somewhere on a desert island way out in the middle of a great big, lonesome ocean?

Haven't you any mother—or big sister—or maiden aunt—or even just a nice, comfy, middle-aged friend? Find one, dear child, find one—and talk these things over with her.

I'm afraid you are in serious need of a real friend—and I am so far away, and know so little about you—how can I do for you what I would like to do, you dear, foolish little girl you?

The first thing you must do and do at once is this. Break that engagement. Don't shilly-shally—don't "maybe," and "maybe not." Break it, and break it now—if your heart breaks with it.

Why should you have a secret engagement with a man who is ashamed to have people know that he's engaged to you? Why should you keep your engagement secret, pray tell? There's just one reason—the man is making a convenience of you—that's all—and I'm afraid he's a good deal of a sneak. Some men are sneaks, you know, and this one seems to have a good many of the earmarks of the tribe.

Don't be at home the next time your "secret" sneak comes to see you. When you meet him in the street or anywhere else speak to him as if he were just an ordinary acquaintance, and get away from him as soon as you can.

As to the little entertainment and whether you go or he goes, and what you're to do about it, that's of no importance whatsoever. The important thing is for you to get rid of this creature—and get rid of him at once.

What's the matter with your mother—won't she "understand?" Oh, yes she will, little girl, mother will "understand" better than anybody else in the whole world. Mother wasn't always 40, you know; once she was 18, too.

And, perhaps, you put your soft open and your trusting heart right straight from mother, and she can advise you what to do with them as nobody else on earth can. Just you go to her today and creep into her lap and tell her the whole foolish story, and see how she will help you and comfort you and stand by you.

You've kept it all a secret from her, haven't you, because he wanted you to? Of course, he wanted you to. He knows what would happen to him of your mother knew the sort of creature he is.

She ought to know—today, this very hour—see to it that she does.

Three Minute Journeys

Where Finches Win Big Prizes By Their Trills

By TEMPLE MANNING

IN the north of France and in that part of Belgium called Flanders the little finch, whose longer name, chaffinch, is less known to us, is held in the highest esteem. In nearly every farmhouse finches are to be found, and all through the summer finch "concours" are held in the neighboring villages. It was by good luck that I happened to be present at the first "concours" of the season held in a little Flanders village last year.

I had asked my host to call me for the contest, and just at daybreak we found ourselves at a tiny inn, where the finch owners had already opened headquarters. They were taking the cages out of their travelling boxes when we arrived, and soon they all went out and set the covered cages against a wall that lined the street. Long tally sticks were handed to the owners, and then each owner was assigned to judge some other owner's bird.

At a given word the covers were lifted from the cages and the finches began to sing. Only perfect trills were counted—"chain, chain, chain, chain, choing" was required. By the fifth part of the warble the whole trill was judged. If the final "choing" was not heard the tiny contestant was not given a chalk mark to his credit. One hour was the time allotted, and promptly on the second the contest closed. Five hundred and six perfect trills was the winner's record.

A poor little country boy owned the winning bird, and when he stepped up to receive the 25-franc prize every one was glad that he had won because he was so happy.

How to Keep Food Fresh During Hot Weather

By Ann Marie Lloyd

DESPITE the many advantages of the warm weather, it has one serious drawback which causes the housewife much perturbation and harassment. The warmer the weather the greater chance there is that when the housewife goes to the larder she will find a large part of the food turned sour and unfit for use.

If a little forethought is exercised, however, much of the food can be prevented from turning rancid and sour.

As a general rule, a dish of charcoal should be placed on a shelf in the pantry to help keep the food sweet and fresh. The charcoal should be changed once a week. It is also wise to have some strips of butter muslin, weighted at each corner, to come right over each shelf to keep the food clear of dust.

Sour milk is perhaps the greatest of all aggravations in the summertime. If a couple of tablespoonfuls of limewater are put into each pint of milk, the latter will keep sweet much longer than it would otherwise.

A pinch of bicarbonate of soda will often keep milk from turning sour. On no account should different lots of milk be mixed.

A good way to keep butter cool, firm and sweet-tasting is to place the butter on a plate, then cover it with a clean flower pot. Wring a piece of flannel through cold water and wrap it round the flower pot in such a way that the hole in the pot remains uncovered. If the flannel becomes dry, wring it through cold water again.

Never try to freshen meat that is tainted; it is most injurious and dangerous to do so. To keep meat fresh it should be hung in a cool, dark place directly it comes from the butcher.

If it has to be kept very long, though it should be put into an earthenware bowl, covered with hot water, and the surface of the water covered with pure oil. Treated in this way raw meat can be kept fresh for several days, even in the hottest weather.

Bacon can be kept from turning rancid by being placed in a wooden tub and covered with oak sawdust such as can be obtained from a sawmill, and stored in a cool, dry place.

Boiled ham is a most useful and popular summer dish, but it is inclined to get hard and dry when stored. To prevent this, spread over the cut portion a thin layer of butter, then a layer of flour paste, and the ham will keep beautifully moist.

Fish also turns quickly in warm weather if it is simply stored in the usual way. Most kinds can be kept fresh, though, if the fish is put into a basin and well [illegible] with salt.

About a quarter of an hour before the fish is required for cooking wash off the salt in lukewarm water.

Vegetables usually keep fresh if they are stored in a dark corner of a stone-floored cellar and covered over with a damp cloth. To ensure them keeping absolutely crisp and fresh, place some water in a shallow vessel and stand the root end of the vegetables an inch deep in the water.

To keep cheese fresh avoid getting a very large piece at a time, and wrap it in a clean, damp cloth before putting it away.

Cakes and bread should be stored in airtight tins, and if a piece of cut bread be put into each tin it will do a great deal to prevent the cakes and bread becoming stale.

By following these instructions many hot weather troubles will be avoided. And surely it is worth while to do away with anything that spoils our enjoyment of summer.

Secrets of Health

Why Our Hats Are the Cause of Baldness

By Dr. L. K. HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins)

DR. HIRSHBERG

WHEN the Duke of Wellington, who out-Napoleoned Napoleon, saw the first Reformed Parliament of England, he thought them such a sickly, sorry-looking lot of representatives that he remarked: "I never saw so many bad hats in my life."

Dr. Holmes in the Autocrat says of the hat: "It is the 'ultimum moriens' of respectability."

The Quaker loves an ample brim, a hat that bows to no salaam; and dear the beaver is to him, as if it never made a dam. Hats really make or mar a man's fortune, while the character of a woman can often be judged by the hats she wears.

Men have been wearing hats only a few thousand years. The round felt cap like a nightcap, with little or no brim, lying close to the temples, called a "pileus," was the mark of fishermen, sailors and artisans. Castor and Pollux, Ulysses and Charon are always thus covered in art and statuary.

The ancient upper classes wore these caps only as we do a golf cap, namely, to travel, in the country or at sport. The Roman populace wore it at the Saturnalia. The freedmen wore it as a sign that they were free. It is the "liberty cap" of modern times.

The Tight Band.

The Thessalians introduced the flat hat with a broad round rim into Greece. It was used by the better classes to protect the head from the sun's rays, especially in the amphitheatre and at the seashore resorts, two thousand and more years ago.

The people of those times thought it silly to wear hats for any other than health or defensive purposes. Caesar's legions, as well as Macedonian, Persian and other primitive hosts, wore hats and helmets made to safeguard the head from open wounds and blood-poisoning.

Hats worn by men are made today as they were then, to wit: with a tight, constricting band to prevent them from being blown off. Even Egyptian mummies have hats tied thus about the brow, while the eternally feminine have them pinned, sewn and stuck on to the hair.

Outfitters for men, haberdashers and hatters to their various majesties have, time out of mind, tried to save themselves from the medical finger of accusation which claims the tight hatband is more to be censured for baldness than all the vices and ills of the less deadly of the species.

Briefly, the necessity for a hat invention has long existed, but no satisfactory offspring from this alma mater has been born. No hatter has, as yet, devised a hygienic hat.

Women and Baldness.

True enough, there are cork [illegible] helmets, openwork straws, perforated derbies and well ventilated felts, yet the vise-like sweatband maintains its felonious sway. It suppresses a fresh blood stream to the scalp, chokes off the pabulum that feeds the hair bulbs and otherwise is adjudged guilty of hair slaughter and hirsute assassination in the first degree.

Moreover, hats, irrespective of all cosmetic adornment, have a pernicious influence upon women. Not only do they jab themselves with the pins and infect the scalp with warts, dandruff and [illegible], but tugging at the pins and sliding them back and forth destroys the color, shape and texture of the hair.

A hitherto unobserved or disregarded influence of my lady's millinery is the nervous effects produced by fumbling and fixing the disheveled and unbalanced headgear. To try on many hats in shops is often the source and fountain head of gray hair and baldness.

Gray hair, despite the "authority" of an American weekly medical journal, may come on very quickly. Certain nervous affections, microbic invasions and local [illegible] like "seborrhoea," or dandruff, not only injure the hair and cause it to fall out, but also turn it gray.

India Responds Promptly

Mr. John Nugent has received a letter from his brother-in-law, Rev. J. Smith, secretary of the Bombay Tract and Book Society, Bombay, P. O., Bombay, India, as follows in part:

Dear Brother,—We are now in the midst of the bustle of war here as you are in Canada, but we pride ourselves on having landed our contingents in France, 4,000 miles away, quicker than you were able to land yours, although so much nearer. It would do you good to see the activity displayed just now in Bombay in the despatch of troops for the front. A number of men, [illegible], carts and other war material has been passing through [illegible] for many weeks past.

German Spy System

The amazing thoroughness with which the Germans organized and are manipulating their intelligence department is one of the dramatic features of the war. The sudden descent of Admiral Von Spee's squadron upon Admiral Craddock's inferior but plucky forces off the southern coast of Chile was a triumph of naval strategy, and it is known now that it was made possible by the admirable system of intelligence which the Germans possess.

It seems that the British went blindly into the trap, for the Germans along the coast had managed to communicate to Admiral Von Spee the information on which he so promptly acted. It all disclosed a system of secret communication which is little less than marvellous. The regularity with which the Emden and the Karlsruhe encountered British merchant ships of information, and in the light of all that is occurring, color is given to the claim that the Germans may be using cleverly concealed wireless stations in many parts of the world.

A nation which is able to build concrete gun foundations under the shadows of hostile forts in times of peace may easily be credited with having installed wireless plants in unsuspected places, and of having devised other ingenious schemes of conveying important information.

The Russian Advance

Russia's agricultural and industrial life is as robust as a wash-tub.

Germany's agricultural and industrial life is as delicate as a watch.

Invasion would not seriously dislocate the mechanism of Russia's life.

Invasion of Silesia or other industrial and mineral sections of Germany will derange the entire fabric of German life just as the destruction of one wheel of a watch destroys the time-keeping qualities of the whole works.

The fabric of Germany's industrial life may be brought down by a Russian advance into any rich and populous section of the Empire. Germany's powers of economic resistance to invasion have yet to be tested. Canada is the home of optimists who still believe that the Russian army will be in Berlin before Christmas.

Ontario Nickle Should Be Kept Out of Germany

Let the Canada Copper Co. give effective guarantee as to the ultimate destination of every ounce of Ontario nickel exported to United Stat?s refineries.

Or let the Government of Canada absolutely prohibit the export of nickel to the United States or anywhere else.

The Canada Copper Co. is strongly entrenched in the favor of the Government at Ottawa. The alleged prohibition of nickel exports is effective only in its applicatio to the direct exportation of nickel to Germany. There can be no direct exportation of nickel to Germany while the British navy holds the seas. Th? nickel by-products s?cured in the process of smelting Cobalt ores can be exported to the United States, and thence to Germany. It is to be hoped that the Canada Copper Co. makes absolutely sure that Germany is kept off the line of communicacion with the United States refineries owned by that company.

Best Liniment of All Destroys Every Pain But Never Burns

"How thankful we are to get hold of such a wonderful household remedy as Nerviline," writes Mrs. E. P. [illegible] from her home near Wetaskawin, Alberta. "In this faraway section, far away from a doctor or druggist, every family needs a good supply of liniment. Nerviline is the best of all. It destroys every pain, but never burns. We use Nerviline in a score of ways. If it's rheumatism, aching back, pain in the side, sciatica or stiff neck,—you can laugh at them if you have lots of Nerviline handy. For earache, toothache, or cramps I don't think anything could act more quickly. For a general all-round pain remedy I can think of nothing more valuable and speedy to cure than Nerviline."

The above letter is convincing—it tells how reliable and trusty this old-time remedy is. Nerviline for forty years has been a household word in Canada. Scarcely a home in Canada you can find without Nerviline. Every community has its living examples of the wonderful curative properties of Nerviline which will cure pains and aches anywhere in the joints or muscles. It's penetrating, soothing, warming and safe for young and old to use. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; it's the most economical. Small trial size 25c. at any dealer's anywhere.

MONEY IN WOODLOTS

Scientific Principles to be Followed to Secure Best Results

There is no part of the farm which will give bigger returns for so little expenditure of time and labor as the woodlot, says Mr. B. R. Morton, expert forester for the Dominion Government, and there are three ways in which the farmer, by the exercise of ordinary common sense, can vastly improve the composition, production and reproduction of his woodlot.

The first thing necessary is to improve the character of the crop, which can be done by cutting down and using for firewood all diseased and deformed trees, as well as such species whose presence in the woodlot is not desirable. Only too frequently is the method of cutting exactly the reverse. The best trees are cut, often for purposes for which an inferior wood would serve. Firewood probably yields the best returns for a small acreage and for this purpose rapid-growers such as poplar, ash and elm should be encouraged, which should make an annual growth of from one-half to one cord per acre. Basswood, too, will be in increasing demand because of its rapid growth, because it coppices readily and because of its value in small sizes for the manufacture of excelsior, cooperage stock and other small articles for which the wood is particularly adapted. Maple reproduces readily, and although not a rapid grower, it nevertheless yields a substantial revenue when it becomes large enough to tap. Soft woods like spruce, balsam and pine grow much more rapidly than hardwoods and might be advantageously grown for fuel or pulpwood.

When the most suitable species have been selected and the weed-trees removed, the woodlot must then be thinned until the crowns of the best-formed remaining trees are seen to barely touch.

The third requisite in the scientific farming of the woodlot, is that the cattle be kept out, especially after heavy cutting, when reproduction is most desired. Cattle are just as injurious to a young crop of tree-seedlings as they are to a young crop of grain. They may indeed eat the grass in the woodlot, but they would just as soon, if not sooner, eat the young and tender hardwood shoots, and the same can be said of sheep. Even coniferous seedlings are not immune so that certainty in production is only assured by fencing off the cut-over areas.

ORIGIN OF CHECKS

It is claimed that the business world owes the idea of the bank cheque to nothing else than London's fogs.

These fogs are sometimes of such a density that the pedestrian can see but a few feet ahead of him. Something over a hundred years ago the attacks of thieves and highwaymen in the streets of London upon bank messengers and tradesmen going to settle their bills became so frequent in times of heavy fog as seriously to interfere with the conduct of London's business.

It was easy for the thief to ambush his victim, club him into insensibility, rob him, and then disappear into the murky atmosphere, with little likelihood of apprehension or identification, or that passers-by would witness the commission of the crime or be of any assistance in the chase.

In these circumstances bankers, tradesmen, and others set their wits to work, with the result that the bank cheque was devised for the payment of debts. Soon the highwaymen found that a few pieces of paper were all the booty they were likely to get from a "hold-up" of even a wealthy tradesman. Accordingly the activities of daylight robbers soon came to an end, but the convenience of the bank cheque proved so great that it survived not only in London, but was adopted throughout the civilized [illegible]

WESTERN PIONEERS

Men of the Eighties Who Persevered in the Face of Difficulty

There is little left of the Winnipeg of the early eighties. Each year sees a diminution of the links which bind the days when Winnipeg was the stepping-off place, to the present, in which Winnipeg acts the part of the gateway to prosperity and affluence to all who seek diligently and perseveringly. Each year, one or more of those who formed the little band of pioneers who exhibited that diligence and perseverance in the face of almost [illegible] who stuck to the town of their adoption in spite of hard times, through all the vicissitudes of the growth of Winnipeg from trading post to metropolis, steadfast in their faith in its future, pass to their long rest having seen their judgment justified, their dreams of the city that was to be come true. The city of Winnipeg, and indeed, the whole of Western Canada, joins in paying tribute to the worth of those pioneer citizens of the prairies, whose unbounded optimism it was which made possible the Winnipeg of to-day, and whose prophetic vision outlined, in spite of the struggles in which they were involved, the glorious future of the west, which to-day is just beginning to be realized. The story of their careers is an object lesson to all in display of sterling character, of business integrity, and a wealth of homekindness.—The Saturday Post.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs —all young foxes— good for at least 20 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in handling foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $[illegible] worth of stock for themselves. $[illegible] worth has already been disposed of, leaving $[illegible] to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever amount it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent., in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say:— "We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $[illegible] and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs, shipped from Prince Edward Island and sold to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four foxes this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranching, [illegible] of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain [illegible] what we can do for you and [illegible] you have our proposition, [illegible] it with the offer made by any other company now in business— and then judge for yourself, to have them [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown [illegible] newspapers.

CHLORINATED WATER

Drug Can be Added to Kill the Taste After Germs Die

Just when the chemists were congratulating themselves that they had finally solved the problem of pure drinking water by [illegible] disinfecting water with chlorinated lime to kill germs, protests came from many cities that the water tasted of the chlorine, and they have had to go to work again on the problem. Now they have discovered a way of putting more chemicals into the water to kill the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has killed the germs.

Usually the amount of chemical spread through the water is so small that no one can taste it; but the proportion varies with local conditions, and there are times when much larger amounts are used. If more than seven pounds of the chemical is used in a million gallons of water, the most sensitive palates begin to discover the taste and complaints are made to the water department. With every additional pound of the chemical come more protests.

One way to get rid of the taste is to ozone the water before sending it into the mains; but this is not usually practicable, and chemists have been seeking another remedy. Now it is stated that a drug called thiosulphate will hide the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has had a few minutes' time to kill the germs. The prescription calls for one part of thiosulphate to two parts of chlorinated lime. To prove that the additional chemical is harmless, the discoverer points out that thiosulphate is used in medicine, and that, in order to get a dose the size a doctor would order for a patient, a person would have to drink about 370 gallons of the treated water.

Strength of Insects

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 600,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 300 times its own weight.

Or, if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper, you could spring over a church without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee, you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from such observations made by naturalists, that the greater in size the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for outside force.

STAGE STRUCK IN FIRST GAME

Even the Great Muggsy Knows What Nerves Mean to a Young Player

Muggsy McGraw made his initial appearance in professional baseball under conditions that were far from comforting. He was given the first tryout by the Olean club of the old New York state league, and was assigned to the third bag. McGraw was then a youngster in his teens. He made his debut April 1, 1890, an ominous date for John, as on that auspicious occasion he proved to be the biggest "fish" of an April fool package.

McGraw was so small it was impossible to find a suit to come anywhere near his measure. It seemed to McGraw, as he has told it, as if all the world was in attendance on the day he appeared at Olean. To his eyes it seemed as if he had never before seen so many people. This, of course, was due to the fact that the little third baseman was nervous and that his mind multiplied the actual number of spectators. The noises made by the crowd also worried him. It sounded like the prolonged roaring of a mighty sea.

When the first ball was knocked down to him he says the noise of the crowd ceased as if by magic, and the ball, which happened to be a slow grounder, appeared to McGraw as if it would never reach him. Finally, after what seemed to be an age, he found himself with the ball in his grasp, and he turned to throw it over to first base, where there was a player who was the tallest in the league.

The distance to first now appeared to McGraw to be fully a mile away, and his heart sank within him as he suddenly thought to himself that he could never throw the ball that far. Yet he nerved himself, and not only did he get the ball over, but he put it several feet over the first baseman's head. Every succeeding time the ball was knocked down to McGraw during the rest of the game he managed to throw higher and higher over the head of the man on first.

After the game the manager came up to McGraw and patting him on the head, told him that he was a nice boy, and so on, but as a ball player he was a joke. McGraw left Olean that night and went over to Wellsville, where he finished the season. He did so well that at the end of that year he was the recipient of eighteen different offers from managers who were willing to pay well for his services.

Mr. Will Crooks, M.P., gave the following advice in an address to workingmen:—

Don't argue when you are tired; you can't do it.

Don't take the workshop home with you.

Don't talk trouble before the children.

Don't think you can't be "done;" you can.

Don't think you are worse than other people, and don't think you are better; you're not.

Don't think you have a constant job; the man in the cemetery has that.

Don't talk of being master in your own house. You may be while you are there; but you have to go out.

Don't get angry; no one cares if you do.

An Appeal to the Intelligent Investor !

Does a logical presentation of a good investment interest you? Do you believe there is an oil in commercial quantities in Alberta? If you are alive to the situation you do. Then it will pay you to investigate our proposition and our holdings.

Please Read Carefully and Note!

THAT Oil authorities are agreed the Alberta Oil Field is of an anticlinal formation. It has been fairly accurately ascertained in what general direction these anticlines run. Geologist D. W. Dunn chose wisely in the selection of the now famous Monarch well. WINDSOR OILFIELDS, LIMITED, has holdings located close to the Monarch.

THAT Cunningham Craig, one of the world's most eminent geologists, selected the site of the Mowbray-Berkeley well. Stock in that company is not offered at any price. We possess acreage adjoining the Mowbray-Berkeley (Section 12, Township 23, Range 5, West of 5th). If a strike is made at the Mowbray-Berkeley what will shares in our company be worth?

Our holdings consist of 1380 acres, carefully selected and judiciously spread over the entire oil field.

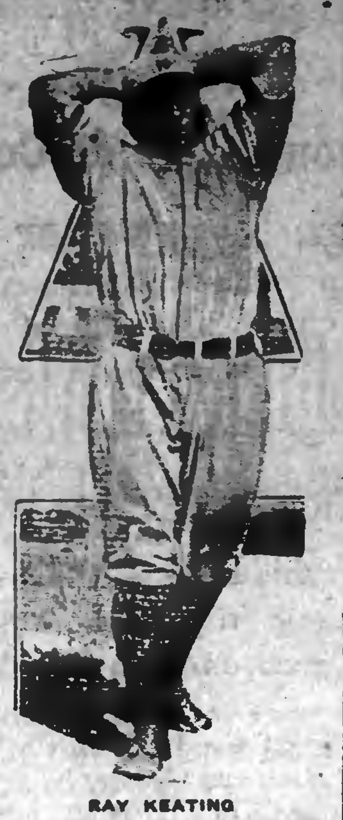
A GREAT YOUNG PITCHER



RAY KEATING

19-year-old spit-baller of the New York Americans. Frank Chance declares Keating is the best young pitcher he ever saw—and Chance has looked over some good ones. Keating uses a fast ball and the spitter. He has a near curve, but he seldom uses it. Keating's fast ball has such a hop and his spitter breaks so viciously that the batters failed to solve him.

IN THE LISTS

Women Compared With Men in Feats of Endurance

The athletic young woman of the twentieth century has shown that there are some sports in which she could give points and a beating to the men of her grandfather's time.

Take golf, for instance. Some few years ago, Miss Nancy Hazlet did a 77 at Burnham on a rough day. It would take a very fine player of the other sex to equal this score, let alone to beat it. And, more lately, Miss Leitch showed that even an Open Champion could only just give her a half—that is, nine strokes in an eighteen hole round. This is all the more wonderful when you come to consider that the longest drive yet achieved by a woman is 231 yards, whereas a man has driven a golf ball a distance of 370 yards.

Mastering Ben Nevis

Men have run the hundred yards in under ten seconds, but no woman has done the distance in less than thirteen, and man can long jump nearly twenty-five feet as against less than fifteen by the best feminine athlete.

Oddly enough, when it comes to feats of endurance rather than short and concentrated effort, woman shows up to much better advantage. Take, for instance, the favorite race up Ben Nevis, which is a terrific strain even for the best trained man. The time taken by the champion runner was just an hour and a half. A woman has done it in under two hours.

In long distance swimming the case is similar, for while a man is one-fifth faster than a woman in swimming a hundred yards, when it comes to a mile race in the water man is only one-fifteenth faster than his best feminine competitor. In other words, a man has only ten seconds' advantage over a woman in a mile swimming race. There is actually a case on record of a thirteen-miles swimming race, from Brooklyn to Coney Island, in which two girls came in ahead, beating no fewer than thirty-one men. Madame Isacescu, the Austrian lady

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

EDUCATION IN CANADA

There are 2,141,909 children, between 6 and 20, in attendance at school in Canada according to the latest available figures. Of this total, 1,801,779 (or 84 per cent.) are Canadian-born, 142,560 British-born, and 197,570 foreign-born.

Persons in Canada who can read and write, of population of five years of age and over, 88.98 per cent.

Persons who can read only: One-half of one per cent.

Illiterates: 10.50 per cent.

Ontario still leads in percentage of those able to read and write, namely, 93.17 per cent.

Of 2,197,663 males of voting age, 90.57 per cent., or 1,990,341, can read in some language.

REAL BOYS LOVE DOGS

But Many a Lad's Heart is Saddened Because He Cannot Keep One

"Aw, Ma, lemme keep him. Aw—Ma!"

"I won't have the dirty beast around. See the mud he's brought in already."

And so the boy led the dog out of the house and the two sat on the back steps and [illegible] together, both faces wearing very much the same expression.

There were three unhappy beings because of the mother's ultimatum—for the mother herself, though she triumphed, felt something wrong in the atmosphere.

Good housewives, however, have always forbidden dogs in the house. Dogs don't stop to wipe their feet before coming in. Dogs shed hair on carpets. Dogs, in the exuberance of their feelings, jump on one and muss one's dress. Dogs lie on cushions and the best sofa. And dogs have fleas. Ugh!

NO PEDIGREE—JUST A DOG

What if the very soul of one's boy longs for the intimate companionship of a dog? What if one's husbands would be a happier man with the understanding eyes of his dog sending warm glances toward him every time he moved?

But these are not considerations for many women. Rather a spick-and-span house than a happy boy or husband, if it's a question of a dog. A lot of women never can see anything attractive about a dog. They have eyes only for his faults—just as they manage to have eyes only for the failings of everybody in their environment.

Of course a dog can be an awful nuisance. But so also can a small boy be an awful nuisance. It's largely in their training—and in the way you look at the boy, or the dog. Many a boy is actually starving for affection because his mother just tolerates him and makes no effort to understand him.

BACKYARD GARDENS

Any Kind of Soil Can be Utilized For Vegetable Growing

Many a backyard could annually produce vegetables that would cost $150 if they were purchased at the grocer's. Any patch of ground will grow some kind of vegetable if given half a chance. No matter what kind of soil one has to deal with, it can be made to grow things. If the soil is sandy it will grow early crops to great advantage, but will not stand the hot, dry weather of summer as well as clay or loam. For this reason most sandy soils would be improved by the addition of several inches of barnyard manure and heavier soil plowed in in the spring and thoroughly mixed. Heavy clay soil is the toughest proposition for a gardener to handle. A loamy soil is the best for general cropping. If there is sod in the new garden, it should not be stripped off as is often done, but should be turned under, where it will decay and improve the texture of the soil.

Another feature is fertility. Barnyard manure or commercial fertilizers must be used in abundance. It is difficult to give advice on the kind and amount of fertilizer to use. This depends upon the character of the land and the nature of the crops to be raised. All seedsmen have for sale combination fertilizers that will answer the purpose of most amateur gardeners. Good drainage and lots of sunlight are other necessary factors in getting best results.

RECORD GOLF DRIVE

Over Half a Mile With Frozen River as Green

Robert Jolly, better known as "Wee Robbie," one of the younger members of the famous St. Andrews Jollys, all of whom are now golf professionals in the United States, established what he claims is the record drive of a golf ball. The feat was a drive of 1,086 yards, and the drive was made under conditions which were as unusual as the drive itself.

"WEE ROBBIE" JOLLY

Early last winter, after the weather had driven almost all the golfers off the links of the Park Ridge Country Club, a lawyer continued to play over the frozen ground. He experimented. Discovering that the cold golf balls could not be driven as far as he ordinarily drove in summer, he warmed them by a stove before starting out, and carried them inside his clothing, finding that the warm balls striking on the frozen ground would bound and roll fully fifty yards per drive further than cold ones.

Then, without revealing his secret, he bantered Robbie Jolly into wagering that he could not drive 350 yards. On the frozen ground and with a heated ball the feat proved easy, and the joke was on the professional.

With his Scotch aroused, Jolly remarked that, under proper conditions, he could drive 1,000 yards. It seemed impossible, and the wager was made.

Then the Des Plaines river froze and presented a perfect sheet of ice clean and hard. Jolly notified the jokers that he was ready for revenge and took them to the river. He teed off a ball warmed to 105 degrees, and, save for a slight bend, the "fair green" was a sheet of ice without obstacles for two miles. The first drive struck the bank about 600 yards away. The second went past the only hazard, the jutting bank at the curve, and, bounding along forty yards to the bound, whizzed down the middle of the river. The judge stationed at the 1,000-yard mark said it was still going strong when it passed him, but bounded, struck an over-hanging willow limb and, after rolling a few yards further, rolled down a slope in the ice against the bank, where it was found.

VARIOUS METHODS OF PRESERVING EGGS

They Must be Fresh in the First Place and Should be Scrupulously Clean

There is no better method of preserving eggs than in water-glass, or soluble silicate of soda, which is not an expensive material to buy, as a pound, which only costs a very few cents, dissolved in the correct proportion of water, will preserve a large number. The amount of water to be added depends upon the sample, but as full directions are usually sent with each tin, it is difficult to go wrong. The eggs are placed in a glazed vessel, and covered with the liquid, care being taken that all the eggs are submerged. When they are wanted for use, they should be gently lifted out of the liquid, wiped dry, and used as speedily as possible.

The oldest, but still a very excellent method of preserving is by means of salt, lime and water. Four gallons of lime, one of salt, and twenty of water, should be mixed together, and when the water has taken into solution as much lime and salt as it is capable of doing, it should be allowed to settle, the clear liquid being used to pour over the eggs, which have previously been placed in a suitable vessel. This method has the disadvantage of making the shells rough and extremely brittle—so much so, in fact, that, as a rule, eggs that have been preserved in lime cannot be boiled, the shells cracking with the least touch. When eggs are to be preserved for only a very short time—for two or three months—dry salt answers admirably, but this is an unsuitable method for a longer period.

If a new-laid egg be dipped into boiling water, it slightly coagulates the white, and so prevents the air getting to the contents. For home use this method is suitable, but it does not answer when the eggs are for market. Smearing with vaseline or butter keeps the contents fresh for a week or two, but is not recommended for more than a month.

Only perfectly fresh eggs should be preserved, and it is largely a waste of labor and money to attempt keeping eggs that are more than two or three days old when placed in the preservative. They should be allowed to settle twelve hours after being laid, but the sooner after this time they can be treated the better will they be when they are wanted for use. Dirty eggs do not preserve at all well, and if there is any dirt on the shells they should be washed. A dirty egg has an injurious effect not only on its own contents, but on all those that come into contact therewith. As infertile eggs preserve better than those containing a germ, it is advisable when producing eggs with this end in view to keep the hens apart from the male birds.

OUR PUBLIC SPIRIT

Scotchmen Says Unpleasant Things About Canadians

A young Scotchman, after three years in the Canadian West, wrote a letter to the London Everyman describing in unvarnished terms some of the Canadian characteristics, says The Ottawa Citizen. They can hardly be said on the whole to be complimentary, which doubtless makes their expression all the more valuable from the Canadian standpoint. It is always well to "see oursels as ithers see us," and a touch of Scotch opinion may in this case help to improve the spirit of Canada. One of his criticisms regarding the latter is as follows:

"Nor does the public spirit of the Dominion strike a stranger as abundant. It does not find its expression in the Territorial forces, at any rate, which are manned, out of all proportion, by home-born Britons. Certain Canadians suffer from the gratifying belief that the Dominion saved the effete Empire in 1901, and are indignant when told that of the Canadian contingent sent to South Africa eighty per cent. were home countrymen. Nor does public spirit find much expression in local government, where the 'best people' are conspicuously absent—too busy making money to bother with such matters."

Without discussing the incident of 1901, The Citizen says by way of comment, the truth of the rest of the criticism might be confirmed. Canadians have been so busy with the multifarious tasks of a new country that they have not had much time to devote to the interests of the country at large. But surely Canada has now advanced in development to such an extent that more attention can be given to the public interest. Unless such attention is given, no greatness of future can be safely predicted. That public spirit that makes a citizen think and feel and act for Canada, as for his larger self is without doubt the great need of Canada to-day. Others recognize the fact, and Canadians cannot too soon follow their example, and profit by it.

Newly-laid Eggs

Bacteriologists tell us that in an egg evaporation and the action of bacteria are evident by the third or fourth day. There are some who believe that from that time on the egg is not perfectly "fresh," or "new laid," nor any other name that should mean the best. It is edible for some time after that if kept properly, but it is not of first quality, and all the statements to that effect cannot make it so. If the farmer has to have longer time than three days to get his eggs to the consumer, he should have to classify them other than the highest, and he cannot expect to compete with the poultryman who delivers his product 72 hours old.

JOCKEYS HORSES HATE

When Race Horses Go Mad at Post They Would Make Meal of Riders

Trouble in the paddock and at the post before a big race is frequently caused by a horse which has taken a sudden and violent dislike to his jockey, and there are numerous cases of well known jockeys being nearly chewed to death by their mounts.

One of the worst cases of "savaging" occurred to Otto Madden, the famous jockey, at Brighton races a few years ago. He was riding down to the starting post for the Worthing Plate, when a horse called Marigold IV. overtook him, dragged him out of the saddle by the shoulder, and, seizing him by the throat, shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

The jockey of Marigold IV., who had himself been unseated, used his whip freely on the brute's head to make him release Madden, and other jockeys coming to his assistance, Marigold IV. was eventually beaten off, but not before Madden had been severely wounded.

Diamond Jubilee, the horse which won King Edward his first Derby, took a violent dislike to his jockey, Mornington Cannon. If Cannon ever went near his loose box, or the horse saw him in the stableyard or paddock, he would make frantic efforts to "go for him," and Cannon had several very close shaves from being badly mauled.

Fred Archer once had a bad tussle with a horse which tried to "savage" him, but the famous jockey succeeded in getting the better of the animal and won the race. The horse was Peter, and the race was the Hunt Cup.

Peter threw Archer in the paddock before the race, and, seizing him by the arm, nearly bit it in two. Archer succeeded in beating him off, whereupon he threw himself down on the ground and screamed, lashing out at every one who came near him. Archer, however, was not to be daunted, and he eventually succeeded in mastering the brute.

Lord Charles Cunninghame, a well known sportsman who used to race on a large scale in India, had a very valuable racing pony which took a violent dislike to the "syces," or native grooms.

He absolutely refused to allow them to come into his stable, and on one occasion when two of the "syces" came in together to try to groom him he bit off one man's arm completely at the elbow, while the other only escaped with a badly lacerated ear. After that, white stable boys from England had to be specially imported to look after him.

Vedas, who became "savage" through ill-health some time before he died, wore a muzzle, and the stable boy was paid extra to look after him.

Ladas, Lord Rosebery's famous racehorse, was perfectly quiet under ordinary circumstances, but for some unknown reason he had a great dislike for ladies, and would "go for them" if any members of the fair sex approached his paddock.—Pearson's Weekly.

BUILDING CUP CHASERS

Some of the Rules Yacht Designers Must Bear in Mind

The conditions governing the America Cup yacht races give designers lots of latitude. According to the measurement rule, length is measured, but this length is taken in such a way as to limit overhangs and should that length be greater than the rule allows the excess is penalized. Draught is limited to 16 per cent. of the load water line plus 1.75 so that the limit of draught for a yacht 75 feet on the water line is 13.75 feet. Any excess is added to length. Then to find the rating after the length has been determined length is multiplied by the square foot of the sail area and this product is divided by the cube root of the displacement. The larger the displacement, consequently, the larger the sail area that can be carried and the designer decides just how big a yacht he wants to build, making its form as easy as possible and then figures out the driving power. It has been figured that the average defender measures about 102 feet over all, 14 feet draft, and spreads 7,400 square feet of canvas.

Steel Railroad Cars

Steel is rapidly displacing wood in the construction of railroad cars—not only in passenger cars where the safety of the passenger is an important consideration, but in freight cars as well. The entire end is made of a single piece of steel compressed with concentric annular corrugations, making a very strong and durable end wall. No posts, braces or rivets are required in the end piece.

WAR WITH INSECTS

Campaign is Carried on in a Number of Countries

The greatest war that is going on at the present time is not a war in which both sides are men. It is not a war in which rifles or cannon play a part. The biggest battles of to-day are with a much smaller foe than man. They are battles with insects.

Although unknown to many people, these battles in which men and insects are the combatants are adding a new chapter to the history of the world.

South Africa is one of the greatest of these battlegrounds. There hostilities are being carried on relentlessly. Locusts are one of the enemies in South Africa. As soon as there is a swarm of locusts, news is flashed to the Department of Agriculture at Pretoria. As a result a battle ensues with sprays of arsenic instead of rifles. The locusts, due to these battles, are being rapidly exterminated.

On the west coast of Africa a great campaign is taking place against a close relative of one of our own foes, the mosquito. In Africa it has been definitely established that the mosquito is the transmitter of three most terrible diseases—malaria, elephantiasis and yellow fever. If a man is bitten only once by a mosquito there may develop any one of these horrible diseases. The same methods are being used against the African mosquito, as they are using in the United States in a civil war against the mosquito. Hundreds of ponds are being drained and other bodies of water are being covered by a thick oil.

A little fish known as the "million" is the weapon used in the great battle against the mosquito in West India and the Hawaiian Islands. This little fish is a natural enemy of the mosquito. The beneficial work of the "million" was first noticed at Barbados, whose lakes and streams were full of this small fish. Barbados did not suffer from the scourges brought by mosquitoes, but the adjacent islands, where the "million" did not live, suffered greatly. This suffering is diminishing since the introduction of the "million" into all ponds and streams that cannot be drained or covered with oil.

In the Panama Canal Zone the conflict between man and insect has been remarkable. Man has won all of the battle. Yellow fever in all of its horror, a direct result of germs carried by the mosquito, has been driven away from Panama by a successful war on the pest.

Another pest on which a great onslaught is being made is the tsetse fly. The record of this insect is but little less terrible than that of the mosquito, for among the diseases it carries is the sleeping sickness, for which there is no cure and which has swept away whole communities. The tsetse has killed more than 200,000 in the Uganda protectorate alone. The tsetse fly is being fought by burning bushes around the margins of rivers and ponds and around cities and encampments. The men of Africa are wearing a sort of a sticky flypaper on their backs in the lands where the tsetse fly swarms, and millions are being attracted and killed by this method.

The United States and Canada have already made great progress against the fly and the mosquito, whose dangers have just been recently realized. The war against these terrible tiny foes will not only make civilized countries more healthful, but will vastly improve life and conditions and open up to civilization part of the tropical and semi-tropical countries.

THE OWL TO FLOURISH

Bounty on Big Horned Species Removed in West

No more bounties will be paid by the British Columbia Government for the destruction of the big horned owl. This owl is supposed to be very destructive of game birds, and this may have been the case in the past, but the rabbits have now come back and the big horned owl finds himself once more in a land of plenty. As he is said to even prefer rabbit to grouse, there is no longer any particular object in having him destroyed.

The bounty, which was two dollars per owl, proved unexpectedly expensive, $12,000 being paid out in a few months. Some enterprising hunters are said to have made as much as a hundred and fifty or two hundred dollars a month from this source. Moreover, the government is convinced that a certain amount of fraud was practised and that the harmless little horned owl has frequently been made to do duty for his big horned cousin at two dollars per head.

Blunders in Book Titles

Nothing so taxes the ingenuity of the bookseller as phonetic endeavors to get at the name of a book. Who but a genius could conceive that by "Within or Outside the Pail" was meant "Beyond the Pale," or that by "The Forgotten Cigar" a customer meant "For God and the Czar?"

Even Mr. Bullen would be puzzled by a reference to "Screws of the Cash Lock" for "The Cruise of the Cachalot." Some other amusing blunders are "The Strips to Congo" for "The Stoops to Conquer," "Here of the Week" for "Hereward the Wake," "Lemon Peckets" for "Lying Prophets," and "Red Acre of Greece" for [illegible] "Greech."

DON'T HAWK, SPIT, SNEEZE, CURE YOURSELF! BREATHE "CATARRHOZONE"!

Gives Instant Relief, Clears Out Nose, Throat and all Breathing Organs.

In this fickle climate, repeated colds very easily drift into Catarrh.

The natural tendency of Catarrh is to extend through the system in every direction.

Exposure to cold or dampness intensifies the trouble and nasal catarrh is the result.

Unless a complete cure is effected, inflammation passes rapidly to the throat, bronchial tubes and then to the lungs.

You can't make new lungs—hence Consumption is practically incurable.

But Catarrh can be cured, except in its final and fatal stage.

Catarrh sufferers, meaning those with colds, sore throat, bronchial trouble, etc., can all be cured right at home by inhaling "Catarrhozone."

In using Catarrhozone you don't take medicine into the stomach—you just breathe a healing piney vapor direct to the lungs and air passages.

The purest balsams and the greatest antiseptics are thus sent to every spot where catarrhal trouble exists, germs are killed, foul secretions are destroyed, nature is given a chance and cure comes quickly.

Colds and throat troubles can't last if the pure healing vapor of Catarrhozone is breathed,—sneezing and coughing cease at once, because irritation is removed.

Use Catarrhozone to prevent—use it to cure your winter ills. It's pleasant, safe and guaranteed in every case. Complete outfit $1.00. Smaller size 50c., at all dealers.

STILL THE RUSSIANS ARE ADVANCING

Paris, Nov. 18.—A despatch received here from Petrograd by the Havas Agency, is as follows:

A terrific battle of unexampled violence has been proceeding for four days around Soldau. The cannonading has been maintained night and day. The Russians are endeavoring at any cost to avenge their former check at Soldau and are throwing themselves at the Germans with indescribable fury. They have carried position after position by assault, in spite of the fire of the Germans.

Russians Near Interior

The Germans are offering a most energetic resistance, and their fighting is alternately offensive and defensive.

In spite of the torrential rains, which have turned the ground into a quagmire, the Russians are advancing toward the interior of Germany.

The Havas correspondent continues: They have captured ten big cannon, none of them damaged.

HOME GUARD TURNS OUT

Last night the Peterboro Home Guard turned out for a public parade several hundred strong. These men, who were husky Canadians, and, incidentally, Peterborough citizens were mainly big sturdy Canucks. They marched in fours. On the face of every man was written in facial lines, a grim determination not only to protect Canada but, when called on, to fight for the Empire. The Home Guards although in civilian uniform showed their demeanor and strictly aligned ranks that Kaiser Bill, to use a slang expression, has "bitten off more than he can chew."

SILKEN BANK NOTES

A Possibility of the Future, a Woman's Invention

It is possible that before long all bank notes will be printed, not on paper, but on silk of a particular shade. It is by means of photography that most clever bank note forgeries are effected. An English concern held a private demonstration when Mrs. Ernest Hart explained a new process she invented for waterproofing fabrics without rubber and dyeing them in the same operation. By utilizing this process linen, cotton, or other material can be put into one end of a machine white and brought out a few minutes later colored, waterproofed, and dry! Each machine treats 400 yards in a day, and the materials produced are useful in hundreds of trades, from building aeroplanes to bank note making. As regards the latter, the material produced is of such a color that it cannot be photographed.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp, of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine to-night—now—anytime—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and after the first application your hair will take on that life lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy, and have the appearance of abundance—an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

NAVAL GUNS PLAY HAVOC WITH ENEMY

London, Nov. 18.—Public mourning for the late Field Marshal Lord Roberts overshadowed public demonstrations over anything the reports from the front contained today. The allies were rather more than holding their own, it was thought, and there was quiet satisfaction in all circles. Reports from outlying points of conflict were not alarming. So far as the fighting in France and Belgium was concerned "there was nothing new to report," but the United Kingdom was waiting the resumption of a new German attack farther south from the coast.

Fleet Fires on Zeebrugge.

A Rotterdam despatch to The Daily Mail says: "The British Fleet received information Monday which led them to carry out a vigorous bombardment at Knocke and Zeebrugge on the Belgian coast. The Solvay Company's works on the Bruges ship canal, which are being used as a base for German military trains was wrecked. A train of five cars, filled with soldiers were struck by a shell, took fire and was destroyed. Much damage was done to the German stores and supplies."

Germans Lose 2,700 Men

The correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company at Amsterdam sends the following:

"According to The Telegraaf's Sluis, Netherlands, correspondent, the Germans occupying Dixmude have suffered heavy losses. In fresh fighting which has taken place there they lost 2,700 men.

"The Town of Nieuport is badly damaged. Heavy cannonading was heard Tuesday in the direction of Ypres, indicating a renewal of the heavy fighting there.

"Fugitives say that additional submarines are being constructed at Zeebrugge."

French and English Fleets Shell Dixmude
Warships Killed 1,700 of the Foe—Another German Attempt to Take Calais is Expected

DIXMUDE HAS BEEN KNOCKED TO PIECES BY SHELLS FROM WARSHIPS

The Hottest Spot Along the Entire Battle Line--Germans are Making no Progress, According to Official Communique From Paris--Foe's Artillery Fire is Abating--Total Absence of Infantry Attacks

Paris, Nov. 20.—All the reports indicate that the Germans have found Dixmude, which they again hold, one of the hottest spots along the entire battle line. The town has been knocked to pieces. Warships off the coast are declared to be dropping their shells into the German positions there and forcing of the allies from this point has been of little advantage.

New guns were brought up by the Germans last night but so far have been kept to the rear; the enemy evidently does not intend to run the risk of having these guns mired, so long as those now in position are able to hold the present line.

Paris, Nov. 20.—The full text of the official communique is as follows:

"The day of November 19 was marked by the almost total absence of infantry attacks on the part of the enemy. At the same time, their artillery fire was much less violent than on the afternoon of November 18th.

"To the north the weather has been very bad, and snow has fallen.

"All the region of the Yser canal to the east of Dixmude is invaded by the waters.

"In front of Ramscapelle we have withdrawn from the water two 15.5 centimeter mortars, abandoned by the Germans. There has been a very intense artillery fire to the south of Ypres.

"On the centre there have been no important actions to report. In the Argonne three vigorous attacks on the part of the enemy's infantry have been repulsed. On our right wing the Germans have reoccupied the destroyed station of Chauvoncourt. Further to the east, we have made some pro-

London, Nov. 20.—Great Britain today prohibited the exportation of tea to all continental ports except those of countries of the allies and of Spain and Portugal. This prohibition is due to indications that Germany is receiving large supplies of tea through the Netherlands.

Amsterdam, Nov. 20—The shooting of an English woman as a spy in the barracks at Courtrai, was reported in a message received here today. The woman it was said was dressed in the garments of a priest when captured by the Germans.

Germans Preparing for one More Attempt to Capture Calais

LONDON, NOV. 20.—A DESPATCH FROM ROTTERDAM STATES THAT THE GERMANS HAVE SHUT OFF THE RAILWAY SERVICE IN BELGIUM, AND ALSO CLOSING DIRECT COMMUNICATION BETWEEN HOLLAND AND GERMANY. THESE DEVELOPMENTS MEANS THAT A TRANSFER OF TROOPS ON A LARGE SCALE IS UNDER WAY FROM THE RUSSIAN FRONTIER TO FLANDERS FOR A RENEWAL WITH INCREASED ENERGY OF THE FIGHT TO CAPTURE CALAIS.

NEAR THE BELGIAN FRONTIER, NOV. 20.—UNFIT MEN ARE STILL ARRIVING AT BRUGES, GHENT AND EECLOO, FROM THE FRONT TO GAIN THE REST WHICH IS IMPERATIVE AFTER THE REPEATED ASSAULTS AT DIXMUDE AND YPRES, TORN AND MUDSTAINED UNIFORMS AND HAGGARD FACES BEAR ELOQUENT WITNESS TO THEIR TERRIBLE EXPERIENCES.

It is estimated that 10,000 in- [illegible] until Friday had been engaged in holding the trenches between Dixmude, Bixschoote and Ypres, are now in barracks around Bruges, solely because they are not longer fit to continue the struggle. They are said to have been replaced by new troops to some extent, but I have reason to believe the German force along the right wing has been materially decreased both by the necessity of sending back exhausted men and the transference of the maximum weight of the attacking corps to a point farther south.

Geneva, Nov. 20.—From Brussels the National Swiss has received the following: "The number of German wounded arriving here is unimaginable. Trains, which we call cemetery trains, full of piled up dead soldiers, continue to arrive from the front. They contain bodies of dead: that is, four bodies tied together to facilitate transportation. The bodies are burned promptly in special furnaces erected just outside Brussels."

Ancona, Nov. 20.— A terrific storm in the Adriatic has compelled the allied fleet to lift the blockade off the Austrian coast. The warships were forced to put to sea to avoid being driven ashore.

Paris, Nov. 20.— Many heavy guns have been lost by the Germans in the floods in Flanders. The official communique today in stating this declares that the artillery fire from the coast to the Lys slackened somewhat yesterday. Snow is again falling in Flanders and the bad weather has prevented infantry attacks being made by the enemy.

The Germans have followed up their advantage at Chauvoncourt in the region of St. Mihiel, and have occupied the village.

THE Y. M. C. A. BOYS GET GOOD LECTURE ON BRITISH BATTLESHIPS

Last night the Y.M.C.A. entertained the members of the Y.W.C.A. at the former's splendid home. A pleasant evening was spent in music both vocal and instrumental. Dainty refreshments were served by the hosts of the evening. Mr. Sisson very ably was in control of the affair.

Last night the big billiard room of the Y.M.C.A. was filled by about 150 boys when Mr. Keith of the Normal School gave a most interesting and instructive lecture on the life and training of a boy aboard a British War ship. The address was well illustrated by clearly shown pictures on the screen. Every detail of a battleship was displayed by coloured pictures. An interesting feature of the lecture and pictures was a vividly displayed scene of a torpedo before being shot, its course through the water and its ultimate effect. A torpedo has now been devised that, in its course, may be turned at right angles. The interval apparatus of the torpedo was clearly shown. Scenes aboard ship in times of peace were also displayed. The "Middies" or Midshipmen were shown at meals, at work and at play. The speaker said he hoped some of the boys present would some day become midshipmen in the Canadian Navy. A clear picture was shown of a torpedo boat destroyer. Britain has 270 vessels of this description. Next a picture was shown of a torpedo boats signalling at night by flash lights. A good view was then given of submarines at the ocean's surface. The speaker gave a very lucid description of the working of the periscope or eye of the submarine. He explained that when the submarine is 20 feet below the surface, a mirror at the top of the periscope reflects a vision of the ocean's surrounding surface to those below. A picture of King George was shown and loudly applauded. The meeting ended by all present singing "God Save the King."

SOME VIGOROUS COUNTER ATTACKS BY GERMANS

Paris, Nov. 19.—The French official announcement given out by the War Office today says:

"On the north yesterday was marked by a renewal of activity on the part of the enemy's artillery, particularly between the seacoast and the Lys. There was no infantry attacks in this region.

"Between the Oise and the Aisne, the operations in the vicinity of Tracy-le-Val had a termination very favorable for our troops. It will be remembered that we took possession of this village several days ago. The day yesterday the Germans endeavored to recapture it.

"After having captured our first trenches they succeeded in making their way as far as the centre square in the village. Here, however, a vigorous counter attack delivered by our Algerian contingents drove the enemy back, wrested from him all the ground we had lost, and inflicted on him very heavy losses.

6 MEALS A DAY

Nothing is more important on an ocean-going steamer than the kitchen. On a full ship there may be two sittings for each regular meal, this making six meals to be served within twelve hours. In addition to breakfast, luncheon and dinner, there are extra which require much attention [illegible] of the Culinary Department. Before [illegible] and [illegible] are offered to the [illegible] in their [illegible] before luncheon, or about eleven in the morning, one may be served with a cup of hot broth, or something equally tempting. Afternoon tea is as much of an institution on board steamer as is the dinner. In the evening sandwiches are offered in the smoking room.

Labour saving and time saving appliances of every kind are therefore installed, and the chief cook must have many assistants to rush the meals through in time. Dishes are worked in automatic machines a hundred or so at a time, turned by a wheel; eggs pop out automatically when they have reached the medium boiled stage; the coffee pot whistles when it is just ready. The appetite on board ship grows every day, and by the end of the voyage the cooks are glad of their well earned rest.

GERMAN SOLDIERS ARE WANTING IN RESPECT FOR HELPLESS WOMEN

Staff Representative at the Front Tells of Brutal Conduct of Kaiser's Soldier's. Humane Officers Can Only Curb Their Men's Savage Instincts by Force of Arms. Pitiless Outrages Committed by Uhlans--Terrified Women Hide From Merciless Assailants

Amiens, France Nov. 20.— I have just returned from Montdidier, nine miles east of Roye, where the same deadlock seems to obtain as elsewhere along the line. It gleamed there however, information regarding Germans' treatment of women. This information tends to show that while discipline is severely maintained in the large communities the Uhlans and scattered outposts in the country districts have committed pitiless outrages; I shall give one story illustrating each phase of the situation.

"When the Germans reached Compiegne they found it almost empty of able bodied men. Generally speaking, the invaders conducted themselves well. One Saxon, however, billeted on a house where there was a defenceless young woman, began to court her assiduously. When she resisted his advances he attacked her. She succeeded in escaping and complained to the commanding officer. The latter accompanied her to the house where he saw every evidence of a violent struggle. The officer then turned to the soldier, and said: "I give you two hours in which to kill yourself; if you are not dead in two hours you will be shot." The soldier then went behind the barricade and fired a revolver bullet into his head."

While in Montdidier I went, accompanied by a soldier, to interview a young woman whose parents own a large farm close to a village near Roye. She is 25 years of age and has a sister of 24. Her mother is about 50. She has no brothers and all the male employes are in the army. Thus when about a dozen Uhlans came there no able-bodied men to protect the women. The Uhlans ate and drank heartily, then began to make remarks which frightened the old mother, who ran to hide in the cellar, where she had already concealed her daughters.

Presently the Uhlans began to search the house. One came down the first steps to the cellar and shouted:

"See here, madame, were there no female domestics on this farm? Where are they?"

Terrified, the daughters crouched behind a big barrel. Seeing only the mother the Uhlans disappeared and all went away. The next day it was learned that the Uhlans had broken into a neighboring farm house where there were a woman, aged about 50 and her husband. The soldiers held revolvers to the husband's head while his wife was attacked.

ALLIED WARSHIPS KILLED 1,700 OF THE ENEMY AT MIDDELKERKE

London, Nov. 20.—Basil Clark telegraphs to The Daily Mail from Dunkirk: "A week ago the Germans near the coast noticed that the English warships fire spared the houses on the sea front at Middelkerke. They accordingly took up quarters in these houses. Then their scheme became known to the British warships and the houses were suddenly bombarded fiercely by five vessels at once. The German casualties were enormous. A scouting officer estimated the number killed at 1,700. German aeroplanes today dropped two bombs over Cassel, killing a woman and child."

A LIVE BLUE EYED BABY GIVEN AWAY

Feldman and Christie presented The Imperial Musical Comedy Co. to another big audience last night. The piece staged was "The Elopers" and also [illegible] measure of clean entertainment and mirth-provoking fun. This company is an aggregation of versatile comedians, whose talent attracts good business despite hard times. Catchy songs, well sung; clever dancing and irresistible comedy go to make a show "worth while" in the hands of this talented company; and all at popular prices.

A blue-eyed baby, fully alive and squalling was given away to the lucky ticket-holder last night. 'Tis true the baby was a young pig, but blue-eyed nevertheless, and very much alive. It goes without saying that Mr. Feldman's method of presenting this four-legged and edible baby was in keeping with the occasion.

At 2.30 to-day a big bargain matinee will be offered at 10 and 20 cents for the benefit of ladies and children. Tonight will be the company's last appearance this trip; the play will be "The King of Oinko" Don't miss it.

The generally expressed opinion is that The Imperial Musical Comedy Company, can return again and again and attract big business.

SAVING THE SEALS

Only International Agreement Saved Them From Extinction

Russia, England, Japan and America agreed to suspend sealing in the open sea for fifteen years and sealing on land for five years. The need for this close season is explained by George Archibald Clark:

Pelagic sealing proved very destructive to the herd. It respected neither sex nor condition of the animals found, and the catch fell principally upon the nursing females, which were taken upon the summer feeding grounds in Behring Sea; for when the migration route of the seals had been covered the sealers entered Behring Sea and lay in wait for the mother seals as they visited the fishing banks one or two hundred miles distant from the islands for the purpose of feeding. As a result of the death of the mother, the dependent young starved to death on the rookeries. In the fall of 1896 sixteen thousand fur seal pups died of starvation on the rookeries of St. Paul and St. George islands.

As pelagic sealing developed through the increasing number of ships, its catch grew from 8,000 at the beginning to a maximum of 140,000 in 1894; but this could not last, and with the declining herd the pelagic catch also began to decline. In the season of 1911, the last of the industry, the catch numbered about 15,000 skins. From the known catch of the sealing fleets and from conservative estimates as to animals killed but not recovered it is apparent that more than a million breeding female fur seals and a like number of unborn and dependent young were destroyed during the thirty odd years the pelagic industry has been in operation. The result is the depleted condition in which we find the herd to-day. Our best information places the number of animals in the herd in 1867 at between two and three millions. It numbers to-day about 215,000.

FREAK PLANTS

Trap and Devour Insects, Digesting Bodies of Their Prey

Among the strangest of all nature's products are the insect-eating, or carnivorous, plants. They actually catch, eat, and digest various insects by a process practically as thorough as that of the animals.

The so-called Venus "fly trap" or "vegetable butcher" is one of the most remarkable of these. It grows in a wild state in the forests of North Carolina, where it creeps along the ground, presenting thousands of gaping mouths, into which the unsuspecting fly or insect is lured and imprisoned.

The leaves of this plant consist of two valves, shaped like clam shells, which, when closed, form a trap. The ends of the leaves are baited with a sweet juice which attracts the insect. The leaves are covered with minute hairs, which correspond very closely to the arrangements of the nervous system in animals. On the edge of the leaves are rows of long, fine teeth.

When the unsuspecting insect has been lured to the leaf by the attractive juice he steps upon one of the microscopic hairs, and the two valves shut with a snap, keeping Mr. Fly secure.

Still more curious are certain plants in Borneo, which distill liquors for the purpose of luring their victims. Many of these are miniature grog shops. In their leaves are little pitchers, which are filled with hard alcoholic liquors. Each of the pitchers has a tight-fitting cover which keeps the dew and rain from diluting the liquor. No scientists have yet succeeded in analyzing the liquors with any satisfactory results, but it is evident that they are of different kinds, since different species of the plants attract different insects.

The most unique of all the productions of nature is the plant popularly known as the "goose plant." It is a native of Guatemala, and receives its name from the bud, which has the shape of a goose floating along the water with its neck proudly arched. The flower is very beautiful, but repulsive. It has an odor resembling that of decayed meat. The plant attracts the carrion fly, which is the agent of fertilization.

RAND HIGH-GRADERS

Precious Metal Stolen After It Leaves the Stamps

Most people have heard of I. D. B. (illicit diamond buying), a crime which in South Africa is punished with penal servitude on the breakwater at Cape Town.

The Rand, however, has the lesser-known offence of I. G. B. (illicit gold buying). Considering that in the Rand mines only a few pennyweights of gold go to a ton of quartz, it is obvious that the miner does not get much chance of stealing the precious metal. When does the gold thief get his opportunity?

The pieces of quartz are ground into dust by powerful hammers known as "stamps." Water then washes the dust over inclined plates coated with amalgam. The gold instantly combines with the mercury in the amalgam, afterwards being easily separated by chemical process.

It is of this gold-laden amalgam that the dishonest employe will scrape off portions which, though small, will mount up to a good bit of gold in time.

The claim which was made by ship owners and others, and which has been confirmed to a considerable extent by official records kept by the Marine and Fisheries Department of the Dominion, that the level of the river and Great Lakes is being constantly lowered, principally by drainage operations on a large scale, is to be thoroughly tested by a Commission appointed by the Canadian Government. Gauges were placed at various points between Port Arthur and Quebec to make the required tests.

THE RUNNER SCORED BUT STILL WAS OUT

The Comedian of the Washington Team Tells of the Funniest Play He Ever Saw

I have heard many a funny baseball story, said Herman "Germany" Schaefer, "the funniest man in baseball," to a sporting writer who brought up the subject, but the funniest ever came directly under my own observation. The game was played in my bush league days, and it is just as well to leave out names and places.

The play that caused the mob scene happened in the 14th inning. We went to bat in the first half of the fourteenth, hoping to end the game, as darkness was approaching and it was evident that only one more inning could be played. Our first man up reached first, was sacrificed to second and took third on a passed ball. With only one out, it looked like a run.

The batter was a clever bunter and the manager signalled for a squeeze play. The pitcher had plenty of speed and threw a fast one over. Naturally the runner on third was off with the ball, the batter connected, and while the ball was in the air the runner slid over the plate. The batter hit the ball too hard and almost made a single over short.

The third baseman had raced in for a bunt, and, of course, was out of the play. It was evident, however, that the shortstop could make the catch.

As the runner who had crossed the plate got on his feet his teammates yelled to him to get back to third to prevent a double play. He started for third as if mad. The shortstop muffed the ball when the runner was about half way back. Seeing the error, the runner dashed for the plate again, but the throw retired him.

At this stage the mob scene was put on. No one seemed to know what had happened. Every player rushed at the umpire. The official kept his head and ruled that when the man on third touched the plate a run had been tallied and that everything that happened afterward was void. The decision being in our favor, we gracefully retired, but not so the home team.

They kicked long and loud, and the bleacherites, believing the umpire had made a terrible decision, rushed on the field. So did a few policemen. The umpire stood his ground and finally forfeited the game to us.

The play created all sorts of comment and the ruling of the umpire was upheld by the league president.

I know of no other case in baseball where a man actually scored, tried to go back to third and then tried to score again, only to be retired, the run being allowed.

BASEBALL IS CLEAN

Billy Sunday, the Evangelist, Has Fond Recollections of It

Everywhere I go I am asked: "Are you still interested in baseball?"

You might as well ask an old ex-fire horse, "Do you remember the sound of the gong," said Billy Sunday, once a famous player, but of latter years a zealous and somewhat sensational evangelist.

Baseball is and always will be loved as long as it is kept clean and free from gamblers and crooks and from the taint of suspicion that it's not on the square. It is on the square, although some unprincipled men have tried to cast a cloud over the game.

I don't believe the game is any faster to-day than twenty years ago. I do not believe the players are any speedier than in the past. They have some new names for the same old stunts we pulled off in the days of Cap Anson, Mike Kelley, Buck Ewing, and others.

There are some fine pitchers in the game, but I will put old John Clarkson, Amos Rusie, or Charlie Radbourne up with any of the fast ones of to-day. You will always find me boosting the grand old game that gave me my start in this world and I would not take a cold million for my experience on the diamond.

Marquard's Hoodoo

"I never could pitch winning ball after having my picture taken the same day," said Rube Marquard, the Giant's eccentric southpaw. Marquard is reported to have thrown a baseball at a camera man who was about to take his picture on the sly. He is quite superstitious on the point.

Hints on Beauty Culture

Do You Laugh in Tune and with Your Eyes?

By LUCREZIA BORI

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainment, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the newest and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of woman."

LUCREZIA BORI

IT may seem strange to try to think of Epictetus as a beauty culturist, but he gives us an excellent beauty hint when he says: "Laughter should not be much, nor frequent, nor unrestrained."

What has laughter to do with beauty, you want to know? Anything that makes for attractiveness, or its antonym, concerns beauty, doesn't it? And a laugh may be very musical and fascinating, revealing [illegible] beauty of nature and [illegible], or it may be an empty sound, detracting from a lovely face.

Lord Chesterfield wrote in his famous letters: "In my mind there is nothing so illiberal and ill-bred as audible laughter."

As long as such great minds considered laughter a subject for serious discussion, why may not we take it for the text of a beauty talk?

So few of us know how to laugh—naturally. So few of us know the fine distinction between laughter from the heart and the meaningless outburst of noise, which may signify dozens of things besides mirth. So few of us know the right key upon which to laugh. For each one of us has a certain musical key which should act as the tuning fork for our natures. We are not all made in the same key. Some of us are sharps and some flats, some majors and some minors. And if as many musical instruments were out of tune as there are human beings off the key, this world would be a place of maddening discords.

Laughter, to be musical, must be spontaneous. It must come from the heart. It must express a feeling of genuine happiness, joy, appreciation. The laugh indexes the character. The laughter of the child is usually true because it is sincere.

As we grow older there is less need of noisy outlet for emotions, either joy or grief. A smile is more becoming, more eloquent, in most cases, than an outright laugh.

Continual laughter is often due to nervousness. It bespeaks a lack of poise. It is unbeautiful as well as foolish. It makes lines about the eyes, deep creases from the nose to the mouth.

Laughter that does not include the eyes is not laughter at all. It is a hollow mockery, a base imitation. It is merely muscular exercise and not good at that.

It is impossible to describe in words anything so delightfully musical and appealing as a genuine laugh. It is a ripple of melody, in which is the trill of birds, the sighing of breezes, the faint vibration of a far-off harp. It leaves a pleasing echo in the memory.

One of the difficult tasks of the singer is to learn how to laugh on the key and with spontaneity. It takes practice. Practised laughter may be of great value in teaching the right pitch for the voice and in giving an idea of elasticity of tones.

Laugh up and down the scales. It will help you in your speaking voice. The true laugh must be infectious. It must set other laughs in answering vibration. It should be the one for the chorus.

And, unless your laugh can be all this, unless it can express yourself at your best, choke it and put a smile in its place. You can learn how to smile by looking in the mirror. And even the smile must spring from the heart. Otherwise it is merely a grin.

When you feel that you must laugh for joy, you will laugh in tune. Otherwise a smile will do nicely, thank you.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

Have you time to listen to my long story? I shall try to explain as clearly as possible.

A year ago I began to keep company with a young man of my own age, with the consent of my mother. I had known him slightly all my life. He came to see me quite often, and as he is a very pleasant young man I grew quite fond of him. He, himself, I know, cares very much for me. At Christmas we became engaged, but I think I have been unhappy in [illegible].

Lately I have begun to think that I do not care so much for him as I [illegible]. He is so different from [illegible].

[illegible]

What shall I do? Would this engagement make any difference [illegible] if I should meet a man I did love? I wish a thousand times I had not given myself to this man!

[illegible]

SO you wish a thousand times that you had not [illegible] what you have done—poor child.

If you would only [illegible] who have gone before you, [illegible] will come behind.

You have been foolish, ill-advised to say the least—don't go on being foolish. Now is the time to be wise.

You have made a bitter mistake, and you will suffer for it—bitterly. Let the mistake end—now.

Break your engagement, and break it now, this very day, this very evening. It isn't fair to the man, and it isn't fair to yourself, to let it go on a day longer.

You never were really in love with him at all—you were just lonely. If you married him, feeling as you do, you would find that there is no loneliness in the world like what our clever cousins, the French, call "loneliness of two."

[illegible]

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

THE END OF THE FILM :: By Michelson

THERE was a lot that went before—while the man was turning the handle—a whole romance that will be flashed on the screen in thousands of places all over the country. And they acted it well, those two.

Then in that "reunited" embrace of the film story, when the signal came that the scene and the play were ended, they lingered. THAT meant more to them than the make-believe romance—THEIR romance that had grown in the studios and in all the rough and tumble of the picture drama out-of-doors.

THIS extra scene that doesn't get on the films has words with it, softly spoken words that only occupy a few moments, but that are rich in meaning. Love can't be acted without HEARTS, and hearts can't always be making believe.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

I RETURNED to my apartment in very little better spirits than when I left. I merely knew that the problem of [illegible] that I was facing was being faced by men all over the continent. That, at least, I was young and beginning, and ought to take a stand once and for all.

Mary sat by the library table reading. I had devoutly hoped she would be in bed. She was evidently waiting for me. She still maintained the utter silence that might mean anything. Once more I felt that queer fury seething in my veins. Why, in heaven's name, didn't she say something—anything? This silence was getting on my nerves.

I went into my room and took off my shoes, dropping them purposely with a thunderous bang. I got into my slippers and looked at my watch. It was past midnight. I had no more than slipped into my lounging gown when there came a knock on the hall door, and the downstairs tenant's maid stood outside, looking sleepy and disgruntled.

"Mr. Alvin's compliments, sir," she said [illegible], "and would ye be makin' a little less noise. He's had no great lot of sleep for several nights, what with [illegible], and tonight he thought to go to bed early and get a bit of sleep."

"The devil with Mr. Alvin!" I shot back fiercely, and instantly Mary was at my side.

"Please do tell Mr. Alvin we're awfully sorry," she said sweetly, "but Mr. Blank is a little out of sorts tonight. He'll be feeling better in the morning."

The maid stared. I felt the hot color rising to the roots of my hair. It was a nasty way of getting back. If a man had done it I think I would have thrashed him on the spot. When the door was closed Mary and I confronted each other in silence. There was storm in her eyes, and certainly plenty of it in my heart.

"Mary," I said, "how dare you do such a thing as that? Do you want the neighbors to know that we quarrel? Do you want them to gossip and watch us?"

"I don't care," said Mary, "if they do."

"You do care," I flung back. "You care more for what people think than any one I ever knew. Women are always that way. They care a darn sight more for the superficial appearance of things than for actualities."

"Yes?" said Mary coolly.

"I don't see how in heaven's name you can be so inconsistent," I went on, whipped into fury by her maddening apathy. "Tomorrow you'll be sorry you spoke so to the Alvins' maid, and it wasn't decent anyway."

Mary's chilly indifference came to a sudden end.

"You're a brute," she stormed, and, in [illegible] "How dare you speak to [illegible] I won't have her talked to so," and Mary burst suddenly into a wild passion of tears.

I have never seen anything so childish and futile as her spasm of wrath. A great pity welled up in me suddenly. To war with a woman such as this, with her petty mind and her petty rebellions, was like warring with a sparrow!

So, pitying my wife, somehow my anger dissolved. I apologized, and Mary cried, and we sat up until daylight talking. Once Mr. Alvin rapped on the ceiling below when the sound of our voices rose, but, when I rapped back, he stopped.

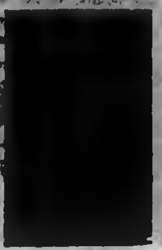
Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Sword Swallowers Have Assisted Science

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).



DR. HIRSHBERG

ONE crow does not make a winter, and one swallow does not make a drunkard. One swallow, nevertheless, has been known to kill a man of "indigestion." You doubt it? Is not "indigestion" everything from superacidity to cancer of the oesophagus!

Even so, knife swallowing—not the habit so common in the home, so amusing in a lobster palace—has been dubbed a bizarre species of "indigestion." The physiological definition of sword swallowing is no worse than "indigestion."

Have you ever sat nonchalantly—or even nervously—while a doctor rammed his Gargantuan forefinger into your throat? The hen on the griddle is on a downy bed of roses compared to such a human situation. You hawk and hem, gurgle and gag almost to the point of topsy-turviness. Yet the sideshow and the circus men who swallow swords do so as contentedly and gleefully as an infant gulping down its father's lost quarter. The sword enters the mouth, then the oesophagus, and, finally, the stomach. Now these structures are not in a straight line, yet these "internal acrobats" so twist their innards that the sword "gets there just the same."

Sword swallowers have often lent themselves to the progress of medicine and physiology. The Scotch physician, Dr. Stevens, made a number of experiments of digestion through the kindness of a friendly sword swallower.

He caused this fellow to swallow small metallic tubes pierced with holes. They were filled with pieces of meat. When he was ready the swordsman would disgorge the tubes. Thus the various stages and degrees of digestion were recorded.

It is now known just how long a throat can be made insensitive to touch. It was discovered by means of the sword swallowers. Indeed, the "oesophagoscope"—a tube to look down into the stomach—the stomach tube, illumination of that organ with a tiny electric light, were all learned from sword swallowers.

The other day Dr. Grossman of Berlin exhibited a man who was called "the human aquarium."

He had such a huge mouth and so dilated an oesophagus that he could swallow a small aquarium in which were a dozen gold fish, several tadpoles, frogs and other small creatures. He would somersault this in his stomach, and then disgorge first the bowl, then the fluid and the lively, wriggly denizens of the deep.

Some of these swallowers have the power to swallow unbroken hen's eggs, [illegible], pen-knives, broken glass and the like. A patient of Prof. William Halsted of Johns Hopkins several times swallowed several hundred separate articles. Among them were [illegible], knives, [illegible], glass, tacks, nails, stones, crystals and rings.

Few of these rare types of swallowers ever have tummy aches. One fellow, whose name was [illegible], but who was called "Cassandra," was accustomed to swallow live rats, mice and crabs with the large claws clipped.

Chevalier Cliquot, a French-Canadian, [illegible] is still doing his stunt of swallowing a number of 22-inch bayonet swords and a 22-inch cavalry sword all at once.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

CAYENNE pepper and borax mixed and sprinkled on the pantry shelves will exterminate ants, which form one of the pests of the summer time.

Black pepper is an excellent moth preventive. If you do not wish to sprinkle the dry pepper over the articles to be protected, make a strong black pepper tea and sprinkle the garments. Then roll them closely in newspapers which have been wet with turpentine, and see that all edges are folded down and pasted so as to exclude air and light, and make it impossible for the smallest moth to find entrance. One of the most important things to remember about packing away clothes or rugs or draperies is to have them thoroughly aired and brushed and cleansed of spots before laying aside. All pockets should be turned wrong side out and the [illegible] brushed. Bits of cotton, wet with oil of cedar and hung about the closets where garments are stored will aid in the discouragement of moths trying to find lodgment.

The trunks in which the garments are packed should be brushed, then sunned and wiped out with gasoline. Gasoline fumes are said to be relied upon to destroy moth eggs. If you think there are moths in the weaves of some article, cover with [illegible] cloths and go over them with hot irons until the steam has penetrated the fabric. It will be necessary to repeat the ironing several times. This is an especially useful method for rugs or carpets. In packing away the other articles don't forget that [illegible]

Roaches and water-bugs will feast on powdered borax and sugar—and die. It is the most effectual and harmless mixture known to rid the house of these annoyances.

To clean an enamelled kettle or pan which has become stained, boil in a solution of baking soda and water for 15 minutes and rub with salt.

Pad the dishpan with a folded Turkish towel when you have fine china or cut glass to wash, and the danger of breakage will be materially lessened.

When sending your rugs away for storage or when storing them in the house for the summer, roll powdered alum in the folds and you will not need so many moth balls with their disagreeable odor.

Porch furniture which looks soiled and shows wear can be freshened by dusting and washing with tepid soap suds, dried quickly in the air, but not in the hot sun. Then rub with crude kerosene or turpentine and raw linseed oil, mixed half and half. All oil should be carefully removed or else rubbed into the wicker or wood.

TWO FAVORITE SALADS OF M. NOGUE

It is the one dish that gives to the meal the pleasing touch of delicate [illegible] and individual charm, for the salad lends itself to ready invention as no other dish does.

I offer you here two salads that exemplify the housewife's opportunity to vary a salad and make it seem like an entirely different invention. One common salad base is used, the difference in dressings and seasonings making the two totally dissimilar.

Salad St. Denis.

FOR 10 persons take 12 oysters, 12 mussels, six ounces of shrimp, one half of cooked lobster diced, one can of French peas, one-half can of string beans, cut in dices three bottoms of artichokes, cut in dices one-half can of asparagus tips, [illegible] three ounces of celery, [illegible] ounces of olive oil and two glasses of dry champagne, salt, pepper and [illegible] and dress it in a salad bowl.

THE same as above with the difference that instead of oil and champagne the salad is seasoned with thick mayonnaise dressing and dressed in large artichoke bottoms and decorated with truffles and capers and each one served as an individual salad, one for each guest.

Another Man of the Hour

It appears to be unquestioned that the dominating spirit in Turkey at this time is Enver Pasha, the Minister of War and Leader of the so-called Young Turks; and it is not doubted that he is acting in thorough concert with Berlin.

Enver is only thirty-nine years of age. His training has been that of a soldier since his early boyhood. He entered the military school at Constantinople when he was only 11 years of age, and he had a commission in the army before he was nineteen. Subsequently he served as a military attache at Berlin and became a personal friend of Emperor William.

One of the remarkable features of his career is that, in spite of the fact that he was largely instrumental in forcing Abdul Hamid to abdicate and in securing the elevation of Mohammed V the present ruler, Enver has succeeded in swinging the Young Turk party from Great Britain to Germany.

Germany for some time had the ear of the old Sultan, and Great Britain had openly sympathized with the Young Turks. Yet under the new ruler Enver has succeeded in bringing Turkey to the side of Germany and certainly has caused considerable uneasiness among the Allies. But what the Young Turk leader expects to gain by abandoning the position of neutrality and by plunging his country into war does not appear clear. Possibly he may be guided by confidence in the ultimate success of Germany and Austria and a guarantee of protection from these countries against Russian aggression and against Russian purpose, to seize and to hold Constantinople.

Our Sugar Lottery

Some very bad guessing was done by the speculative elements of the community as to the effects of the European war on the price of sugar. August saw a rise which carried raw cane up to 5½ cents a pound, and the refined product to 7½ cents. This has been followed, as every householder knows, by a decline which has brought the refined to its old 5-cent level. In fact, the popular price of ordinary sugar now stands at rarely more than half a cent higher than it did a year ago, and actually lower than it was two years ago.

When the war broke out it seemed as if, with half the sugar-raising area of the world under arms, and presumably out of that business, and with the movement of European beets for our use as seed cut off, sugar would become a very scarce article. But the problem has not yet worked out that way. Several countries on the continent have of late been actually trying to sell a part of their 1914 crop to us. England, which bought heavily on the first advance in price, has turned about and is now discouraging further importations. Our own beet sugar growers are getting ready, in co-operation with the agricultural department, to put extra acres into beets next year, and the same influences will undoubtedly stimulate production in all the tropical cane growing regions.

It is, besides, not yet demonstrated that Germany and Russia will not raise their usual amount of sugar. Their peoples will be badly impoverished—unemployment will be general and anything that offers any prospect of financial return is likely to be seized upon. France may get into shape for agriculture, too. Our own seed beets are coming in from Rotterdam and Copenhagen without difficulty so that this fear has been found groundless. Unless the unexpected [illegible] of strife puts a [illegible] signal on the industry, our [illegible] production will be very heavy, perhaps giving the industry a momentum that it will never again lose. Of recent years the beet sugar business has been increasingly profitable, and now promises to become a real competitor with the cane even without that aid from a tariff which is now in process of removal.

Good-Bye Old Backache Nerviline Will Fix You

Stiffness is Rubbed Right Out; Every Sign of Pain Disappears.

Gee whiz—think of it!

No more stomach dosing necessary to cure your lame back.

Every trace of lameness, every bit of stiffness, every sign of weakness in the back's muscles can be rubbed away for all time to come by good old "Nerviline."

No other liniment can do the work so quickly, can penetrate so deeply, can bring ease and comfort to the back-weary sufferer as Nerviline invariably does.

Backache isn't the only malady Nerviline is quick to cure. For lumbago or sciatica you would go far to find relief so speedy as Nerviline gives. For chronic rheumatism there are pain-destroying properties in Nerviline that give it first rank. The way it limbers up a stiff joint and takes soreness out of strained or rheumatic muscles is simply a wonder.

If you have an ache or a pain anywhere, if you have a sore back, a stiff neck, a stiff joint, a strained muscle—if you have lumbago, congested chest or sore throat, just try Nerviline. Rub it on plentifully—it won't blister, it can't do anything but cure you quickly. The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical, of course, but you can, from any dealer, also get the 25c. small size of Nerviline, the king of all pain-relieving remedies.

CHLORINATED WATER

Drug Can be Added to Kill the Taste After Germs Die

Just when the chemists were congratulating themselves that they had largely solved the problem of pure drinking water by their idea of doctoring water with chlorinated lime to kill germs, protests came from many cities that the water tasted of the chlorine, and they have had to go to work again on the problem. Now they have discovered a way of putting more chemicals into the water to kill the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has killed the germs.

Usually the amount of chemical spread through the water is so small that no one can taste it; but the proportion varies with local conditions, and there are times when much larger amounts are used. If more than seven pounds of the chemical is used in a million gallons of water, the most sensitive palates begin to discover the taste and complaints are made to the water department. With every additional pound of the chemical come more protests.

One way to get rid of the taste is to store the water before sending it into the mains; but this is not usually practicable, and chemists have been seeking another remedy. Now it is stated that a drug called thiosulphate will hide the taste of the chlorine after the chlorine has had a few minutes' time to kill the germs. The prescription calls for one part of thiosulphate to two parts of chlorinated lime. To prove that the additional chemical is harmless, the discoverer points out that thiosulphate is used in medicine, and that, in order to get a dose the size a doctor would order for a patient, a person would have to drink about 370 gallons of the treated water.

Strength of Insects

If you were as strong, proportionately, as the beetle is, and were a man weighing a couple of hundred pounds, you would be able to lift with ease 400,000 pounds. For a beetle can lift a weight that is just 200 times its own weight.

Or, if you could jump about with the same ease as the grasshopper, you could spring over a church without much effort.

Or, again, if you wanted to be nearly as strong as the bee, you would have to drag after you a load weighing 4,000 pounds.

It seems, apparently, from such observations made by naturalists, that the greater in size the animal the greater is the muscular energy needed to move it about, and that there is not much left for outside force.

ORIGIN OF CHECKS

It is claimed that the business world owes the idea of the bank cheque to nothing else than London's fogs.

These fogs are sometimes of such a density that the pedestrian can see but a few feet ahead of him. Something over a hundred years ago the attacks of thieves and highwaymen in the streets of London upon bank messengers and tradesmen going to settle their bills became so frequent in times of heavy fog as seriously to interfere with the conduct of London's business.

It was easy for the thief to ambush his victim, club him into insensibility, rob him, and then disappear into the murky atmosphere, with little likelihood of apprehension or identification, or that passers-by would witness the commission of the crime or be of any assistance in the chase.

In these circumstances bankers, tradesmen, and others set their wits to work, with the result that the bank cheque was devised for the payment of debts. Soon the highwaymen found that a few pieces of paper were all the booty they were likely to get from a "hold-up" of even a wealthy tradesman. Accordingly the activities of daylight robbers soon came to an end, but the convenience of the bank cheque proved so great that it survived not only in London, but was adopted throughout the civilized

FRIGHTENED HENS ARE NOT GOOD LAYERS

It is reported that some of the large egg farms in the United States charge admission to their poultry plants, not with the idea of making profit, but simply to discourage visitors. They claim that visitors frighten the hens and cause a falling off in the egg yield. This has been noticed by many breeders, and the wise poultryman will accompany visitors, and at once stop any actions on their part which will tend to excite the birds. The egg producing breeds—Leghorns, Anconas, Minorcas, etc.—are more nervous and more easily frightened than the larger breeds, and seem more afraid and suspicious of strangers.

The writer remembers the large number of visitors who flock to the poultry department of one of our agricultural colleges. On bad days or in the winter time when the pens in the continuous house would be pretty full of birds, some visitor, apparently of the opinion the birds ought to perform for the visitors, would rattle the wire, or in some way start a commotion among the hens. It is bad for the birds in the pen, and fifty times worse for those on trapnests. An immediate banging at the trap commences, the egg the bird may have laid is probably broken, and the bird cannot get out for some time. The visitors gone the hen quietens down, and in all probability turns around and eats the broken egg. In addition to exciting the birds—which is undesirable—the bad habit of egg-eating may be formed. This case is hardly applicable to the average poultry farm, yet it is true and will serve to show how undesirable undue excitement is to the high-strung laying hen.

The hen, no matter how high strung, does not fear the hand that feeds her. In a little while the flock know when to expect their owner or attendant and run to meet him. Kindness and gentle handling, excluding everything likely to cause commotion in the poultry yard, is the best and only way to look after poultry. It is useful on many occasions to have the birds so tame that they can be picked up easily. A quiet hen that will permit her owner to handle her while on the nest, is worth three times as much as the wild hen that endangers her eggs by leaving the nest hurriedly on the approach of owner or attendant.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

FOLLOWS CANADA'S LEAD

Free Distribution of Trees to be Made in United States

The good work done by the Dominion Forestry Branch in the past twelve or thirteen years in distributing trees to settlers in the prairies for windbreaks, and ultimately for fuel and timber, is to be followed by the United States Forest Service. Mr. W. A. Peterson, Superintendent of the newly established Field Station at Mandan, North Dakota, recently visited the Dominion Forestry Branch Nursery at Indian Head in order to get information as to the methods employed in handling the trees to settlers in Canada. It has been decided that the United States Forest Service will in the future distribute trees to prairie settlers from Mandan in the same manner as the Dominion Forestry Branch has been distributing them from Indian Head. The province of Ontario has for a number of years been distributing trees to farmers from Guelph and latterly from the nursery station at St. Williams. In both the above cases the trees (except special kinds for which a small charge is made) are distributed free, the recipient paying the express and undertaking to give cultivation for a period of three years. The province of Quebec during the past few years has distributed trees at a very low price from the provincial forest nursery at Berthierville. It is interesting to know that Canada has been leading in this matter.

ABSOLUTE ZERO

Considered to be 270 Degrees Below Zero—Trying to Reach It

Two hundred and seventy degrees below zero has, from theoretical considerations, been known to be the temperature at which all molecular motion ceases. In other words, it is the temperature which a body will have when every particle of its heat is abstracted. The rate at which the pressure of a gas decreases as it is cooled shows us that the pressure should vanish entirely if the gas were cooled to a temperature of 273 degrees below zero. Now the pressure is due to the molecular motion which we call heat, and if this motion ceases it means that we have removed all of the heat; in other words, we have brought the gas to the lowest possible temperature. On this account it has been called the absolute zero, and scientific investigators have been struggling for many years to reach this ultimate goal, for it has been a practical certainty that many of the properties will disappear, or become profoundly modified, at the bottom of the scale of temperature.

RANCH MANAGER—ARTHUR McKINNON

General Contractor, Rollo Bay, P. E. I.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs—all young foxes—good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $80,000 worth of stock for themselves. $20,000 worth has already been disposed of, leaving $200,000 to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent., in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say:—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 3 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($45,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $90,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after there will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs, shipped from Prince Edward Island auction to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four foxes this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain English what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business— and then judge for yourself to have been paid by some of the Charlottetown daily newspapers.

GOTCH MET RINGER IN HIS FIRST MATCH

But He Was so Disgusted at His Showing That He Nearly Gave up Wrestling

Frank A. Gotch, world's champion wrestler, met a "ringer" in his first [illegible] engagement on the mat. Gotch proved inferior to the scientific tricks of his opponent and was thrown, but the realization that it took Dan McLeod, who once wrestled in Montreal under the name of George A. Little, one hour and forty-one minutes and forty-six minutes respectively to tumble him fully decided Gotch in his budding determination to become a champion grappler.

This match took place at Lucerne, Ia., back in [illegible]. Gotch had become a neighborhood celebrity and was the idol of the Humboldt lodge of the Order of Woodmen, of which he had become a member. There was strong rivalry between Humboldt and a neighboring lodge, which announced it would have a wrestler present to win the prize offered at the Woodmen's picnic.

Humboldt lodge accepted the blind challenge, and was quite satisfied to allow the "Mysterious Stranger" from the rival town to take a trimming. He appeared smaller than Gotch, although built on lines suggesting great strength.

The pair took holds at the fair grounds on a plot of ground which contained a layer of cinders beneath the surface. Before the bout had proceeded far these cinders were torn loose, and many of them found resting places in the cuticle of the wrestlers.

If Gotch was surprised with the agility and skill of the "Mysterious Stranger," the latter was no less surprised at the strength of what had been described to him as a green farmer boy. To shorten the story, the pair pulled and rolled all over the plot, Gotch breaking many tricky holds and finding his own amateur efforts unavailing until the stranger finally forced him down and into the cinders with a half nelson. The bout lasted nearly two hours.

Gotch was "all in," but he went back gamely for the second bout, only to be thrown more quickly by the same hold. Gotch was disheartened and discouraged, yet the very next day sought out the stranger to see if he could not get a return match and redeem his reputation.

Imagine Gotch's surprise when the stranger informed him that he was none other than Dan McLeod. McLeod was interested with the embryo grappler he had found, and offered to start him on a professional career. Gotch was delighted, and found McLeod as good as his word, for he turned the boy over to "Farmer" Burns, who taught Gotch the intricacies of nelsons, half-nelsons, hammerlocks, bridging scissors crotch holds, and all the tricks in the repertoire of the cunning professional. That Gotch proved an apt pupil is evidenced by his subsequent success.

Champion Gotch was born on April [illegible] 1878, on a farm near Humboldt, Ia., of German parentage. He spent his boyhood and early youth on the home farm, attending school in the winter and helping with the work on the farm the rest of the time. His open air work and regular habits developed the strength and muscle which was of such value later in the arena.

POET DEFENDS BOXING

After a discussion in France and Belgium on the brutality or otherwise, of boxing, Maurice Maeterlinck, the poet and author pronounced his benediction on the ring game in the following words:—

"The study of boxing gives us excellent lessons in humility and throws a rather disquieting light on the decay of some of our most precious instincts. We soon perceive that in everything pertaining to the use of our members, agility, skill, muscular strength, power to resist pain, we are at the bottom of the scale among mammals. From this point of view our rightful place would be a modest one between the frog and the sheep.

"The kick of a horse, the goring of a bull, the bite of a dog are mechanically and automatically perfect. It would be impossible to improve by lessons the instinctive use of their natural weapons, but we humans, for all our pride, do not even know how to use our fists. We do not even know which is really the weapon of our kind. Until a master has laboriously taught us we are totally ignorant of concentrating and making use of the relatively tremendous force resident in our chest and shoulders. Watch two carters, two countrymen who come to blows; nothing more pitiable.

"Now just contemplate two boxers: No useless words, no anger, the calm of two men who know what they have to do. The athletic attitude of the defence, one of the finest of the manly body, gives free play to all the muscles of the organism. What a noble simplicity in the attack! Three blows, delivered scientifically, spoil mathematically the thousand clumsy attempts of the uninitiated. And the struggle ends to the satisfaction of the victor, whose triumph is so decisive that he has no desire to press his victory further and without dangerous hurt to the vanquished man, who is simply reduced to unconsciousness during the time necessary for all rancor to evaporate. Shortly after the loser rises without lasting injury for resistance of his bones and of his organs is in a strict and natural proportion to the strength of the human weapon which has struck him down."

Capacity of Cables

Experiments by a large telephone company have proved that 1,800 wires can be crowded into the same size cable heretofore used for only 1,200 wires without impairing their efficiency.

WESTERN PIONEERS

Men of the Eighties Who Persevered in the Face of Difficulty

There is little left of the Winnipeg of the early eighties. Each year sees a diminution of the links which bind the days when Winnipeg was the stepping-off place, to the present, in which Winnipeg acts the part of the gateway to prosperity and affluence to all who seek diligently and perseveringly. Each year, one or more of those who formed the little band of pioneers who exhibited that diligence and perseverance in the face of almost insuperable obstacles, who stuck to the town of their adoption in spite of hard times, through all the vicissitudes of the growth of Winnipeg from trading post to metropolis, steadfast in their faith in its future, pass to their long rest having seen their judgment justified, their dreams of the city that was to be come true. The city of Winnipeg, and indeed, the whole of Western Canada, joins in paying tribute to the worth of these pioneer citizens of the prairies, whose unbounded optimism it was which made possible the Winnipeg of to-day, and whose prophetic vision outlined, in spite of the struggles in which they were involved, the glorious future of the west, which to-day is just beginning to be realized. The story of their careers is an object lesson to all in display of sterling character, of business integrity, and a wealth of homekindness.—The Saturday Post.

Protecting Immigrant Girls

A determined effort to stamp out the traffic in immigrant girls, and their exploitation by employment bureaus, is to be made by the Montreal Presbytery. A strong committee of the Presbytery was formed to investigate the entire question, to seek means of protecting the girls, and of correcting the abuses of which they are the victims.

HOW TO DOCTOR WOUND ON HOOF

Cleanliness and Antiseptic Treatment as Necessary for a Horse as for a Man

Nature often repairs wounds on the horse's hoof without help from man. All man can do is to assist nature; but often he hinders the reparative process, and sometimes his interference is positively harmful. This is so when he soaks an injured foot in an old, dirty tub and forgets to change the water each time it is used. The foul soaking tub is a veritable abomination. It should be accounted a relic of barbarous days not to be used by modern man.

This advice refers especially to the treatment of a nail-puncture case. It may, however, be admissible in some cases to treat sores of the coronet, or suppurating corns, by soaking in a tubful of antiseptic solution.

The average poultice also is an abomination, and positive damage in many a case. This certainly is so as regards the cow-dung poultice. Germs teem and multiply in it, and these germs induce pus or possibly may cause tetanus (lockjaw). Any hot, moist poultice in which an antiseptic is not mixed will harbor and grow noxious germs. If a poultice of any sort is used, it should be made up with a solution of a good disinfectant or germ-killer.

Modern treatment seldom employs a poultice in the nail-prick case. When a nail has been found and removed, the horseman often is contented to pour some turpentine on the wound and allow the opening to close. Germs may be retained, and in the absence of air they may cause tetanus; for the tetanus germ can live and grow only in the absence of oxygen. The right way to handle the case is to remove the shoe, cleanse the hoof thoroughly with soap and hot water, pare away all soiled horn of the sole and rinse it off with a 1-500 solution of corrosive sublimate (bichlorid of mercury) or five per cent. solution of coal tar disinfectant, lysol or carbolic acid.

Then cut down upon the puncture with a sharp, sterilized hoof-knife, removing enough horn to expose the wound and allow blood, serum or pus to escape. When this has been done the wound should be well swabbed with the 1-500 solution of corrosive sublimate and at once covered with a mixture of one part of iodoform and seven parts of boric acid, fresh absorbent cotton and a clean bandage, to be covered in turn with a square of clean gunny sacking, held in place by a strap around the pastern.

If there is objection to the strong odor of the iodoform mixture, substitute one part each of "aristol" and subnitrate of bismuth and six parts of boric acid as a dry dressing powder. Renew the dressing daily. Often the treatment will lead to a speedy and perfect recovery. If a fungus-like growth comes down through the wound in the sole, add an equal part of powdered alum to the dressing powder, and cover the dressing with a wad of oakum to cause pressure.

If joint oil (synovia) flows like liquid vaseline from the wound the synovial bursa has been opened by the nail. Such a serious case should have the immediate attention of a skilled veterinarian.—Farm and Fireside.

The Cost of Strikes

The latest available statistics show that during the past 12 years there were 1,319 labor strikes in Canada, involving 319,230 men. Nine million working days were thus lost at a cost to the country of $18,000,000 figured at an average wage of $2 per day.

White Pearl Divers

The statement of Captain Talboys, a pearler, of Broome, Western Australia, that the experiment of working luggers with white divers had been a failure, and that the majority of the divers brought out from England were either dead or paralysed, has been contradicted flatly by divers. With the exception of two, all were, they said, very much alive, and were at present at work in different parts of the State.

Please Read Carefully and Note!

THAT Oil authorities are agreed the Alberta Oil Field is of an anticlinal formation. It has been fairly accurately ascer-tained in what general direction these anticlines run. Geologist B. W. Dunn chose wisely in the selection of the now famous Monarch well. WINDSOR OILFIELDS, LIMITED, has holdings located close to the Monarch.

THAT Cunningham Craig, one of the world's most eminent geologists, selected the site of the Mowbray-Berkeley well. Stock in that company is not offered at any price. We possess acreage adjoining the Mowbray-Berkeley (Section 12, Township 23, Range 5, West of 5th). If a strike is made at the Mowbray-Berkeley what will shares in our company be worth?

TWO PESTS OF CATTLE

How to Prevent and Control Lice and Ringworm

These two pests of housed cattle trouble most in dark, damp, dirty, badly ventilated stables. Remedial measures fail if only the animals are treated. So long as calves and adult cattle remain on pasture they are not bothered with vermin or skin disease; but when they go into winter quarters the trouble starts. The reason is that eggs ("nits") of lice remain in the stable from season to season, while the vegetable parasite of ringworm lives on damp walls, partitions, fences and other woodwork as well as on the skin of animals. Both pests, therefore, are acquired in the stable. If animals are to be made comfortable by keeping them free of lice and ringworm the stable should be specially prepared for their reception. Each animal should be allowed four square feet of window-glass and five hundred to eight hundred cubic feet of air-space in the stable.

Good ventilation, too, is absolutely necessary, and by preference should be of the King system. In this method of ventilation the fresh air enters at the ceiling, drives the hot air downward upon the backs of the cattle and is sucked out through wall vents near the ground-level and connecting with pipes discharging through a high chimney in the roof. The cleansing process consists in removing all loose trash, litter and soiled feed, scrubbing walls, mangers, partitions, floors and ceiling with a 1-50 solution of coal-tar disinfectant or crude carbolic acid or solution of four ounces of formaldehyde or sulphate of copper to a gallon of water. Fresh-made lime-wash is then applied with a spraying pump, which forces the wash into every crack, cranny and crevice. An addition of one pound of chloride of lime to three gallons of lime-wash makes it more effective.

To rid animals of lice a 1-100 solution of coal-tar dip may be rubbed on and brushed in when the weather is not too cold, or an even more effective solution may be made by steeping four ounces of stavesacre seeds in a gallon of boiling water and using when cold. Frequent applications are necessary, as new broods of lice hatch out from "nits." In cold weather dust the infested part of the skin freely with flowers of sulphur, or Persian or pyrethrum insect-powder. Mercurial ointment (blue ointment) is effective when applied to the poll of the head and along the backbone; but treated animals must be separated to prevent licking of the ointment, which is poisonous. Ringworm is indicated by bare, white, scaly, crusty spots upon the face, around the eyes and on the neck or other parts of young cattle. Treat by scraping and scrubbing each spot clean, and then rubbing in iodine ointment every other day until well. "Barn itch," or ringworm, may also affect adult cattle, causing itching, scaly spots on the body and especially about the tail-head. Treat by scrubbing clean and wetting with a solution of two pounds of sulphate of copper to a gallon of water applied hot.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

BUTTERMILK CHEESE

Dairy By-product Utilized at Agricultural College

In the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Miss Bella Millar, in charge of the Home Dairy Work, made some experiments in the utilization of dairy by-products. Cheese was made from skim milk and buttermilk. The making of cheese from skim milk is comparatively simple, but the buttermilk requires a little more of a process, which is described as follows:

Heat the buttermilk to 90 degrees F., as rapidly as possible, stirring enough to ensure even heating. Leave it undisturbed for an hour.

Heat to 128 degrees rapidly, and with just enough stirring to ensure even heating. Cover it to retain the heat, and leave undisturbed for about an hour.

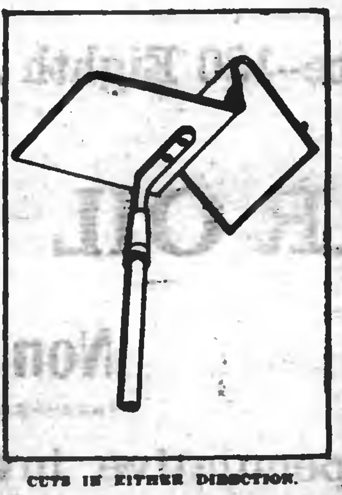
Without further stirring drain the curd by hanging it up in a cheesecloth bag, or by placing a piece of cheesecloth over a rack or strainer. As the portions of the curd next the cloth will drain more quickly, lift the cloth and allow the curd to roll over, thus ensuring more even and more rapid drainage.

As soon as the curd is properly drained it is salted and packed. The amount of salt to use will depend on the consumer. 1 ounce of salt to 5 pounds of cheese is recommended, but many prefer 1 ounce of salt to 3 pounds of cheese.

LAWN EDGER

Effective Tool for Trimming Turf Along Paths, etc.

To give a lawn that neatly kept appearance that is admirable, the edges of the turf along walks and flower beds must be trimmed cleanly. For this purpose a new edging tool has been patented. On the end of a long handle is a single sheet of metal with a straight, flat section, adapted to lie on top of the grass, and a V-shaped cutting section bent down from it, with sharp edges on both ends. By pressing this tool along the edge of the turf the overhanging grass is trimmed neatly and a smooth little trench is cut between the grass and the edge of the walk, or whatever the border is. This is a great improvement over the usual straggly borders that mar the appearance of otherwise attractive suburban places.



CUTS IN EITHER DIRECTION.

MISSED COBALT'S RICHES

Old French Voyageurs Knew of One Mine 150 Years Ago

That the old French voyageurs and missionaries knew of the existence of at least one mine old maps show beyond disputation. If they had extended their researches for minerals beyond the waterways and had happened upon the silver mines at Cobalt what a difference it would have made to the probable destiny of the Dominion?

The discovery of Cobalt a century and a half ago was quite within the realms of possibility, says The Cobalt Nugget. There was an old Indian trail within a few feet of Long, now Cobalt Lake, and where the Indian was wont to go, there too, the French voyageur could and did follow him. There would have been no difficulty in mining the ore. It was right on the surface and could easily have been mined and taken down in boats to Quebec. Then would the world have been astounded with the glamor of a silver Eldorado in the heart of Canada. The French King would have taken more pains to conserve the country which his predecessor had valued as so many arpents of snow and the destiny of the Dominion might have fallen along quite other lines.

Problems of the Large Employer

In the small factory, frequently managed by a resident owner, the continuance of a system of direct contact between employer and worker has generally operated to maintain and perpetuate harmonious relations. The problem before the large corporation-owned plant is to provide that ready touch which, by emphasizing the essential community of interests, establishes a sense of unity and fellowship. It can be done only by making this oneness of aim and interest a reality, and not merely the occasion for pleasant speech-making. It cannot be done by reducing wages; it may be done by dividing profits. Success depends principally on an unfailing insight into the needs and problems of the body of employes, and that insight can only be obtained by sharing the problems of management with the men. The degree to which employers are prepared to go in this direction is a direct measure of their earnestness in desiring the removal of the prevailing mood of discontent. —Engineering Magazine.

TIPS TO HOG RAISERS

The more pigs a sow has, the more feed she needs.

The older pigs grow, the more food it will take to make a pound of gain.

Young sows that do well with their first litters may be considered good breeding sows.

The health, thrift and growth of swine are best and most economically secured in a clover field.

With pigs as with all other young stock, sweet food is preferable to that which is fermented or soured.

Hogs may be fed out in winter to a good advantage if there is warm and dry shelter kept perfectly clean.

Usually pigs from large litters are more thrifty than those from small litters and are better feeders.

A good thing about the hog is that he may be able to utilize much of the wastes of the farm and orchard.

The easier feed is digested the greater the gain made from it. The more hogs can be made to eat in a certain time the more profit.

The hog is raised only for its meat and this being the case, the object is best subserved by turning into meat as soon as possible.

A good snout and a long back make a good hog combination. Then feed for growth and not for fat until it is time to fatten.

It is less expensive and more satisfactory in every way to keep the boar in a good thrifty condition rather than stuff him to get him fat.

The fattening hogs should have warm shelter and protection from storms, as it will require more grain to finish them off. Besides, they will not grow so rapidly.

There is one particular virtue about pigs which makes them emphatically the stock for the poor man to grow, and that is the very quick returns which they afford by the rapidity with which they increase and come to maturity.

SPLENDID SPORT IN FLYING BOATS

All the Thrills of the Automobile, Aeroplane and the Motorboat But Not Nearly So Much Danger

Year by year, almost day by day, flying is becoming to be regarded more as a sport than what was once called "the art." Although flying is yet in its infancy, it is not too much to predict that the flying machine will become a strong competitor of the automobile and likewise, if not more so, the flying boat, to any other kind of small pleasure craft. The landings from the aeroplane have not always been successful, but to alight with a flying boat after a flight is as easy as to guide a motor car to a standstill.

In the first recorded race of these craft, held on Long Island, the sight of three machines jockeying for position was inspiring, while the close finish of the return trip from the outer buoy would stir the blood of any sportsman.

Water flying is safe mainly because there is always a good place to alight. It is not necessary to guide the machine along a narrow course for alighting or to pick one's ground in landing. The surface is smooth and level, and one may land in any direction with safety. Winds over the water are invariably much steadier than over land, and if, through carelessness or inexperience, the operator does make a bad landing, or plunges the boat at too steep an angle into the water, or strikes a wing too hard, the accident cannot be grave. The machine is not seriously damaged and the operator is none the worse, except for his "ducking."

The first development in water flying, the hydro-aeroplane, has these advantages, but the later flying boat with its large surplus of buoyancy has all the advantages of a motor boat and a flying machine combined. It is as seaworthy as any motor boat of its size, and flies as well as any aeroplane of equal proportions.

Now that we have a safe system of flying, the development of aviation is sure and unlimited. For racing nothing can compare with the flying boat. There is the same chance to struggle for position as in yacht racing, and every opportunity for the airman to exhibit his skill in rounding the buoys and making his starts and landings. No prettier or more impressive sight can be seen than a fleet of flying boats rising from the water at the start of a race, or coming down the course "neck and neck" at the finish.

On the water, the flying boat is handled like an ordinary motor boat, although the controls resemble those of an automobile. The rudder is operated by a steering wheel, which also operates the device for elevating.

TAX ON RACING BETS

German Government Proposes to Legalize Making of Books

The "bookmaker question" is one which has long agitated German sporting circles. For the last thirty years bookmaking, according to the strict letter of the law, has been "verboten," like so many things in the Fatherland. Yet the profession has contrived to run its business and prosper to a fair extent.

Now the whole position is about to be changed. The Government has been considering the matter, and a bill has been drafted which will have the effect of giving State recognition to the bookmaker.

In Germany, as in France, the pari-mutuel system is in vogue, and the Government taxes all the transactions of that machine to the extent of 16 2-3 per cent., and realizes about $7,000,000 annually therefrom.

Now it is proposed to reduce that tax to 12 per cent. Of that the State takes one-half, the other 6 per cent. going to the various Rennvereine, or racing associations, for the purposes of horse-breeding. The Government hopes that it will lose no revenue by the decrease, as the bookmaker tax will preserve, and very possibly increase, the amount the State receives. As to the bookmaker, the bill provides for the recognition of a certain number in each large town, the figure to be fixed according to the population. He must pay a tax of 6 per cent. of his takings to the Government, and the Rennvereine will receive a small percentage of the winnings from the person betting. Small wins will be free from tax, which will afterwards rise as high as 10 per cent.

SUPERSTITIOUS CRICKETERS

Why cricketers should be superstitious is hard to say, but that the majority of them are very much so is a well known fact. Probably the most common belief in the cricketer's creed of superstition is that a bat which has made a good score can, if given a fair chance, repeat the performance. Hundreds of cricketers would give very large sums to possess themselves of a bat with which some famous batsman has knocked up a big score, and high prices have been offered for the bats of the leading county men by amateurs who believed in the superstition.

Very frequently a batsman who discovers that he is unable to score with his own bat will borrow one with which some other man has made a big score. Another popular belief is that if a batsman places his pads on before the preceding batsman is out the bowler will almost invariably bowl him before he [illegible] double [illegible], and he will often ignore his captain's orders to be ready in time by refusing to put on his pads before he sees the retiring batsman half on his way to the pavilion.

SLIDING TO FIRST QUITE LEGITIMATE

Big League Magnates Disagree With Ruling That Player Must Stay on His Feet

May a player slide into first base, instead of running past it? If he does, is he necessarily out? President Chivington, of the American Association says yes. He calls it an unwritten rule of baseball. The ruling by Chivington came as a result of an informal protest by Manager Friel, of St. Paul, against a ruling made by Umpire O'Brien, who called out Dixie Walker for sliding head first to the initial sack.

"There is no time gained by sliding, and in the case of first base, where the base-runner does not have to dodge a touch, the only reason for the slide is to raise a dust that will hide the play from the umpire," said Mr. Chivington.

Herrmann Disagrees

Commenting on the ruling, the Louisville Courier-Journal said:

"The statement given out by August Herrmann upholds the declaration made by this paper that a man who slides into first and beats the ball is no more out than the man who hits the ball to the fence. It is merely an unjust assumption of power by the official. President Chivington's contention that the umpires are right in calling out the player who slides into first base is ridiculous. Anybody who has run or played baseball knows that a leap when going at full speed will save time, and that the player who slides has a better chance to beat the ball. If Mr. Chivington is consistent, why not call the player out when the first baseman slides into the bag in order to make a play? The baseman undoubtedly raises as much dust. Laying aside the question of whether the slide is advantageous, the rules are clear upon the point. Herrmann states the case plainly: 'A player is allowed to reach any base by running, walking, jumping or in any other manner as long as he remains within the lines prescribed.' This is laid down in the rules of the game, and no umpire, president of a league or anyone else has any right to change this rule.'"

Mack Upholds Slide

Connie Mack, of the Athletics, also had something to say about the ruling.

"There is a lot to be said on both sides of the slide-to-first proposition," Mack declared. "The biggest thing in its favor is the fact that it undoubtedly prevents many collisions between the first baseman and the runner. A baseman may be drawn back upon the bag by a high throw or a bounce, and unless the runner, coming full speed down the path, slides into the bag, a headon collision is inevitable. I have seen a slide prevent smashes that might have had serious results innumerable times."

Asked whether or not he thought the slide to first saved time, Mack said he thought it did, possibly a fraction of a second, which in so many cases decided the result of a game. "As to the danger of spiking," he continued, "some players try to spike the baseman every time they slide into a bag, but clean players won't spike a man jumping into first base often enough to warrant a change in the rules. The danger of colliding with both players on their feet is the great one, it seems to me," said he, and he ought to know.

ETON "ALPINE" FEAT

Boy Fixes Hat on Lightning Conductor Above Buildings

High above the street, pierced by the lightning conductor on top of the Eton memorial buildings, Windsor, England, was visible a soft grey hat, a challenge and a defiance to the powers that be.

It was placed there by a boy who had first to attack the top of the massive dome, then to surmount a number of pillars and ornamental work, and finally at a dizzy height above the street to "shin up" the lightning conductor.

How the climb—which to the ordinary man looks an utterly impossible one—was accomplished remains a mystery.

A local builder was called in to remove the hat. He engaged the services of an expert climber, who with the aid of ladders and other appliances succeeded in getting it down amid the cheers of the boys—but the dare-devil boy who fixed it had no ladder for his 100 foot climb.

THE MODERN WONDER

It is surprising what a single cent's worth of electricity will do. Taking 10 cents a kilowatt hour as a basis, it will do any one of the following things:

Bring two quarts of water to a boil.

Run an electric broiler for six minutes.

Operate a twelve-inch electric fan for eight minutes.

Heat a luminous radiator eight minutes.

Make a Welsh rabbit in an electric chafing dish.

Operate a sewing machine motor for three hours.

Keep a four-inch disk stove hot for fifteen minutes.

Operate a seven-inch frying pan for twelve minutes.

Make four cups of coffee in an electric percolator.

Keep a foot warmer hot for a quarter of an hour.

VALUE OF NEW CANADIANS

What Immigration Gives Us Besides New Citizens

Occasionally we in Canada groan over foreign immigration and the heavy task we have assumed in trying to assimilate the newcomers and make them good citizens. We give an imitation of the weary Titan. But after all, is not all this change of population good for us asks the Toronto world.

In an old town, where the same families have lived for many years and where everybody knows everybody else, there is danger of narrowness. People are apt to discuss each other's affairs instead of public affairs. On the other hand, in a new growing town there is an exhilaration not only in the rapid progress, but in the contact of new personalities, the hurling of mind against mind and character against character.

Then there is a good deal to be learned from foreigners. What is the use of foreign travel except to meet new people, observe new customs, and acquire new points of view? The inexperienced traveler is apt to go along certain beaten paths and see the things that his predecessors have seen. He does not see the people in their homes; and especially he does not see the poor. He sees the evidences of European culture and power; but he does not see the results of European neglect and oppression. A careful and sympathetic study of the foreign immigrant is as stimulating and instructive as a trip to Europe.

What Australian Province is Doing Towards Reforestation

According to a report of the Forestry Department of New South Wales, good conduct convicts at the state prison, instead of breaking stone, are engaged in the more useful and healthful work of replanting with trees the waste lands of the state. At one prison alone 25,000 trees, mostly American ash and pines were planted in one year.

Perhaps the only city forest in Canada is that at Guelph, Ont., where a small area has been planted surrounding the springs which furnish the city's water supply. In many of the counties of eastern Canada, however, are large areas of waste land, originally forested, and capable only of producing forests. Ontario has a Counties reforestation Act making possible the acquisition of such waste land for reforestation purposes by municipal councils, but up to the present time only one county has availed itself of this opportunity. Quebec and the Dominion government have also passed legislation to encourage tree planting, and the Dominion Forestry Branch in the last fiscal year distributed nearly 4,000,000 trees from the nurseries at Indian Head for woodlot planting in western Canada.

The growing of forest trees on waste land can in most cases be made a profitable undertaking, besides providing labor to a considerable number of men, yet no extensive reforestation has as yet been done in eastern Canada.

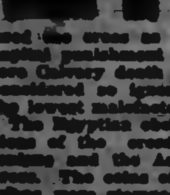
BIG PACIFIC DRY DOCK

Biggest Vessels to be Handled at Prince Rupert When Work Done

Good progress is being made with the construction of the big Grand Trunk Pacific Dry Dock at Prince Rupert. This dock, costing $3,000,000, will have an important national value, as it will be able to handle the largest vessels, either naval or mercantile, afloat on the Pacific Ocean.

The dock will have in all twelve pontoons and the first of these to be put in position is 130 feet long and exclusive of other fittings has 200,000 feet of timber in its construction. The capacity displacement of the series of pontoons will be 2,000,000 tons and each pontoon will have two powerful centrifugal pumps, so that, when the ship is in place, the water can be rapidly pumped out and repair work begun. The dock is to be arranged that it can be used in three separate units or in any combination that is desired.

About the Cross



Although the cross is the symbol of Christianity, and it was used as a religious emblem long before the Christian era, it was not always an object of veneration, nor the insignia of religion. The ancients used the cross as an instrument of capital punishment and centuries before Calvary death on the cross was considered so ignominious that only the lowest malefactors were crucified. The Egyptian obelisks bear impressions of the cross, and the Babylonians and the Assyrians used the cross. The coins of the early Phoenicians were stamped with the cross.

IF CATARRH KEEPS YOU HAWKING USE "CATARRHOZONE"—THE QUICKEST CURE

To Stop a Cold Quickly And Prevent Catarrh, Use "Catarrhozone."

Nothing more serious than the common cold.

If it gains headway you can't stop it from running into Catarrh, deafness, or serious throat trouble.

Catarrh spreads very fast.

From nose to throat it goes in a day. Soon the Bronchial tubes are affected—and before you know it, unless very healthy the lungs are hit, and it's too late.

While you have the chance, drive colds and Catarrh right out of the system.

You can quickly do so by inhaling the rich pine vapor of Catarrhozone.

Right to where the living germ of Catarrh is working will the healing fumes of Catarrhozone go in ten seconds.

No liquid medicine can penetrate to the deep recesses that Catarrhozone bathes with its soothing vapor—that's just why it proves so wonderfully effective.

The health-laden vapor of Catarrhozone cures the worst of coughs and hoarseness. The uttermost parts of the bronchial tubes are reached. Bronchitis is cured—every cell in the head, throat and nose is treated by Catarrhozone's wonderful fumes.

You can't beat Catarrhozone for huskiness, weak throat, sore nostrils, catarrhal and bronchial trouble of any kind. Get the complete $1.00 outfit. Smaller size 50c. Trial size 25c., at dealers everywhere.

ENGLAND IS READY TO TAKE THE RISK

Manchester, Eng., Nov. 19.—Speculating on the possibility of a Zeppelin raid on London, the Manchester Guardian says there is a noticeable feeling of "disappointment" in England over the non-appearance of these airships. While the Zeppelin would not be really welcome, there were those at home so hungering for excitement that as a whole England seemed ready to take the risk.

It was coldly calculated that even if fifty Zepplins were sent over, their concentrated devastation could not cover more than six acres—or if they dropped all their bombs on the 'square mile" that makes up the city of London proper "they could kill something under one in a hundred of the people who happened to be there.

"Over the whole of London, taking the Metropolitan Police area, the chances of escaping would be about 70,000 to one. Over what may be described as the central area of London, within which a Zeppelin might be expected to operate, the chances of escape would be about 15.000 to one."

"Personally. I think it would be a good job if the Zeppelins did come. Even if they did drop a few bombs, the stimulus to recruiting would be worth what little damage was done" says Frank Hedges Butler, who is founder of the Royal Aero Club.

UNITED STATES BORDER IS WATCHED

Ottawa. Nov. 19.—General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, issued instructions today to all officers commanding districts that no further mobilizations of troops are to be ordered without full notice being given to the general public. General Hughes states that it was understood that this was to have been done in Toronto, but that it must have been overlooked. The Minister takes the ground that the calling out of the troops without notice to the public causes unnecessary war scares, injurious to recruiting and has a demoralizing effect on the health and the nerves of the people. Something, he said, must be done to stop the unadvanced excitement.

"The people may rest assured," said General Hughes, "that the most careful watch is being kept on every part of the United States border as well as in Canadian centres for any threatening marauding raids, but the Militia Department will not lend itself to intensify any feeling of panic. If mobilization is to be practiced it can be done just as well by having ample notice given to the public that it is only a practice, otherwise it will be the old cry of 'wolf, wolf.'

"No call for mobilization should ever be given unless in case of real emergency and all practices should be so notified to the public."

Respecting Those Winchesters.

In regard to the purchase of rifles by the City of Toronto, General Hughes explained today that he was asked by the Board of Control to give an opinion on the purchase of several thousand Winchester 30-30 rifles. He declined to offer any service, but warned them that the Winchester 30-30 was not a military rifle. He further suggested that before investing the money of the city they should consult an expert purchaser and recommend the firm of Rice Lewis and Company, of Toronto, to be consulted.

AN EASY WAY TO STOP HEAD NOISES

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by peculiar rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distracting and nerve racking, with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times a day until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

IMPORTANT.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine st., Montreal, P. Q. who make a specialty of it.

MAN Of [illegible]

Pioneer of Advertising, Mr. S. H. Benson, a Victim of 'Bus Accident

Illness due to complications following on a street accident carried off Mr. S. H. Benson, governing director of the famous advertising contractors of Kingsway Hall, London. Mr. Benson was run over by a motor-bus in Fleet street eight months ago. His arm was broken and he suffered internal injuries, and at the age of fifty he failed to get over the shock.

Before beginning the career which created the business of Messrs. S. H. Benson, Ltd., Mr. Benson was for some years in the Royal Navy, and served during the Ashanti war, and the blockade of the coast of Dahomey, being eventually invalided from the Navy. He started the Express Courier Corps, the first boy messenger corps organized in London. The Post Office took exception at that time to any such scheme, and the venture had to be terminated. He started in the advertising business in 1893. Up till that time the main duty of an advertising agent had been the buying and selling of space, but Mr. Benson realized there was room for development, and he offered the advertiser serious service and advice in the conduct of his campaign.

Soon he became entrusted with the advertising of some of the largest houses in England, and from that day the business steadily increased, following closely the lines on which it was founded. An interesting scheme of his was the cocoa 'bus scheme. All the London 'buses were decorated with cocoa pods, and every lady passenger presented with a sample of cocoa. The police threatened to stop the scheme, and summoned several drivers, but gave in on the condition that the scheme should not be repeated.

Although most of the cities in Japan have good sidewalks, modern street paving is practically unknown in the empire.

Russians and Germans in Huge Battle Along Whole Front Between the Vistula and Warthe

German Troops Moving From West to the East

GERMANS, IN DESPERATION, WILL NOW USE BURNING OIL IN FLANDERS

This is Their Latest Scheme for Cleaning the Allies' Trenches--Battles in the Air. British Aviators Lured Into a Trap Force of Germans Who Were Destroyed, Fighting in the North Still Confined to Artillery

French forces have captured the heights of Ornes, near Verdun, and silenced two German batteries according to official despatches today.

Paris, Nov. 21—Reports today indicate that the Germans are about to try a new plan of driving the allies from their trenches in Flanders by sending down the Yser Canal and over the inundated areas, huge steel barges of burning oil. According to report, a large number of these barges have been constructed and a great supply of crude oil has been brought up. The intention of the Germans is probably to send these over the flooded district between Dixmude and the coast.

Fighting along the northern front was still confined to artillery fire today. There were signs of new activity on the part of the British troops from Amns, however, in the movement which has for its objective the piercing of the German line of communication.

The Germans are making a new effort over toward the east of the line to extend the wedge they have driven between Verdun and Toul at St. Mihiel on the River Meuse. At the same time the French who have never ceased their efforts to envelop the Germans holding St. Mihiel, seem to have anticipated the plan and to have advanced a little from the north and south of their line.

Lively Air Fighting.

Vivid descriptions of the liveliest air fighting since the war began have reached here in chronicles of events in northern France. On the evening of November 18 four German Taubes at a great height soared toward the allies' lines. Two French and two British machines accepted the challenge and in diminutive speedy machines rose to the attack.

The eight pilots approached, launching their machines in air, then flew apart, sweeping round in circles, rising and descending in an effort to gain the advantage. With these evolutions, lasting ten minutes, the eyes of the fighting men below centred on the spirited encounter while the mitrailleuses cracked from all directions without success.

Suddenly the allied aeroplanes fled, while the Germans pursued at tremendous speed, stopping too late as they realized their danger, when a shower of shells from hidden French batteries exploded around them. They were in the trap and in another five minutes their four shattered machines fell to the ground in front of the English lines, the eight fighting men they carried being instantly killed. The allied machines then volplaned to the ground and the air fighters were generously lauded with credit for skill and pluck.

ALLEGED GRAFT CHARGES ON THE TRENT CANAL INVESTIGATION

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., with his proverbial regard for the good name of the Dominion Government he so ably represents, has caused an enquiry into alleged charges made by Superintendent of the Children's Shelter, Mr. Henry, as to graft being as bad, if not worse than before, on the Trent Canal.

The following letters speak for themselves:

Office of the Minister of Railways and Canals,
Ottawa, 20th November, 1914.

Dear Mr. Burnham:

I have yours of November 18th enclosing letter from Judge Doherty and note what you say concerning this man Henry, who is charging that there is graft on the Trent Canal as bad as it was or worse. For your information I beg to enclose copy of a letter I personally wrote Henry on June 20th last. He had an opportunity at that time, as you will see, to make his charges and was assured that they would be investigated. Possibly if this were published he would either put up or shut up.

Yours very truly,
F. COCHRANE.

The following letter was sent to Mr. Henry by the Minister of Railways and Canals:—

June 20, 1914.

Dear Sir,—

A statement has been made to me that you claim to be able to put your hands on the existence of graft at the present time in connection with the Trent Canal. If you know of any graft and care to give me the particulars of it so that an investigation may be held, I shall be very glad to investigate the matter thoroughly.

Yours very truly,

German Cavalry Wiped Out By Mines Planted By the Russians

Petrograd, Nov. 21.—The meagre news received from Russian Poland given out in official circles to-day indicates that the Germans and the Russians have joined in battle along the whole front between the Warthe and the Vistula Rivers, while the Russians to the north of the Vistula are reported to be falling back.

Of the three battle areas in the eastern war theatre, that in Poland, between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers, is now being drenched with blood in the most desperate fighting of the Russo-German conflict.

The Russian war office claims that the German offensive in this section has been partially checked. Losses on both sides have been exceedingly heavy and details received here of the fighting along the banks of the River Bzura, upon which the Russians retired, bring frightful stories of a trap into which the German cavalry rode. The Russians withdrawing along the Bzura mined [illegible] forward in hot pursuit, seeking a [illegible] the banks. The Germans pressed crossing. When a heavy detachment had reached the river, the mines were exploded.

The destruction was terrible. Men and horses were blown to atoms. The horses of the survivors bolted and leaped into the river, the bed of which had been filled with barbed wire. Men and mounts became entangled in a hopeless struggling mass of flesh. The survivors along the bank were kicked, or crushed to death by the writhing horses. The Russians opened a murderous fire on the tangle of men and beasts and but few escaped, these being all made prisoners.

Only in the Armenian village have any supplies been found.

In Galicia the Russians are surrounding Cracow along a circular front, about 25 miles from the town. Heavy fighting is reported to the north of the city. The left wing of the Russian forces is moving through the foothills to the southeast, following the line of the railroad, from Przemysl to Cracow.

GERMANS PREPARED FOR DEFENCE AGAINST RUSSIANS ON BIG SCALE

Petrograd, Nov. 22.—Via London.—The advance of the Russians into the Masurian region of Eastern Prussia, near Johannisburg and Arys, has revealed the extent of the preparations made by the Germans to resist invasion. The whole region is a gigantic fortress facing to east and to south in the form of a huge semi-circle, 90 miles in extent.

The space between the lakes which range from marshy ponds by the hundred to bodies of water ten miles long, are entrenched with wire fences. At intervals there are earth redoubts which are reinforced with stone work and protected by mine fields. Wherever it is practicable canals have been dug. Behind these canals lie German trenches.

At Arys, where the Russians are reported to have made a considerable advance in the last few days, they have been compelled to storm concrete blockhouses, resulting in some instances in heavy losses of life. Improved conditions in Galicia are indicated by the fact that communication by rail between Kiev and Lemberg was re-established yesterday.

Reports from Caucasia state that the Russian advance into Turkey is proceeding without serious resistance, although the invading forces are under fire from Turkish light artillery, located on the hilltops practically all the time.

ALLIED FLEETS DO GOOD WORK OFF BELGIUM

Paris, Nov. 20.—All the reports indicate that the Germans have found Dixmude, which they again hold, one of the hottest spots along the entire battle line. The town has been knocked to pieces. Warships off the coast are declared to be dropping their shells into the German positions there and turning of the allies from this point has been of little advantage.

New guns were brought up by the Germans last night but so far have been kept to the rear; the enemy evidently does not intend to run the risk of having these guns mired. As long as those now in position are able to hold the present line.

Paris, Nov. 20.—The full text of the official communique is as follows:

"The day of November 19 was marked by the almost total absence of infantry attacks on the part of the enemy. At the same time, their artillery fire was much less violent than on the afternoon of November 18th.

"To the north the weather has been very bad, and snow has fallen.

"All the region of the Yser canal to the east of Dixmude is invaded by the waters.

"In front of Ramscapelle we have withdrawn from the water two 16.5 centimeter mortars, abandoned by the Germans. There has been a very intense artillery fire to the south of Ypres.

"On the centre there have been no important actions to report. In the Argonne three vigorous attacks on the part of the enemy's infantry have been repulsed. On our right wing the Germans have reoccupied the destroyed station of Chauvoncourt. Further to the east we have made some progress."

London, Nov. 20.—Basil Clark telegraphs to The Daily Mail from Dunkirk: "A week ago the Germans near the coast noticed that the English warships fire spared the houses on the sea front at Middlekerke. They accordingly took up quarters in these houses. Then their scheme became known to the British warships and the houses were suddenly bombarded fiercely by five vessels at once. The German casualties were enormous. A scouting officer estimated the number killed at 1,700. German aeroplanes today dropped two bombs over Cassel, killing a woman and child."

Y. M. C. A'S GOOD WORK

A pleasing feature of the charming reception given on Friday night by the Y. M. C. A., in their commodious quarters, to the ladies of the Y. W. C. A., was a most commendable function. The reception first told of in Saturday's Times, was really a return of compliment for a similar reception given by the ladies to members of the Y.M. C.A.

Now that the British Empire is fighting (and will eventually win) for her very existence as a Nation, the harmony thus demonstrated by two leading bodies of the Christian religion, cannot but have a marked effect on the morals of the community. We Canadians, after paraphrasing the saying of a celebrated general who remarked: "Put your trust in God but keep your powder dry" believe that our prayers to the Prince of Peace, whom Kaiser William regards as the God of War, will result in ultimate victory. It is such bodies as the Y.M.C.A. and the Y.W.C.A. who foster and promulgate the doctrine of appealing for help from a higher power than even dry powder.

BELLIGRENTS QUIET ON YSER RIVER GERMANS MOVING TO EASTERN ARENA

Russian Warships Bombard Turkish Port of Khopa, in the Turkish Armenia--Destroyed Barracks and Ammunition Depot, and Set Town on Fire--Attempt on the Life of Turkish Sultan--Many Arrests

London, Nov. 22.—Fighting on the Yser front has stopped. Bruges reports that 50 empty trains of forty cars each are moving through northern Belgium in the direction of West Flanders. It is assumed these trains will be used to transport German troops to the Russian front. Bucharest hears of many arrests in Constantinople as a result of an attempt on the life of the sultan. [illegible] Yussuf of Izzedin, eldest son of Abdul Hamid, and heir presumptive to the Turkish throne, is suspected of being implicated. The Khedive of Egypt has definitely thrown in his lot with Turkey. He is now in Palestine with the Turkish forces there.

Turkish Port Bombarded

Little news regarding the fighting in Transcaucasia has reached the outside world. The Turkish war office announces that the fighting is progressing favorably. Russian warships on Nov. 19 bombarded the port of Khopa, in Turkish Armenia, on the Black Sea., destroying the port barracks and the ammunition depot, and setting the town on fire. The Turks were preparing for an offensive movement from Khopa.

IT IS EXPECTED THAT CONSERVATIVE WILL BE RETURNED IN DUNDAS

Toronto, Nov. 22.—There is likely to be a keen electoral contest in the Dundas by-election, according to those in close touch with political affairs in that provincial riding. It is expected that the Conservative candidate will be returned in the end, but that the majority which Sir James Whitney captured and retained will be cut down to a very small figure. The inevitable reaction to the old party standing of years ago is looked to follow the passing of the premier in his old riding.

It is understood that when the seat first became vacant many of the Liberal supporters in Dundas were adverse to having a contest in the riding. It is stated by some, however, that word came from provincial headquarters at Toronto that it was necessary and the conventions followed. Now an aggressive campaign is being planned.

Dundas County has always been regarded as one having the cleanest campaigns in Ontario, and little bitterness is looked for in the coming election on Dec. 7. The opposing candidates, Hilliard (Con.) and Campbell (Lib.) are well-known throughout the riding and the fight is likely to resolve into one between their popularity.

Mr. Campbell at one time ran against Andrew Broder, M.P., but was defeated by a large majority.

MORE MEN FOR DOMINION ARMY ANOTHER SEVENTEEN THOUSAND

Ottawa, Nov. 21.—An official statement from the government this afternoon says that instructions will be given immediately to raise the number of men under military training in Canada to 50,000, besides the 8,000 in garrison and outpost duty. The forces then organized for active service will be as follows: Forces already despatched, including regiment in Bermuda, 33,000; forces on garrison duty, etc., in Canada about 8000; forces under training in Canada, 50,000; total, 91,000.

As soon as the second contingent goes forward a further enlistment of 17,000 men to take its place will be made bringing the total to 100,000. There after the forwarding of further expeditionary forces will be followed by the enlistment of men to take their place. Recent cable communications from the British Government lead to the hope that there may be early opportunity for the service of more mounted men from Western Canada.

THE POULTRY HOUSE

Some Pointers Gathered From a Government Publication

Select a location that has natural drainage away from the building.

A dry, porous soil, such as sand or gravelly loam, is preferable to a clay soil.

In most localities the building should face the south, as this insures the greatest amount of sunlight during the winter.

Allow at least two square feet of floor space per bird.

Proper ventilation and sunlight mean a dry house and healthy birds.

The partial open-front house is conceded to be the best type for most sections.

The colony plan of housing poultry may be adopted to good advantage on many farms. This system does away with the danger of tainted soil.

The roosts should be built on the same level, two feet six inches from the floor, with a dropping board about eight inches below them.

Good roosts may be made of 2 by 3-inch material with upper edges rounded.

The nests may be placed on the side walls or under the dropping boards. It is best to have them darkened, as the hens prefer a secluded place in which to lay.

CASGRAIN FAMILY HAS FINE RECORD

Has Contributed Many Sons to Public Life of Canada—Old Settlers in Quebec

Few families in Canada enjoy a record of public service superior to that of the distinguished French-Canadian family to which Canada's Postmaster-General, the Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., belongs.

Mr. Casgrain's father, the late Dr. C. E. Casgrain, of Windsor, Ontario, was the first French-Canadian to be elevated to the Senate. He was a medical man of considerable distinction, who occupied a prominent place among his compatriots in the western counties of Ontario. His father in turn was the Hon. C. E. Casgrain, of Riviere-Ouelle, Quebec, who at the time of his death was one of the two Commissioners of Public Works of the Province of Canada. Earlier in life he had been a member of Parliament for Lower Canada.

The Postmaster-General's great-grandfather, Pierre Casgrain, was in early life a coureur de bois, who eventually settled at Riviere-Ouelle, where he purchased a seigniory and became a seigneur and a man of great influence in his part of the country. His father before him, Jean Casgrain, was the founder of the family, who settled in Quebec before the conquest, and did his best to defend the ancient capital against the English in 1759. He had been in his early days a soldier in Europe.

HON. T. CHASE CASGRAIN

Collateral branches of the family have also contributed notable names to Canadian history. Mr. Casgrain's uncle, P. B. Casgrain, who is still living at an advanced age in Quebec City, was for twenty years M.P. for L'Islet. He is a Liberal, and his son, Hon. J. P. B. Casgrain, is a Liberal Senator. Another uncle was the famous Abbe Casgrain, the Canadian historian, whose books are well well known to students of history.

One of Mr. Casgrain's great aunts married Francois Letellier de St. Just, and was the mother of the Hon. Luc Letellier de St. Just, former Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and another became the wife of the Hon. Phillippe Panet and mother of the late Senator Panet, who was for many years Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence. A sister of his father was married to the late Sir C. A. P. Pelletier, another of the Lieutenant-Governors of Quebec, and her son is Colonel Oscar Pelletier, of the Canadian regular military forces.

The circumstance that the Postmaster-General was born in Detroit was probably due to the fact that his grandmother's family had been old residents of that city. His father, when he had completed his medical course at McGill University, settled in Detroit where he [illegible] for several years, marrying a Detroit girl, Miss Mary Chase, and building up a fair practice. Soon after his eldest son's birth, he returned to Canadian soil, living first in Sandwich and then in Windsor.

The future Postmaster-General was sent to Quebec for his education, and there at the Little Seminary and later at Laval University he distinguished himself for his intellectual ability. He first came into prominence as junior counsel for the Crown in the trial of Louis Riel at Regina in 1885, and later, as Attorney-General of the Province, strengthened his position in legal circles. He subsequently sat for two terms at Ottawa, but for ten years devoted himself to his practice in Montreal.—By W. A. Craik in The Toronto Star Weekly.

Canada's Land Resources

Canada has 1,401,300,000 acres of land in its nine provinces. 440,000,000 acres are cultivatable, but only 2½ per cent., or 36,000,000 acres, are actually under cultivation.

Canada grows the best wheat in the world; she has the cheapest electric and water powers; she has the milling capacity to grind most of her own wheat in her own mills, and to ship it to the world's markets with its identity preserved.

The Growth of Toronto

Toronto was founded as a French trading post in 1749, chosen as provincial capital in 1793; incorporated as a city in 1834 with a population of 9,254. Only ten cities in America have a larger population now—to-day over half-million.

HEROES OF SHAFT AT NIAGARA PLANT

Remarkable Feat of Four Men Who Stopped Flood in Tunnel

Three electrical workers went in a punt down through a raging torrent that choked a power company's tunnel along the mighty cliff that holds up the weight of Niagara Falls. Three men with three boxes of dynamite groped their way in pitch blackness through a circular chamber swirling with water in order to blast out ten tons of rock lodged unexpectedly in the tunnel's "throat." They failed. And then what? A few days later they did what mortal men have done neither before nor since; they climbed up the face of Niagara Falls from the outside, crawled under the curtain of water that leaps out from the giant cliffs and placed a charge of dynamite in the mouth of the tunnel. That time they were successful. The channel was cleared without the loss of a life. Here is the second trip as told by one of the men:

"Although we were dressed in oilskins, oil hats and rubber boots, we were quickly drenched to the bones by gusts of spray that tumbled on our heads and backs like pails of buckshot. So great became the force of these gusts that we could stand upright no longer and crawled from bowlder to bowlder on our hands and knees. All this time we were advancing literally under Niagara Falls, for the cataract was falling over and slightly beyond us, now and then giving us an extra heavy swish of water as the winds in the gorge blew direct against the face of the fall.

"We were walking about a hundred feet up from the pool, bracing ourselves against the pile of rocks. It was, at first, an almost impossible task to make steady progress. So we kept some distance apart for safety's sake in the event of one having a tumble, and by taking our medicine patiently at every downpour sent our way, we finally reached the ledge directly under the tunnel's mouth. It was a matter of a few minutes to place the dynamite and wires where they would hit the blockade to best advantage.

"We rested a few minutes and commenced the return journey. Bad as the approach had been, the going back was infinitely worse. The adverse winds had practically isolated us by walls of water and indeed at one time the prospect was good for a twenty-four-hour stay on the edge of an ugly cavern.

"During a lull we were enabled to make another start. Having to drag the pair of copper wires with us made the trip much more difficult, but we held on and gained foot after foot, sometimes slipping, often bringing blood, until the sight of the Cave of the Winds peeped through the abnormal mists. Exhaustion was slowing down our steps, and a fearful hunger increased the discomfort, for the adventure had taken the best part of a day. I remember some one throwing us a rope and we snatched at it with a sudden return of energy.

"Lifted safely into the cave, the superintendent touched the copper wires. A far-off roar, that sounded even above the boom of the falls—and we turned to face a messenger who had been waiting at the telephone for instant news of the water level in the tunnel. 'It is rapidly lowering,' said he, and all of us knew that the blockade had been broken by the blast."

WILLIAM SULZER

William Sulzer who was impeached from the Governorship of New York State was born to be a politician and a leader of men. He had an uphill fight all along the way, but by either genius or good luck never has been outlived. His father, Thos. Sulzer, was a politician before him, so much so that he suffered imprisonment for a cause he believed in. The elder Sulzer was a German patriot and a comrade of General Sigel and General Schurz. He was a strong advocate of constitutional liberty, and while a student at Heidelberg University joined the patriots in a revolution. He was captured and imprisoned, but through clever manoeuvring managed to escape to Switzerland. He came to this continent immediately and soon cast his lot with the Democratic forces. This was in 1851. The elder Sulzer married soon after he arrived here and settled in Elizabeth, N.J. His wife was from Dutch and Scotch-Irish stock. They lived in the New Jersey city for several years, and there William Sulzer was born. Soon afterward they removed to New York, and young Sulzer, who was exceedingly bright as a boy, was sent to the Public schools and was graduated, despite the fact that it cost many a hard effort and sacrifice on the part of his father and mother. Afterward he was sent to Columbia University, where he studied law. Both in the Public school and at college he was recognized as a forcible speaker. As early as 1884, when Mr. Sulzer was but twenty-one years old, he attracted attention as a masterly orator.

Market for Flax Fibre

As a considerable quantity of flax is harvested in Canada every year, the attention of firms interested may be drawn to the market in Leeds, England, for flax fibre. Spinners there have followed with close attention the development of the growth of the flax plant in Western Canada, and are desirous of receiving shipments of the fibre if it can be obtained on competitive terms with supplies from other sources. Some three years ago a few small trial shipments of unretted flax fibre were sent from Canada. Mr. J. M. Mussen, Canadian trade commissioner at Leeds says consumers express their readiness to give their consideration to offers that may be received at any time from Canadian firms interested in seeking export markets for this fibre.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER—THEN AND NOW * * * * By Michelson

Mother and Daughter Fifty Years Ago.

AWAY back in the last century Mother was an elderly person at forty, and being an elderly person she settled down into an elderly person's place and wore an elderly person's clothes. It was easy to know by her bonnet and gown that she was a settled person—just Mother. To Daughter was left the privileges and responsibilities of being fashionable and picturesque. There wasn't the slightest chance in the world that you wouldn't know which was which, even when you couldn't see their faces.

Mother and Daughter Today.

NOWADAYS it is quite different. There are no elderly feminine persons today—this side of seventy. The older Mother grows today, the greater the need for combatting facial signs of age by the aid of other outward signs. Mother takes a lot of trouble to keep her youthful figure, and feels discreet enough to take chances on sensational clothes that Daughter is far too young to risk. Probably it is Daughter who is demure. This is MOTHER'S century. And isn't she charming?

Dad's Great Gift.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

MARY was a sparkle of expectancy at our Christmas breakfast.

"Peter," she said, "I'm simply dying to know what you have for me."

All this pretty display of delightful ignorance in face of the fact that Mary had, at varying intervals, mentioned very carelessly the things she wanted. I may say right here they were, every one of them, things I couldn't afford.

"Well," I began, "it isn't a diamond la vallière, and it isn't a diamond ring. It's a sensible gift."

"Why be sensible on Christmas?" pouted Mary.

"Why, indeed?" I asked. "But I notice just the same that I usually get socks and slippers and ties, and exceedingly sensible things of that sort."

"Nobody knows what to give a man," said Mary petulantly, and she colored guiltily, I thought.

"If women would spend one-half the time thinking up some desirable gift for the men of the family that the men spend thinking up things for the women, the sock and tie sales would fall off considerably at Christmas."

"Hum!" said Mary, "that sounds very well, Peter, but men don't do their own Christmas thinking. They ask some woman to do it for them. And women can always think better for women."

I glanced over the array of mail at my plate. It was chiefly Christmas cards and Christmas greetings.

"I thoroughly approve of this card stunt," I said carelessly to my wife. "You can let your friends know that you think of them, and it's much better than—well—pin cushions, for instance."

"That," said Mary, "is just as you look at it."

Which was one of Mary's speeches that doesn't mean anything at all. She has a lot of them that fill in vacant conversational places and don't make anybody think.

I picked up a letter addressed to me in Dad's handwriting. Opening it—I found that it contained a letter written by mother and signed by mother and dad.

"Son, dear," began mother's letter. And somehow that way of beginning always rings so true that I get a choke in my throat and a warm feeling around my heart.

"Dad and I want to give you for Christmas what you need most, and so, after a great deal of talking here nights by the fire—(and, son, dear, we do miss you still when the log glows, and Dad's drowsing and chatting alternately in his easy chair)—we want you to accept the [illegible] that Dad lent you as a Christmas gift with the love of both of us. Dad says you'd get it some day—that little we have—and, therefore, we'd like to see you have some of it now while you really need it. Drop in some time through the day and wish us Merry Christmas."

And, as I read, I sat quite still, choking back a flood of feeling. Mary seemed very far away from me. I couldn't tell her. I didn't want to tell her. She seemed apart from the sacredness of the moment. There is only one big love in the world that counts, and that is the mother's love for her child. Every other love is sickly and puerile beside it.

The Short Cut to Beauty By the Perspiration Route

By LUCREZIA BORI

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainments, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the correct and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of women."

LUCREZIA BORI

"IF you would be beautiful you must perspire. I never perspire even on the hottest day in summer," I heard a girl say the other day, and I felt like saying: "You look it, my dear, and you will do well if you set yourself about proper perspiration right away. Don't boast about it."

I am not an expert histologist and cannot go into all the details of telling you just how your body is formed, and how much work the skin should do to aid the [illegible] of waste matter. I am going to take the word of a dermatologist who says there are [illegible] of pores in the skin of the body, and when the pores do their proper work they discharge two [illegible] of waste matter every day. Perspiration is the chief [illegible] in this important work. Healthy [illegible] will perspire. If you don't [illegible] something is wrong with [illegible]. It is clogged. You need [illegible].

Value of Exercise.

Nothing is the [illegible] for starting perspiration. [illegible] Walk, run, play tennis, [illegible] ball, skip rope, roll, do something in the form of energetic exercise until you start the glands and the pores of your body working. But baths with some softening agent in the water and good soap will greatly help. The warm bath should always follow exercise, and a cooler shower and brisk rub-down complete the treatment. You need never expect a good complexion, girls, unless you perspire.

A girl wrote me that she had tried all the advice of her friends and still her hands are red. I would advise her to see her physician. Her circulation may be wrong. Outward applications will not cure until inward causes are removed.

"What perfume do you think is most pleasing?" writes another girl. Perfumes should suit the personality of the user if one is very fastidious. I think the most delightful perfume is that of absolute cleanliness, girl, perhaps, the faintest suggestion of violet or orris. Heavy perfumes are bad enough any time. They are unendurable in summer.

Good Hair Tonic.

"I am losing my hair," writes "Madge of Oregon," and wants to know if this is "the proper time for one to lose her hair."

No time is proper for one to lose hair, Madge. By nature we are supposed to keep our hair. Try a shampoo of tar soap or an egg beaten in water, and be sure the hair is thoroughly cleansed and rinsed. Then rub in a pomade made of three ounces of white vaseline, half as much castor oil, one and three-quarters drachms of gallic acid and a few drops of oil of lavender. This will stop the hair falling and encourage new growth.

"What cold cream do you advise?" Kate J. K. wants to know. I cannot give names. Here is a good cold cream, and you can make it for yourself.

Three ounces almond oil, one ounce of lanoline, two drachms each of white wax and spermaceti, one drachm of oil of bitter almonds, an ounce of witch hazel and three ounces of elder flower water. Melt the wax and oils in a double boiler and add the witch hazel and elder flower water, mixing well.

It is one of the best creams for sunburn and summer irritations of the skin that I know.

Masterpieces of the Cuisine

A Favorite Recipe of E. Panchard

Chef of the Hotel McAlpin, New York

[redacted]

E. PANCHARD

THE making of delicious dishes is not a mystic art known only to the few, rather it is a simple test of patience and of thought.

You can prepare dishes as pleasing as the greatest chef can make if you will only give to your task a little time and consideration. All the ingredients that the chef uses are at your command, and all that you need do is to give to your kitchen the study and time that he gives to his.

Never save on quality when you buy for the table, but study how you can make what you buy go a long way. When you refuse to give your table serious study, tossing together your meals with all possible speed, how can you hope to economize? Out of the scraps that you waste a chef would make a feast to delight a king.

The following dish takes time to prepare, but I offer it to you exactly as it is made by me. I hope that the time spent in preparing it will be repaid by your pleasure in eating it:

Rump of Beef a la Mode.

FOR this dish use a piece of beef prepared with six pounds of rump. Lard it with fat pork, and season well with salt, pepper, nutmeg and chopped parsley. Then place the meat in an earthen bowl with sliced carrots and onions, pour over it one-half pint of brandy, and let it marinate for one day in a cool place, turning it over frequently. Drain and dry the surface.

Put it in a saucepan with some fat, roast it until brown. Add a pint of white wine and enough beef broth to cover the meat. Add some bones and two split calf's feet which are blanched, a bunch of parsley tied up with some celery, thyme and bay leaves; one whole pepper, two carrots, two onions and some garlic. Then add the brandy which was left in the bowl, let it come to a boil, cover and put it in the oven to simmer for two hours, or until well done.

Drain the meat. And strain the gravy. When nearly cold cut into slices and spread over an oval dish, range round some braised carrots, glazed onions, the calf's foot boned and cut in small pieces, and some green peas; pour the gravy over it and keep cool in an ice box until set like a jelly.

ADVICE to GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl of almost [illegible]. I read the letter in today's paper and perhaps I, too, have made a mistake.

I am engaged to a young man, [illegible], and am to be married this fall. I fancied I was too young, but as he is a bachelor with no one to help him in any way, living in a strange place, I took pity on him.

He has been keeping company with me for almost two years, and I have found no fault of any account in him. And he says the same of me.

Do you think it would be wiser and better for us both to wait a couple of years under the circumstances? My father and mother consent.

Now please tell me what you think about it. BLUE EYES.

WHY you funny little girl, you, whatever is the matter with you?

You have a sweetheart you love truly, and he loves you the same. What in the world do you want to go around hunting for some excuse to be miserable for?

He's a bachelor, alone in a strange place; he needs you and you need him, and your father and mother consent. What more do you want in the land of love and all love's paradise?

Do you want him to take to drink so you'll have to marry him—"to save him?" Must he rob a bank to get you to be his wife—on the day he is sentenced to the penitentiary—like the heroine of your favorite book?

What on earth do you want, Blue Eyes, and why do you want it? You've found a pearl in the road—a pearl of great price. Don't throw it into the grass just to have the fun of hunting for it again. You might not find it this time.

If you have the true love of a good man be thankful for it, and give him your love and make him happy—[illegible] Blue Eyes, a few [illegible] just now—and a little more planning on the pretty things you're going to wear at your wedding.

You ask your mother if that isn't a good prescription.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

Secrets of Health and Happiness.

How Your Nerves Work By Own Electric Power

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

[redacted]

DR. HIRSHBERG

MOST biologists and physiologists claim that a distinguishing feature of life is the irritability of living tissues. If this were not true animals and plants could not grow, adapt themselves or survive and reproduce offspring.

Irritability of this nature does not in any way partake of the popular meaning of this word. It has nothing to do with petulance in habits and [illegible].

When any living thing takes food, avoids poison, or otherwise maintains a definite equilibrium with its surroundings, it has a normal, healthful irritability. Brutes as well as vegetables, man no less than animalcules, must change eternally, and so alter their activities as to preserve a peaceful, progressive balance between their own internal mechanism and the outside surroundings.

A tonic or a stimulant is associated in most opinions with drugs and medicaments. That is to say, most persons think of alcohol, coffee, broths, tea and pharmaceuticals such as strychnine, as "tonics" and "stimulants." Yet many of these, such as whiskey, wine and beer are so far from being stimulants that they are poisonous sedatives.

Alcohol Not a Stimulant.

Prof. Ralph S. Lillie of Clark University says that a stimulant or tonic of the living body is anything which arouses a tissue into new activity, or modifies the activity of one already active.

Chemicals are not by any means the most common causes of renewed or altered activity in living tissue. One of the characteristic features of stimulation is that a very slight tonic may instigate a large series of changes.

When one of your nerves is given a stimulant such as a pinch, a burn, a freeze or a punch, the disturbance set up in the nerve, no matter what its nature, spreads also to the other nerves in contact with it, until it reaches the brain and spinal cord.

There is no visible or ultra visible mechanical change in a tensed, stimulated or irritated nerve. There is some chemical [illegible] lost, but this does not altogether explain the wonderful, wireless powers of the nerve force.

There is, however, an easily recognizable electric current—"electric action," as it is termed—associated with a nerve in action. In fine, a nerve is tense and irritated in, more or less, the same as a copper wire with electricity flowing through it. This electrical condition in living tissues, more particularly the nerves, is the essential peculiarity that accounts for its self-stopping impulse or "message."

How Nerves Work.

The thing which hurries your body to action, which moves your muscles, spurs your brain and sets your nerves a-tingle, is an electrical change due to a sudden fall in the electric power at the skin or outside portion of the nerve. This difference in electric "potential" between the outer and the innermost parts of the nerve, causes the message hastily to tunnel along the nerve fiber.

This explains how a ray of light is carried to the other tissues; how movements of the air are finally "heard"; how a pinch is felt; how heat, cold, pain, taste, smell, [illegible] and the other things are registered in your [illegible].

> "Canada and Australia started out together, on the same day, to create navies of their own. Owing to a change of Government in 1911 Canada abandoned her plans, Australia kept on and made a navy which, although still small, is mighty useful to herself and the Empire."—Toronto Star.

The above is absolutely untrue. The facts can be stated briefly, and they are as follows:

In 1909 Australia, New Zealand and Canada started even. Australia agreed to build a whole fleet unit; New Zealand to build a battle cruiser; Canada to build four light cruisers and six destroyers. That was in March. In October of the same year—seven months later—Australia had begun work on destroyers.

CANADA had done nothing.

In June, 1910, Australia had begun work on the battle cruiser "Australia," and New Zealand had just got busy on the battle cruiser "New Zealand."

CANADA had done nothing.

In October, 1910, New Zealand ordered three destroyers.

CANADA had done nothing.

In December, 1910, two destroyers reached Australia.

CANADA had done nothing.

In February, 1911, the construction of the light cruiser "Sydney" (which destroyed the Emden the other day) was begun by Australia.

CANADA was calling for tenders for the Laurier Navy.

In April 1911, Australia began work on the light cruiser "Melbourne."

CANADA was still calling for tenders.

In July, 1911, the battle cruiser "New Zealand" was launched, and three destroyers for New Zealand were completed.

CANADA opened her tenders.

In October, 1911, Australia launched the battle cruiser "Australia." The Laurier Government went out of office without letting contracts.

In other words, two years after the three Dominions had started even, Australia had two destroyers in her harbours and a battle cruiser and two light cruisers well advanced toward completion, New Zealand had a battle cruiser launched and three destroyers ready for action, Canada had nothing but a lot of plans and tenders which the Laurier Government had pigeon-holed.

The ship which destroyed the Emden—the cruiser Sydney—was nearly ready for launching before the Laurier Government moved a hand to carry out its scheme.

Magic "Nerviline" Ends Stiff Neck, Lumbago

Any Curable Neuralgia or Joint Pain Is Instantly Relieved by Nerviline.

GET A TRIAL BOTTLE TO-DAY.

You don't have to wait all day to get the kink out of a stiff neck if you rub on Nerviline. And you don't need to go around complaining about lumbago any more. You can rub such things away very quickly with Nerviline. It's the greatest liniment, the quickest to penetrate, the speediest to ease muscular pain of any kind.

One twenty-five cent trial bottle of Nerviline will cure any attack of lumbago or lame back. This has been proved a thousand times, just as it was in the case of Mrs. E. J. Gearden, of Caledonia, who writes:—"I wouldn't think of going to bed without knowing we had Nerviline in the house. I have used it for twenty odd years and I appreciate its value as a family remedy more and more every day. If any of the children gets a stiff neck, Nerviline cures quickly. If it is earache, toothache, cold on the chest, sore throat, Nerviline is always my standby. My husband once cured himself of a frightful attack of lumbago by Nerviline, and for a hundred ailments that turn up in a large family Nerviline is by far the best thing to have about you."

Laurier and Our Navy

Discussing the destruction of the German cruiser "Emden" by the Australian cruiser "Sydney," the Manitoba Free Press (Liberal) remarks:—

> "Could anything be more clearly proven by the events of the war than the need on the Canadian Pacific shores of a squadron of powerful, modern, swift, cruisers?"

The Free Press is unnecessarily severe upon its leader. Does it not remember that the Admiralty, in 1909, asked Canada for a fleet unit in the Pacific and that the request was bluntly refused by Sir Wilfrid Laurier? Let us refresh the memory of the Free Press with the Liberal leader's precise words:—

> "The representatives of the Canadian Government at the Conference (Imperial Conference) took the ground that it would not be advisable for Canada to have her fleet on the Pacific ocean. Evidently, as I understand the Conference, the British Government were anxious to have a strong force on the Pacific."

INFANTRY WEAPONS

Infantry arms consist of the rifle, bayonet and machine gun. The "pom-pom," which figured so much in South Africa, has been withdrawn.

The service machine gun is the .303 Maxim, which will fire a continuous leaden stream of bullets at the rate of 600 a minute, or 10 bullets every second, at ranges of from 300 to 1,300 yards.

The maxim weighs 60 pounds, and its lightness enables it to be carried anywhere the troops can go. It can be taken along roads on wheels, across country on pack animals, or, if needs be, shouldered by a single soldier right up into the firing line.

The weak point of the maxim is that its mechanism is liable to jam and render it useless. In the hands of trained gunners its destructive power is greater than land mines, bursting shrapnel, cavalry charges, bayonet charges, or any variety of rifle fire.

FORCIBLE FEEDING

"Not Used as a Deterrent, But It Does Deter," Says Premier

The Rev. R. J. Campbell, Dr. R. F. Horton, and other ministers addressed a letter to Mr. Asquith protesting against forcible feeding of suffragist prisoners.

Replying through his private secretary, the Prime Minister stated that Mr. McKenna repudiated the statement which had appeared in the memorial that he had defended forcible feeding in the House, not only as a means of detaining people in prison but also as a deterrent.

"It is true," the Premier's letter ran, "that forcible feeding in some cases actually deters prisoners from adopting the hunger strike, as they realize that the strike will not secure their release, but it has never been used as a deterrent or for any purpose except to preserve the life and health of a prisoner, and it has never been defended on any but this ground."

MANY HAWKS AND OWLS FRIENDS OF FARMER

Destroy Mice and Insects Wholesale and Very Seldom Make Raid on the Poultry Yard

Among all our birds there is no group which stands in need of protection as much as the hawks and owls, writes A. B. Klugh, M.A., in The Farmer's Advocate. The reason for this is because as a group they are badly misunderstood. All hawks and owls are condemned by the farmer and the sportsman because of the harm which is done by a very few species.

Taken as a group the birds of prey perform a most necessary service for the farmer, a service which is carried on quietly and continuously, and which is never realized or appreciated until it is rendered less efficient by a diminution in the numbers of these birds. This service is the destruction of small rodents. Where the birds of prey have been very much reduced in numbers the field mice have increased to such an extent as to constitute a veritable plague. It may seem an anachronism to many to class any hawk as an insectivorous bird, yet many species feed very largely upon insects.

If we look for a moment into the food of our common Canadian hawks and owls we shall see that most of them are among the most valuable allies which the farmer possesses.

The red-tailed hawk, a large species common in the East, in which the tail is red above, is commonly termed "hen-hawk," but as a matter of fact it very rarely takes poultry, and by far the greater portion of its food consists of injurious animals. It also feeds extensively upon large insects, such as grasshoppers, crickets and beetles.

The red-shouldered hawk is the commonest large hawk in many parts of the East. It may be known, when at rest, by the reddish coloration of the bend of the wing, and when in the air by the underside of the tail having narrow bands of black and white. This species shares with the red-tail the name of hen-hawk, a name even less merited than in the case of the red-tail, since less than one and one-half per cent. of its food consists of poultry or game birds. Its tastes are decidedly omnivorous, and it feeds on mice, snakes, frogs, fish, grasshoppers, centipedes, spiders, crayfish, earthworms, snails, and an occasional ground-haunting bird.

The rough-legged Hawk, which breeds in the West and is seen as a migrant in the East, feeds almost exclusively upon field mice. It takes also ground squirrels and sometimes a rabbit, but never touches a bird either wild or domesticated. This is one of our largest hawks, being two feet in length, and may be recognized by its having the legs feathered down to the toes.

Swainson's hawk, which is the common large hawk of the prairies, may be known by the broad band of chestnut across the breast, which contrasts strongly with the pure white of the length. This species is about twenty inches in length. It feeds almost entirely upon field mice, gophers, and large insects.

WESTERN PIONEERS

Men of the Eighties Who Persevered in the Face of Difficulty

There is little left of the Winnipeg of the early eighties. Each year sees a diminution of the links which bind the days when Winnipeg was the stepping-off place, to the present, in which Winnipeg acts the part of the gateway to prosperity and affluence to all who seek diligently and persevere. Each year, one or more of those who formed the little band of pioneers who exhibited that [illegible] perseverance in the face of almost insuperable obstacles, who stuck to the town of their adoption in spite of hard times, through all the vicissitudes of the growth of Winnipeg from trading post to metropolis, steadfast in their faith in its future, pass to their long rest having seen their judgment justified, their dreams of the city that was to be come true. The city of Winnipeg, and indeed, the whole of Western Canada, joins in paying tribute to the worth of those pioneer citizens of the prairies, whose unbounded optimism it was which made possible the Winnipeg of to-day, and whose prophetic vision outlined, in spite of the struggles in which they were involved, the glorious future of the west, which to-day is just beginning to be realized. The story of their careers is an object lesson to all in display of sterling character, of business integrity, and a wealth of human kindness.—The Saturday Post.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs — all young foxes— good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William Macdonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $[illegible] worth of stock for themselves, $[illegible] worth has already been disposed of, leaving $[illegible] to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but was able to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this recapitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

The Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and you the shareholder, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000), put them in a fox company, [illegible] your company at $[illegible] and make you pay [illegible] for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Pelts, shipped from Prince Edward Island [illegible] to London, England, and sold there in March, 1913:

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each, 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st, 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four. [illegible] this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent. we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one subject that appeals to the investor [illegible] dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain [illegible] what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the other [illegible] by any other company now in business, and judge for yourself [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown newspapers.

EARLY LIGHTHOUSES

[illegible] Builder of First Eddystone Light

Although today it is the desire of everyone to prevent shipwreck as far as possible, this was by no means the case in the time of our grandfathers. Dwellers on some coastlines in those "good old days" used to look upon shipwrecks as a regular blessing, and the people of Cornwall even went so far as to have a special saint to whom they prayed in hard times for the "blessing" of a wreck and its accompanying loot!

The earlier method of lighting dangerous parts of the coast was by means of braziers, fixed high up on a cliff. These braziers were often placed on the top of a building, and would act as a fairly good warning of the rocks beneath. The wind, too, helped to keep the fire well alight.

A further step in the development of coast warnings was a lightship with lamps suspended from the extremes of the yardarm. These vessels were first built about 1730, but they were not entirely satisfactory at that time, as they had a habit of breaking loose from their moorings and drifting away.

Yet another form of coast warning consisted of a bell-buoy, which was fixed in the immediate vicinity of dangerous rocks. The fierce waves of a storm tossed the bell to and fro, and above the howl of the tempest the warning notes of the bell could be heard by hard-pressed mariners.

In the year 1696 Winstanley's first Eddystone Lighthouse was started. The constructor had many difficulties to face, apart from the actual building of the lighthouse. One of his annoyances was the fact that the press-gang insisted on taking his workmen away for service in the Navy. But an appeal to the Admiralty at last ended this, and each workman was given a silver medal, by producing which he could escape being kidnapped.

Even more serious were the attentions of the French privateers; and one day, during a fog, Winstanley was captured by the French, and taken across the Channel, while his men were stripped naked and set adrift in an open boat.

In the course of three years, however, he succeeded in rearing the structure. It looked more like a church than a lighthouse. The walls were wonderfully decorated, and adorned with texts; there were all sorts of fancy devices for the comfort of the occupants, and in most particulars the building was unfitted for its purpose.

When it had been standing a year, Winstanley altered and improved it [illegible] 1703. On November [illegible] of that year Winstanley was at Plymouth, [illegible] to spend a night in his lighthouse during a storm, as everyone declared that it was unsafe—a contention which he utterly [illegible].

As it happened, one of the most terrible storms of the century was then blowing up, and so off to the lighthouse Winstanley went. All through the night, both at sea and inland, the gale raged; and at Winstanley's home in [illegible] a curious thing happened that night. A little silver model of his lighthouse was blown down on to the floor.

Next morning no sign of the lighthouse was to be seen upon the Eddystone rocks. It had been blown into the sea, with all whom it contained.

A STUDY IN RED HEADS

They Are Fiery Tempered on This Continent But Not in Europe

The significance of red hair may seem to be a trivial academic subject of no practical importance, but there is some evidence that these people have a much higher death rate on the American continent than in Europe, and the study of the cause and effect of "rufousness" assumes considerable importance in pathology and therapy, according to a medical journal.

"It is true," says the writer, "that Albinos are defectives, and though a few survive if carefully guarded from every harm, the majority meet early death, and few, if any, are able to make their own living in an efficient way. It is said that the investigations of Major Hurst, a noted eugenist, in an English village of Burbage where there are many red-headed boys and girls, show that it is always hereditary, and never arises anew. He thinks that all cases are derived from a single remote case which appeared as a 'sport' or 'mutation' from some unknown cause.

"The condition is 'recessive,' and according to Mendel's law it may disappear for several generations, particularly in dark families. If one parent is red and the other dark, the children are rarely red, but if both parents are red, the children are always red. In England they are not any more fiery tempered than the rest of the population, but this does not seem to be true in America, where something in the climate—probably the excessive light—irritates them, keeps nerves on edge, lessens resistance to disease, and prevents efficiency."

OLD BOOKS AT EDMONTON

Two Rare Volumes in Library of University of Alberta

There are two books in the library of the University of Alberta at Edmonton which provide a good start for a collection of valuable old old volumes such as every university library hoped to accumulate. One of these, and by far the more precious, is a first edition, beautifully bound, of the old "Athenae Oxonienses." This book was compiled by the old antiquarian, Anthony A Wood, in the latter part of the 17th century, and is a biographical record of all who, up to the date of publication of the volume, had received degrees from Oxford, or had been in any way associated with that institution; this is almost to say Who's Who of England prior to the 17th century. Wood had access to vast stores of information now long since lost, and the "Athenae" book is one of the most valuable source books of English literary history.

The other book is a first edition of Dr. Johnson's dictionary. There had been dictionaries of the English language before Dr. Johnson's, but there has been none so comprehensive in its scope or so charged with the learning and individuality of its author. The two great folio volumes of the dictionary are full of the whimsical touches so characteristic of the old doctor, and provide reading matter far more interesting than any modern dictionary.

AN AVIATION DISEASE

Rapid Ascent Brings on Giddiness, Headache and Sleepiness

Every new sport develops its diseases. There are "lawn tennis elbow," "cyclist's hump," "automobilist's stare," and plenty more. Now, we are told, there are complaints peculiar to aviators. These are considered in a recent English book entitled "Flying," written by Hamel and Turner. The writer says:

"Mountain sickness and balloon sickness are, of course, well known disorders, though their scientific explanation is not settled beyond dispute. Air sickness is, in essentials, the same disorder, though it appears at a lower altitude than mountain sickness. This is what might be expected, since the aviator ascends so much more rapidly than the mountaineer. Curiously enough, air sickness seems to affect aviators at lower levels than when balloon ascents are made. The leading features of air sickness are stated to be giddiness, headache and somnolence, the latter supervening after landing, and sometimes after a considerable interval. Actual nausea is seldom troublesome.

"Mr. Alder, who is the author of a chapter on this subject, attributes air sickness to want of oxygen in the rarefied atmosphere of the upper air. The remedy is therefore simple, if this hypothesis is correct—namely, to carry oxygen cylinders and to inhale the gas when very high flying is being attempted."

ORIGIN OF OLD SAWS

All the Hobsons written down in history are not naval heroes. There was Tobias Hobson, for instance, the first man in England to keep a livery stable, the man who made "Hobson's Choice" famous long before any one ever "remembered the Maine." Hobson of the livery stable always had plenty of horses on hand, but no matter what kind of horse his customer wanted he insisted upon him taking the horse nearest the door—the man who paid for the horse had no choice in the matter, and thus "Hobson's Choice" came to mean no choice at all, but take what you get.

Like a good many other saws, wise and otherwise, the saying, "It takes nine tailors to make a man," is based on an error of pronunciation. The expression, which has no reference at all to tailors, comes down from that remote time when it was customary to toll a church bell when anyone died. It struck six for a woman and nine for a man. The stroke of the bell was called a "teller" and "nine tellers for a man" or "nine tellers mark a man," was a common saying. On its course from generation to generation it was changed through mispronunciation and misunderstanding to the pointless expression, "It takes nine tailors to make a man."

Gun as Billposter

A gun which shoots signs into place has been invented, which, in appearance, is not unlike a shotgun. The sign, which it discharges, is rolled tightly about a heavy stick and a cord is attached to a tack which is temporarily fastened, point out, at one end of this. The other end of the string is fastened to the top of the sign. When the instrument is loaded with one of these and the trigger pulled, heavy springs furnish the propelling force which sends the roll endwise through the air like an arrow, at whatever object it is aimed. The tack imbeds itself, while the jar of the impact loosens the sign and makes it unroll, falling into place. Posters have been [illegible]

HOW LANGUAGE GROWS

Derivation of Some Commonly Used Words and Phrases

The turkey was unknown in the Land of Uz, and, as neither history nor legend record that Job owned any barnyard stock, there seems to be no historic reason why the turkey should have been "wished" on the much afflicted man of Uz. Nevertheless, Judge Haliburton, the Canadian humorist, in his droll book, "Sam Slick," written in the early 19th century, gives a vivid description of Job's turkey, "a creature so poor that it had only one feather in its tail, and when it gobbled it had to lean against a fence for support." Thus the turkey, a native of this continent, fluttered back on the wings of fiction to about the third century, B.C., and we have the much-quoted expression, "Poor as Job's turkey."

The story of calico goes away back to an early day in India when the fabric was manufactured in Calicut, and shipped from there to other parts of the world.

Muslin is also of far eastern origin and was first made in Mosul in the historic valley of the Euphrates. Cashmere comes from the "vale of Cashmere," famed in song and story. Damask is a product of Damascus.

The prettily flowered dimity was known to the Egyptians, and it's a fabric of ancient origin. It takes its name from the city of Damietta. Worsted was first made in an English town of that name, and, like most of the cloths, takes its name from the place from where it was first exported.

What is a dude? Don't go to the dictionary for information, for even the Century encyclopedia can do no better than say, "The term is probably one of the spontaneous products of popular slang." The dude is said to be the product of the "esthetic" craze that struck the world about 1882, with Oscar Wilde as its shining light in England. Although it is sometimes said that dude is a derivative of the old English word dudes, meaning clothes, authoritative dictionaries say, that the connection between the two words, though apparently natural, is impossible.

PROF. J. W. ROBERTSON ON TECHNICAL EDUCATION

Our whole civilization moves under the influence of the fishermen of Galilee, the tent-maker of Tarsus, and above all the Carpenter of Nazareth.

In Ireland in 1890 there were only about 2,000 pupils in industrial continuation schools, chiefly in the north of Ireland; by 1910 there were 65,000 pupils enrolled under the schemes of the Technical Instruction branch.

After the hand work for boys was introduced into the schools of Munich, of the 2,200 boys who left school the first year thereafter, no less than 2,150 went at once into hand work in skilled employments.

What is required is that individuals and communities possess intelligence, practical ability and co-operating good will. These are not inherited.

The development of labor for the carrying on and carrying out of undertakings in connection with the natural resources is a most important duty, and at the present time is pressing upon the people for discharge. It presses upon the people both as individuals and communities.

The schools do not teach a trade, but give a good preparation for the learning of a trade immediately after the children leave school.

The fruits of technical education would be found in the circumstances and homes of the people and in the residuum of intelligence, practical ability and good will.

Hereafter the top of the ladder will be in every kind of institution where a man or woman is needed and can be trained for efficient service in agricultural work, in industrial work, commercial work, or housekeeping work.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

BURIED MILLIONS

Much Money Spent in Draining Lake in South America

For hundreds of years the belief has prevailed that gold dust and gems to the value of $[illegible] lie buried at the bottom of the sacred lake of Guatavita, in Colombia, a territory once occupied by Indian tribes renowned for their fabulous wealth.

The aboriginal Indians of that locality had a custom of casting [illegible] vessels and ornaments of precious metal into the waters of the lake as offerings to their gods, and the knowledge of this custom led to the belief that has been handed down through the ages that it was the burying-place of fabulous wealth.

For centuries, almost ever since the country was first discovered, travellers and explorers have engaged in various expeditions in search of this territory, and many attempts were made to drain the lake, without success. The Spaniards were just at the point of succeeding in the task of draining the lake after years of hard work spent upon it; but when they were half-way through, the sides fell in and years of work were wasted. In 1899 an English company undertook the work. They proceeded to drain it by digging a tunnel through the adjacent mountains, bringing it below the level of the surface of the water.

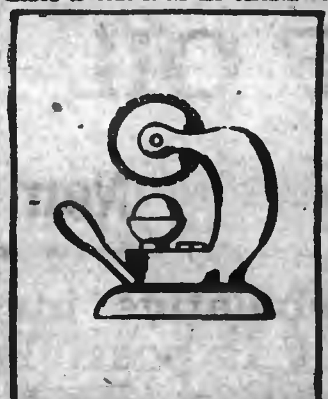
The lake was not emptied until 1904, but it kept refilling on account of the heavy rains and the presence of springs. A number of jewels and ornaments found in the mud of the lake bed seemed to indicate that the search for hidden treasure was to prove successful. Then the mud dried hard and fresh difficulty was then encountered. The engineers continued operations, but no further treasure came to light.

After an outlay of some $75,000 it was decided to abandon the hunt.

GOLF BALL MAKER

Sphere Rests on Plunger and is Pressed up Against Die

An apparatus for imparting to golf balls their peculiar pock-marked complexion has been designed. Arising from a metal base is a metal standard with an overhanging and bifurcated arm. In the bifurcation of this arm a rotary die is pivoted. Directly below this die is a vertically moving plunger that is operated by a little lever at the side and that has a spring attached to control its movements. On top of the plunger is a cup into which a golf ball is placed. By pressing down on the lever the plunger rises and the ball is pressed against the die. The force of the impact is sufficient to set the die revolving and it continues to revolve as the ball rises against it. This has the effect of turning the ball around in the cup so that it is stamped around its entire circumference.



DIE REVOLVES AUTOMATICALLY.

Laying a Ghost

When we hear of anybody having seen a ghost our first impulse is to explain the matter away. There are more explanations of supernatural visitors than records of their visitations. We are not allowed to believe in ghosts, says the "Medical Press and Circular." A certain house was haunted in the best sense of the word. Horrid shapes and shrieks and sights unholy were its nocturnal lot. The inhabitants enjoyed a pleasantly terrified notoriety, and the reporters exulted. Enter a sanitary inspector. He found a defective flue which flooded the house with a malodorous mixture of sulphurous oxide, carbon monoxide, and other ingredients. The haunted inhabitants were suffering from a chronic intoxication that affected their bodily health and their imagination.

Advance in Lighting

Since the introduction of the incandescent lamp, over thirty years ago, the art of illumination has been [illegible] an example of [illegible] and its fruits as the world has had. From time to time during the interval from the great Edison discovery of the property of carbonized filament, up to the present, many additions of great utilitarian value have transformed the electric lamp from an experiment into a commodity upon which is dependent the health, comfort and general advance of civilization, and the commercial advantages of which alone have rendered possible an indeterminable production from associated industry.

GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on [illegible] pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Nimrods Displeased

Hunters in the United States complain that the new federal law prohibiting the shooting of migratory fowl during the hours before sunrise and after sunset is hurting the sport. Many protests are being made on the ground that it practically amounts to a closed season all the year for those whose only time for hunting is early in the morning or in the evening after work is over. The Government officials, however, argue that protection of the birds means, in the end, the conserving of the sport for the hunters.

SICKNESS AT SEA

Many Reasons For the Trouble and How to Deal With It

Two problems with regard to seasickness have never been solved: what causes it and what cures it. The ship's surgeon of a giant liner says:—

"Its peculiarity is that it is not amenable to any one line of treatment or to any one drug. What helps one may be of no use whatever to another. Many of the so-called remedies are worse than the original complaint. Why not be stoical about it? The fact remains that, after a spell of seasickness, unless too severe, one feels much the better for it."

[illegible] and soda, tincture of iodine, chloral, veronal, stay in bed, don't stay in bed, flannel bandages, sticking cloves to keep the stomach warm, whisky and soda, blue glasses—the list of alleged remedies [illegible]. Alas! they are for the most part but snares and delusions. But some [illegible] may be taken that will make your [illegible] short lived. Keep [illegible] the night before you sail. [illegible] largest boat possible, but one that has little vibration. Get your cabin fairly well amidships. Apply for a deck chair early, and have it put amidships.

Avoid the habit of lying in your chair and watching to see how far forward the horizon line is getting to run along the rail of the next [illegible]. Keep out on deck as much as possible. If you get to feel poignantly miserable and conclude that you would feel better if you could only have it over with—usually a wise conclusion—get up suddenly and poke your head into the smoking room, or take a look over the rail, or walk away out on the stern. Any one of these is an excellent precipitant. Take some regular exercise every day. So long as you are well, be careful of your food. But the moment you become sick, eat anything you want. Heaven knows you won't want enough to hurt you!

COMPENSATION FOR FAT

Lords Decide Against Scottish Miner's Incapacity Claim

A Scottish collier's highly original claim for compensation was considered so good a test of the Workmen's Act that it reached the House of Lords, and was solemnly adjudicated upon.

The miner met with an accident in the course of his work and, [illegible] recovered, his employers paying him compensation up to the day he returned to work. But on trying to get head of the miner's pick again he discovered that he had grown too fat for the colliery.

Reasoning that his fat had come during convalescence he claimed that his disability was part of the accident, and that compensation should be paid him till he was thinned sufficiently to make work in the mine acceptable again.

First the question went to arbitration. The arbitrator found that the incapacity for work had ceased immediately on his recovery, fat or no fat. The Court of Session in Scotland, however, upheld the miner.

Their lordships decided that the arbitrators' award ought to be restored, thereby deciding against the miner's contention.

AUSTRALIA'S PROGRESS

Western Australia's total population is less than 300,000, but there are over 100,000 accounts open in the savings bank of that State, and a total of $32,500,000 to the credit of the depositors.

Australia's factories increased in one year by over 600, the number of hands employed 15,000, the salaries by over $15,000,000, the value of plant and machinery by $35,00,000, material used by $40,000,000, value added by manufacture $35,000,000, and the total output by $75,000,000.

The annual mineral production of the Commonwealth of Australia is worth over $115,000,000, or several millions sterling more than the gross revenue of all the Australian railways. Close on 100,000 persons are engaged in mining in the Commonwealth, and probably quite half a million are directly dependent on it.

The average nominal rate of wages paid to males employed in the Australian factories, according to the Commonwealth Statistician, is $9.90 per week and $4.72 for females.

RACETRACK ROGUES IN THE OLD COUNTRY

Swindling Operatives Who Happily Have Few Counterparts in the Dominion

The racecourse is notoriously a happy hunting-ground for thousands of scheming rogues, who visit the principal race meetings with the sole intention of relieving the unsophisticated sportsman of his money by fair means or unfair—mostly unfair, says a writer in the Glasgow Herald. Some of the schemes are undoubtedly clever, but others again are as old as the hills, and it is really surprising to find a public gullible enough to swallow them.

A common piece of thick tape, about two feet long and half an inch wide, is doubled up and folded round like a catherine-wheel. The operator then places it upon a table, and bets the eager onlookers odds of three to one that they cannot insert a pointed skewer in one of the loops so as to retain the garter when he pulls it. As there are about thirty similar loops visible, it is small wonder that the proprietor very rarely has to pay up.

This swindle is usually well worked by pick-pockets, as they have a splendid chance of plying their trade amongst the players.

The Race-table Swindle

The numerous race-tables scattered all over most racing grounds have an irresistible attraction for many would-be sports. Painted upon these tables are [illegible] likenesses of the various horses engaged in the big race for the day, and in the centre of the table is a revolving spindle.

The gentleman in charge of the gaming apparatus lets odds against the spindle stopping at any particular one of the various colored [illegible]. His confederates stand around, and, by their remarkable luck in "backing" high-priced winners time after time, induce outsiders to bet heavily.

The backers never win, as the gambling race-game swindler has more than one artifice by which he can slow down the pointer to any horse he chooses.

"Welshers," or bogus-bookmakers, swarm at probably every racecourse in the United Kingdom and they always work with half-a-dozen or more confederates who pretend to place bets with them.

Innocent Victims

[illegible]

The Racecourse Sharper

For real cleverness, [illegible] or "tale-tellers" [illegible] in the picturesque vernacular of the turf, are undoubtedly entitled to the blue ribbon of racing swindles.

A sharper of this type is an unerring judge of character, and it does not take him long to pick out a "mug," as the youth with more money than brains is known.

When thoroughly in his victim's confidence, the sharper, as a huge favor, tells him there is a great system of backing horses in existence, of which he—the sharper—is the sole inventor, and if Mr. Simple has any spare cash to invest he has a chance of making a small fortune. At first the poor victim is allowed to win a little; but gradually all the money of which he is possessed finds its way into his affable friend's pocket.

KING OF UMPIRES

Gaffney Brought Arbitrator's Work up to Modern Pitch

While John H. Gaffney, who died at his home in Worcester recently, was known as the king of umpires, he was not the first arbitrator to be honored by that title, writes Old Sport [illegible] in the Philadelphia Inquirer. Honest John Kelly was the original king of umpires, although it always was a question whether he was really the best of the umpires of his time. But there was one honor no one could take from him. When he was operating, he was the boss of the field, and that was long before the umpires were clothed with the almost autocratic power they are to-day. And then, think of the mobs he had to face in those days. Compared with them the most turbulent of present-day crowds are mild and orderly. But, no matter how tough the going was, nothing seemed to bother Kelly, who, on one occasion, hopped the fence in order to get at his tormentors in the right field bleachers. Gaffney, though, was the originator of modern umpiring. He was the first man to go behind the pitcher when there was a runner on, he was always over the play, and was the first umpire the Old Sport can recall who made it a point to be both blind and deaf at times.

CREED FOR A FARMER

I believe in a permanent agriculture, a soil that shall grow richer rather than poorer from year to year.

I believe in 100-bushel corn and 50-bushel wheat, and I shall not be satisfied with anything else.

I believe that the only good weed is a dead weed, and that a clean farm is as important as a clean conscience.

I believe in the farm boy and in the farm girl, the farmer's best crops and the future's best hope.

I believe in the farm woman, and will do all in my power to make her life easier and happier.

I believe in a country school that prepares for country life, and a country church that teaches its people to love deeply and live honorably.

I believe in community spirit, a pride in home and neighbors, and I will do my part to make my community the best in the province.

I believe in the farmer, I believe in farm life, I believe in the inspiration of the open country.

I am proud to be a farmer, and I will try earnestly to be worthy of the name.—Frank I. Mann.

Remarkable Headgear

This lady has trimmed her bonnet with the costliest trimming in the world—trimmed with her baby!

Strictly speaking, however, the contrivance on her head is not a bonnet. It's the baby's basket.

This custom of carrying baby, basket and all on the head, is a custom of the Baralong tribe in South Africa. The basket is made of reeds, bound around with goat's skin. The inside, however, is thickly laid with downy feathers, so that baby has a beautifully soft bed.

LENGTH OF SCHOOL HOURS

New Rule Adopted in Montreal Does Away With Home Work

What should be the "hours of labor" of the school pupil? A lively discussion of this question started among Montreal teachers and parents by a new rule inaugurated by the Catholic School Board. Formerly the pupils of the Catholic Schools of Montreal attended classes from 9 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m., and were given a certain amount of work to prepare at home for the following day. The new schedule brings the pupils to their desks at 8.30 a.m. and keeps them at work until 5 p.m. with an hour for luncheon and two brief intervals for relaxation. These hours are for the pupils of the third and higher grades. The idea is that the pupils shall have no home work, but shall devote the extra hour in the afternoon to preparation of the next day's lessons. This sounds like a good arrangement in theory, but in practice it is found to have several faults. The teachers declare that in the higher grades one hour is not sufficient for the pupils to prepare their work for the next day's lessons, and, of course, under the new arrangement the pupils are not compelled to do any work at home. Therefore one hour's preparation is all they get. The parents complain that the new regulation increases the difficulty of looking after their children. Under the old-time schedule when the children were dismissed from school they were generally allowed the remainder of the afternoon for recreation. After supper they settled down to prepare their lessons. Now [illegible] to be done after supper, [illegible] parents say that it is [illegible] to [illegible] the youngsters off the streets at night.

HARMLESS DUELS

Principals Are Given Little Time in Which to Aim

A large proportion of the duels in France end without bloodshed. When the offence is not very serious it is agreed beforehand that the words of command shall be given so rapidly that the duelists will not have time to take good aim. Sometimes three shots are exchanged without a hit, and then the seconds step in and—"honor is satisfied." At the word "Fire!" the pistol is raised instantly, and it must be discharged not later than the word "three," so the speed with which these words are given regulates the time in which it is possible to take aim. Therefore the speed with which they are spoken is agreed upon beforehand, this depending upon the seriousness of the duel. The words are timed with a metronome. If the encounter be very serious this is set at the slowest speed, eighty beats a minute, which gives time for taking accurate aim. A speed of 140 beats a minute allows no time for aiming, and, therefore, is used when the seconds consider the duel should be made as little dangerous as possible.

CHAMPION NEEDS YOUTH

Fighting Game Only For Boys Without Business Cares

Ad Wolgast has slipped irredeemably from the upper class set, critics of the Coast claim but his decline is not entirely due to that attack of appendicitis that laid him up a year or two ago. Wolgast affixes the blame to passing years. He is not a boy any more and you've got to be a boy, Ad says, to remain at the top pugilistic place.

"A fellow goes stepping along into manhood," declares Wolgast, "and while he is making the trip his ideas change. As a boy I was a fighter and a hard hitter. I beat Nelson and won the lightweight title and although after that I had my share of bad luck, I was pretty successful and saved quite a bit of money. As the dollars came rolling in I grew lax in my training and began to look upon the fighting game—my profession—as a sort of a side line.

"I let my boy friends paddle along for themselves and took up with business men and men well along in life. They interested me and I found many things outside of ring matters that appealed to me. It wasn't long before I was forgetting altogether about boxing, except when it was brought to my mind, and I went in for business—dabbled in various investments and the like.

"Then when I'd get a fight and would be training hard out at a training camp, business people would come out to see me, and when they would leave, I would be so lonesome and discontented I would find myself unable to sleep.

"Yes, sir, a boxer has got to be a boy to remain champion. Advancing age doesn't hurt him physically, but it takes his mental spirit away from him and leaves it lukewarm."

AN INAUSPICIOUS START

Hugh Jennings' First Professional Games Netted Him no Cash

It will not be long before Hughie Jennings can look back on a quarter of a century of ball playing. The Detroit leader started playing professional ball on June 14, 1890, as a member of the Allentown Club of the Eastern Interstate League, the diamond on which he made his debut being located at Allentown, Pa.

He was signed by the manager of the Allentown Club as a catcher, but it was as a right fielder that he broke into the profession. He got one hit in four times at bat in the first game in which he participated, and fielded perfectly, possibly because he was offered no chances on the defense. The next day the Allentown manager, who was Charley Mason, tried Hughie at short field, where he cared for seven chances out of eight.

It was on June 19 that Hughie was permitted to go behind the bat, the reason the Allentown manager deferred using him in that capacity being due to the fact that it took him two days to break Jennings of the habit of giving signals to his pitcher with his thumb on his right knee and thus letting the batter as well as the pitcher know what was coming. He caught six games in a row for the Pennsylvanians, acquitting himself creditably, if one is to take the word of the box scores, which show that he accepted 36 out of 38 chances.

Sighing for new worlds to conquer, Jennings essayed to pitch for the Allentown Club against Altoona on July 1 and his club was beaten, 8 to 2. Hughie, after this experience, went back to his old duties of backstop—catching for Allentown on July 2 and 3, and on the evening of July 5 he tried to catch up with his overdue salary, which was supposed to be going on at the rate of $45 per month. There was no money in the treasuries of any of the clubs of the Eastern Interstate League, which that night gave up the ghost after a career of less than three months.

In the year that Jennings chose to break into the game, George Stallings was catching in the Atlantic Association, John McGraw was in New York and Pennsylvania League, Connie Mack was with the Brotherhood, and Bill Dahlen was with the Cobleskill Club of the New York League.

The Smallest Dynamo

The smallest electric dynamo in the world was exhibited before the French Academy of Science. The instrument is a perfect miniature of a large machine and is a practical model in every respect. It works with a hum that sounds like the buzz of a mosquito. It weighs only one-fifth of an ounce, and is six-tenths of an inch thick. The little dynamo can be used not only as a generator, but as a motor. A small pocket battery will operate it.

[illegible] Who Raked up an Act of Henry VIII. Was Bitten by It

An incident which highly diverted the House of Commons occurred recently when Mr. Rupert Gwynne announced with a sternly judicial air that under an Act of Henry VIII. which he had discovered, all members absent from the House were under a penalty.

The Act which Mr. Gwynne discovered ordains that no member shall absent himself from attendance without the licence of the Speaker and the Commons, the licence to be entered on record in the book of the clerk, and the member's wages to be stopped. Mr. Gwynne suggested to Mr. Asquith that the Act should be enforced now that members are once more paid, or that it should be repealed.

Mr. Asquith was calm. "The matter does not appear to be one in which the Government are called upon to take any action," he answered.

Meanwhile, Mr. Joseph King had been so curious as to look up Mr. Gwynne's record. "The hon. member himself has been absent from 424 divisions," he announced solemnly, and the House laughed so loud and so long that Mr. Gwynne, palpitating with explanations, was quite unable to make himself heard in response.

Sharing a Stream

As the centre of a stream is the boundary between the farms of the Rev. W. J. M'Keough, a Catholic clergyman, and Mr. John Butler, of Cloone, Harold's Cross, Ireland, a difference arose between the parties as to the trespass of cattle at the stream, and an action arising out of it was settled in the Chancery Division at Dublin, the settlement being that successive portions of the stream should be parcelled out in equal shares to the plaintiff and to the defendant.

TERRIFIED WOMEN HIDE FROM THE GERMANS

Amiens, France Nov. 20.— I have just returned from Montdidier, nine miles east of Roye, where the same deadlock seems to obtain as elsewhere along the line. It gleaned there however, information regarding German treatment of women. This information tends to show that while discipline is severely maintained in the large communities the Uhlans and scattered outposts in the country districts have committed pitiless outrages; I shall give one story illustrating each phase of the situation.

"When the Germans reached Compiegne they found it almost empty of able bodied men. Generally speaking, the invaders conducted themselves well. One Saxon, however, billeted on a house where there was a defenceless young woman, began to court her assiduously. When she resisted his advances he attacked her. She succeeded in escaping and complained to the commanding officer. The latter accompanied her to the house where he saw every evidence of a violent struggle. The officer then turned to the soldier, and said: "I give you two hours in which to kill yourself. If you are not dead in two hours you will be shot." The soldier then went behind the barricade and fired a revolver bullet into his head."

While in Montdidier I went, accompanied by a soldier, to interview a young woman whose parents own a large farm close to a village near Roye. She is 25 years of age and has a sister of 24. Her mother is about 50. She has no brothers and all the male employes are in the army. Thus when about a dozen Uhlans came there no able-bodied men to protect the women. The Uhlans ate and drank heartily, then began to make remarks which frightened the old mother, who ran to hide in the cellar, where she had already concealed her daughters.

Presently the Uhlans began to search the house. One came down the first steps to the cellar and shouted:

"See here, madame, were there no female domestics on this farm? Where are they?"

Terrified, the daughters crouched behind a big barrel. Seeing only the mother the Uhlans disappeared and all went away. The next day it was learned that the Uhlans had broken into a neighboring farm house where there were a woman, aged about 50 and her husband. The soldiers held revolvers to the husband's head while the wife was attacked.

German Losses in Poland Enormous--12,000 Prisoners Taken at Kutno--Foe's Forward Movement in France and Belgium is Checked

THE GERMAN VISIGOTHS AGAIN USELESSLY DESTROY CITY PROPERTY

Ypres Buildings, Including Cathedral and Market, Set Afire by Terrific Bombardment of German Artillery--Foe Repulsed in Argonne After Very Hot Fighting--Situation in Woevre and Vosges Unchanged

Paris, Nov. 23.—The text of the official communication issued this (Monday) afternoon follows:

"Yesterday was marked by a violent artillery fire. The enemy directed particularly to the town of Ypres, where the belfry, the cathedral, the markets, and a number of houses were set on fire, to Soissons, and to Rheims.

"In the Argonne the day was characterized by very hot fighting. The enemy delivered very spirited attacks which were repulsed.

"In the Woevre and in the Vosges the situation is without change."

Battle of Great Ferocity Fought

Paris, Nov. 23.—Renewed bombardment of Nieuport is reported here today from the front together with reports of the greatest activity among the Germans along the coast.

Fighting is now occurring around Middelkerke midway between Ostend and Nieuport. South of the city there has been a battle of great ferocity, the German and allies' forces resorting to the use of the bayonet.

When the garrison of Bruges was relieved by the lightly wounded soldiers that the sound troops might be rushed to the front, the wounded men marched into the city singing. This change in the Bruges garrison was made on Friday.

Back of the German lines there is said to be a considerable movement of troops and guns through Belgium toward the coast. Heavy guns have been mounted between Knocke and Nieuport with the evident intention of returning the fire of the allied warships, which have been bombarding the German lines.

Ypres has again been bombarded, after a partial cessation of fighting there. The town hall and the market place were destroyed, and the city, already partially ruined, was further damaged. In the Argonne, the Champagne district and along other points of the line the Germans are reinforcing their trenches or endeavoring to build new ones in the face of the allied artillery fire.

DETENTION CAMP RIOT WAS PART OF PLAN TO ESCAPE

London, Nov. 23.— The Manchester Guardian, referring to the rioting last Thursday in the alien detention camp on the Isle of Man, in which five prisoners were killed and twelve wounded, says this outbreak was due not merely to discontent with the food and treatment given them, but was part of a desperate plan of the prisoners to escape from the camp with the ultimate hope of seizing a vessel in the harbor and making their way to some neutral country.

The dining room of the camp, where the trouble occurred, gives access through the adjoining kitchens, to the only part of the camp enclosure not protected by a double circuit of barbed wire. The prisoners employed in the kitchens were aware of this condition. The prisoners on Wednesday went on a hunger strike. This rapidly developed into an angry demonstration against England. The prison commandant succeeded in quelling the disturbance, but not before the Union Jack had been torn down.

The mutiny began Thursday, the signal for the outbreak being the throwing of a chair through a window. The prisoners, instead of making for the main doors leading from the dining hall, all rushed toward the kitchen doors. Only six soldiers guarded these doors.

The correspondent of the Manchester Guardian expresses the belief that the prisoners hoped to secure enough arms to hold the guards at bay until the sailors in the camp had time to get possession of a boat in the harbor.

The medical officer at the camp assured the correspondent that the food was sufficient, but it was admitted that a certain consignment of potatoes was bad and that some of the tents leaked. Many prisoners in this camp are men of title and of wealth.

They were allowed to purchase their own food, and they enjoyed course dinners. This was another source of discontent. The captains in charge of the divisions of prisoners were chosen from among the educated aliens, and it is not believed that they had any knowledge of the uprising.

Extra guards have been placed on duty at the Isle of Man camp, and the number of prisoners permitted in the dining room at one time has been reduced.

An inquest held at camp shows that the affair occurred just after the midday meal. There was 2,000 alien prisoners in the dining-room at the time. The guards, consisting of national reservists, were standing in a room which separates the diningroom from the kitchens.

The prisoners suddenly attacked the guards with cups, saucers, tables and anything else that happened to be handy. The guards fired a volley into the air. This failed to quell the riot and a result of which four of the prisoners fell dead or so seriously wounded that they died almost immediately. Twelve others were so badly wounded that they had to be conveyed to the hospital.

AN INDIAN GIFT TO THE PATRIOTIC FUND

The patriotic spirit of the Indians of Western Canada is described in an interesting letter which Mr. W. R. Baker, Secretary of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has received from a friend, and from which the following is an extract:

"Mr. Graham, Inspector of Indian Agencies for Southern Saskatchewan has through his ability and energy [illegible] in Canada. He initiated a colony upon which he placed and is still placing graduates from Indian Industrial Schools. This colony has been quite a successful [illegible] and the young Indians settled there are doing very well. Some grow as many as [illegible] bushels of grain per year and all [illegible] are [illegible] practically out of debt. Well, the people being much alive to the war news, asked so many questions that Mr. Graham decided to hold a meeting on the Colony, which was done. I was, much to my delight, in good enough shape to go with the party and we travelled thither in beautifully decorated cars. I brought along a gramaphone and many patriotic records. We played the national airs of Great Britain France and Russia, and "It's a long, long way to Tipperary" came in for a great deal of praise. Mr. Graham addressed them behind a table upon which was spread the Union Jack, and explained the causes and progress of the war, lucidly and fully, also the work of the Patriotic Fund and Red Cross Society. A committee was at once formed and all of these young Indians quite voluntarily offered to sell so many bushels each of wheat and oats. They were most enthusiastic and have cheer after cheer for the Kings of the different allied nations, our own beloved Sovereign coming in for very loud applause. A few days afterwards Mr. Graham received $500, the result of the sale of grain [illegible] lead. The young Indian women at once took up Red Cross work—knitting, etc., in a very enthusiastic way. Two of the boys—Aleck Moore and Ed. Swanson—have joined the second contingent. They are graduates of the Brandon Indian School and are dead shots. Among the contributors of the collection to the Patriotic Fund, which amounted to $562.10 were Frank Dumont, a nephew of Gabriel Dumont of Reil Rebellion fame, and his two sons."

DEATH OF A TORONTO PIONEER

Riverdale, Nov. 21.—The death of Mrs. Matilda Miller in her seventy-fourth year, at the home of her son, Charles Miller, 794 Gerrard Street, east, marks the passing of one of the best known residents and pioneers of the district. Deceased succumbed to lingering illness of nearly two years.

Coming from Aberdeen, Scotland, over 40 years ago with her husband, the late Donald Miller, they settled in Riverdale, then known as Muddy York, where they engaged in the grocery business at the corner of Broadview and Mount Stephen aves. On the death of her husband twenty six years ago, the business was carried on by Mrs. Miller, who at that time, built some forty houses in the district.

Deceased is survived by five sons and four daughters—George, of Buffalo, N.Y.; William and Charles of Toronto; David of Pickering and Alex. of Peterboro; Mrs. F. Urquhart of Wilkensburg, Pa; Mrs. J. Brody, Mrs. John Scott and Mrs. C. Moore, of this city.

Mrs. Miller was a member of St. John's Presbyterian church, and until recently took an active interest in church work.

The fourth son of the late Mrs. Miller has been a resident of this city the past five years, the major portion of which time he was connected with this journal. He is now in business for himself under the [illegible] of "The Standard Press."

Russians Gain Big Victories Between Vistula and Warthe

Petrograd, Nov. 23.—It is now only a question of how many Germans succeeded in escaping, it is declared here to-day, in reports of fresh and important successes gained by the Russians between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers. The battle which has been raging in contesting the German advance upon Warsaw has resulted in the forward movement being checked, it is asserted. The German losses are said to be enormous. At Kutno, 25 miles west of Lowicz, 12,000 German prisoners were taken. ing between Czenstochowa and Another terrible battle is rag- Cracow.

The position of the Russian troops continues satisfactory it was officially announced today. The official announcements are now largely non-committal, however, as to the operations, and it is accepted that when the result of the great battle now being waged is known, it will be of decisive importance. Continued success is claimed along the Czenstochow-Cracow line. In East Prussia conditions are much more favourable for the Russian success than in the first campaign into this German territory it is stated here. The swamps and marshes which caused so much trouble in the first invasion, are now frozen, and bitter fighting is in progress in that district.

Washington, Nov. 23.—The German Chilean situation is increasing in seriousness, and the diplomats here would not be surprised if a war declaration by Chile follows recent events. It is now ascertained that the Germans have maintained a floating naval station of coaling ships and supply ships just outside the harbour of Valparaiso.

Salisbury Plains, Nov. 23.—The Prime Minister, Asquith, accompanied by his daughter, paid an unofficial visit here on Sunday, and in the course of the afternoon went over the whole four camps with the commander and conversed freely with several Canadian officers. He seemed to take particular interest in the arrangements made for social entertainment of the soldiers. The men soon recognized the Premier as he drove up in a motor and gave him a rousing welcome. He was greatly impressed with the appearance of the troops and spoke gratifyingly of their sturdy physique.

ANNIE LAURIE AT THE GRAND

The Royal Scotch Players presented 'Annie Laurie' to a delighted audience at the Grand Opera House last night. The company is under the same management as that which toured the great Scotch success, "Bunty Pulls the Strings," to which "Annie Laurie" is a worthy successor. The piece is prettily staged in harmony with the story, which is in the hands of a clever, well-balanced company, whose histrionic talent ranks unquestionably as high class. The presentation is a charming delineation of inherent Scotch characteristics, together with a sprinkling of religious fanaticism, the whole of which offers two hours of humor and pathos from the land of cakes and porridge and toddy. Every character is in exceedingly capable hands and interpolated with a realism that is quite irresistible. Miss Muriel Greasley, in the lead, "Annie Laurie," is touchingly emotional and faithful to her difficult role. Mr. Jas. H. Bacon's impersonation of the kilted Highland laddie is charmingly correct, and his broad Scotch humor positively contagious. In fact, the story and the people presenting it, are worthy of the most liberal patronage, and will be welcome in Peterboro again and again.

VERY MUCH OF A NUSIANCE

To the Editor of The Times,

Dear Sir,—The action of our City Council in attempting to place the sewage disposal plant—a nuisance of the first magnitude—right in the ground of the working men and their families, calls for the severest condemnation. Every labor organization in the city should take immediate steps to prevent this injustice, and should call to account those loud-mouthed champions (?) of labor on the council, who have been the most relentless in their pursuit of this scheme. Our wealthier citizens can go further afield for their pleasures, but the ordinary citizen who has neither the time or money has to seek his recreation nearer home. This accounts for the establishment of sixty-five motor-boat [illegible] one of the leading steamboat wharves. The Bankers' Club's summer home, numerous boat houses and beautiful residences, and River View Park, on the banks of the river in the immediate vicinity of this proposed nuisance. Imagine the [illegible] these subservient time servers [illegible] to the interests of [illegible] were they in danger of losing their summer homes. [illegible] for them, but, for the poor working man, anything is good enough for him. The water-front in the heart of the city was disposed off for a song, and now the last convenient stretch of river is to be rendered unfit for use by the erection of a sewage distillery.

Yours truly,
MECHANIC

CANADA'S MAILS STILL STAY OPEN

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—No objection is taken here to the Dernburg article in the Saturday Post. It is plainly labelled "Made in Germany," and is stated to be the third of a series. The first by Arnold Bennett, gave the British side, and the second by Clemenceau, gave the French side. It is pointed out that three other articles in the Post "The Man Who Rocked the World," "The Mine-Layer," and the Canadian article, are fairly obviously anti-German. Some objection has been taken to articles by the Post's own correspondent, Cobb and Blythe, because while not labelled, "Made in Germany," they are tinged with German sympathies. No action is to be taken against the Post.

DIVISION COURT CASES

Some 29 appeals have been listed before the County Judge against the decision of the Court of Revision in their recent sitting. The cases will be heard on Wednesday, Dec. 2nd, at 10.30 a.m. Mr. E. B. D. Hall will represent the retail merchants.

KHEDIVE OF EGYPT ONE WITH TURKEY

London, Nov. 23.—Fighting on the Yser front has stopped. Bruges reports that 50 empty trains of forty cars each are moving through northern Belgium in the direction of West Flanders. It is assumed these trains will be used to transport German troops to the Russian front. Bucharest hears of many arrests in Constantinople as a result of an attempt on the life of the sultan. Prince Yussof Izzedin, eldest son of Abdul Hamid, and heir presumptive to the Turkish throne, is suspected of being implicated. The Khedive of Egypt has definitely thrown in his lot with Turkey. He is now in Palestine with the Turkish forces there.

Turkish Port Bombarded

GERMANS INDULGED IN BIG GUN BOMBARDMENT ALL DAY SUNDAY

Considerable Damage Done at Ypres--Extraordinary Fierce Fighting in Argonne District--Brilliant Bayonet Charges by the Zouaves Who are Only Happy When Fighting Hand-to-Hand Battles

London, Nov. 23.—Percy J. Philip telegraphs to the Daily News, from "Northeastern France" as follows:

"The great bayonet charge by the Zouaves near Bixschoote of which you have already heard, was a particularly gruesome affair, for the Zouaves, like the Gurkhas, love the joy of a hand to hand battle. And it came at the end of three days constant fighting.

"They charged a wood, an officer told me, like a gale of wind, not giving a cry until they got within touch then they let out yell upon yell as they plied their bayonets among the dripping trees.

"The enemy were mostly first line men and met them like heroes, firing in volleys once or twice, then leaping out to the combat. The impetus of the Zouaves carried them through. They did not stop to kill. They dashed through the first time, killing only as they went, then they charged back on the broken lines.

"There were hand to hand struggles until ten o'clock that ended with both sides falling on the ground exhausted. Four of the Germans fighting together gave a terrible account of themselves before they died. Three of the four, were, I think, brothers, and they were brave soldiers."

Athens, Nov. 23.—Shops owned by Christians were sacked and three Christians killed by a large force of Turks at Trebizond, a message received here from Constantinople today, declares.

Trebizond is a seaport of Asiatic Turkey, on the Black Sea.

Ready to Sail.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 23.— General Funston cabled the war department today that all his troops would be on transports ready to sail from Vera Cruz at noon for Galveston.

Berlin, via The Hague, Nov. 23.—The war office today continues to confine its statements as to the fighting in the east to brief announcements that General Von Hindenburg's army was still engaged, with no decisive results having yet been reached.

BRITISH AVIATORS MAKE RAID ON BIG ZEPPELIN FACTORY

Basle, Switzerland, Nov. 23— The Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen, raided on Saturday by British aviators, has been turning out a giant dirigible every three weeks; this rate has been made constantly since the opening of the war, it is claimed. No greater hero has been developed by the war than Lieutenant Briggs, of the British Royal Naval Air Service, who was one of the aviators who tried to destroy the great Zeppelin sheds. A despatch received in London last night by way of Berlin and The Hague from Friedrichshafen, states that Lieutenant Briggs with his shell pierced the gasoline tank, setting it on fire, and then volplaned across the sheds, dropping many bombs as he glided to earth, then with his pistol fought single handed until he was felled by head wounds. He is now in a German hospital.

GERMANS ARE STRIPING ANTWERP OF ALL SORTS OF SUPPLIES

Roosendaal, Holland, Nov. 23.— I left Furnes, the Belgian headquarters in West Flanders on the 14th. At that time, owing to rain, snow and cold weather, the fighting had diminished. Accompanied by a guide I crossed the Belgian and the German fighting lines and reached Lichtervelde on the 16th. The German soldiers I encountered were mostly elderly men. Tremendous movements of troops were taking place, large bodies of infantry coming from Ghent. It was reported that 50,000 more were expected. The roads were clogged with traffic, and it was evident that there had been a terrible loss of life at the front. Trenches had been dug in the vicinity of the towns I passed.

House Wrecked Soon After Kaiser Left.

In Thielt, which I reached Nov. 17, I saw the residence recently occupied by the German Emperor and I learned from a good source that the day after he left, the house was destroyed by bombs dropped from a British airship. Five staff officers, it was claimed, were killed. I passed through Ghent on the 19th and found the town quiet and undamaged.

Reaching Antwerp Thursday I found the Germans were commandeering all food supplies and sending to Germany all the available stock of rubber, coffee, wheat, oil, and raw materials. One establishment which employs 4,000 workmen will close

GERMANS HAVE NAVAL STATION OFF THE CHILEAN COAST

Lima, Peru, Nov. 23.—It is declared here today on what would appear to be good authority that the Germans have been maintaining what is described as a naval station outside of Valparaiso, Chile. Here they brought together a number of vessels having on board coal and provisions.

Chilean papers reaching here say that the government is determined to stop these breaches of neutrality even at the cost of war.

CURE FOR SEASICKNESS

Important Discovery is Attributed to Dr. Fischer

Dr. Joseph Fischer, the well known heart specialist of Nauheim, in a Munich medical weekly claims to have discovered a method whereby ocean voyages will lose their terrors. According to his reports as the result of extensive experiments with sea sick passengers he found that an injection of atropin completely cured the worst cases. During a trip to New York Dr. Fischer made experiments on the way across the ocean to endeavor if possible to determine what sea sickness is and what causes it. He found that an injection of physostigmine produced the exact clinical symptoms of sea sickness, and that this was caused by an irritation of the vagus nerve. He then discovered that an injection of atropin paralyzed this artificial sea sickness. He immediately began experimenting with atropin in real sea sickness, with excellent results in the worst cases. Dr. Fischer says atropin is not dangerous and has no ill-effects.

STRENUOUS DUTIES OF INFANTRY C.O.

The "Old Man's" Responsibilities Heavy, His Pay for Services Light

The officer commanding a British infantry battalion, who is known as the O.C., C.O., or, behind his back, the "old man," receives $6.35 a day pay, exclusive of certain allowances.

His gross income is well under $3000 a year, and he is certainly not overpaid, for he must be exceptionally lucky to get command before he is forty, and his responsibilities are heavy.

The C.O.'s daily day varies greatly according to climate and other circumstances, but, as a rule, he starts work with "orderly room" at 9 or 9.30 a.m.

The "orderly-room" is the regimental police court, and, like those of a police magistrate, the C.O.'s penal powers are limited. He must investigate every charge brought before him, but in the case of serious offences such as desertion, he must either dismiss the charge altogether, reduce it to one of absence without leave, with which he has power to deal, or remand the prisoner for trial by court-martial.

The severest punishment the C.O. can award is fourteen days "cells," save in the case of absence without leave, when he can order imprisonment up to twenty-one days.

A "non-com." can be summarily punished by reprimand or severe reprimand only, otherwise he must be sent for trial by court-martial. The C.O., however, can reduce a non-com. who holds acting rank. Officers are subject to "wiggings" only, and the "Officer's call" is usually the precursor of the "rough side of the old man's tongue."

"Orderly-room" is usually humdrum enough, but sometimes there is excitement.

I remember one occasion when a man was marched in charged with a fairly serious offence, says a writer in Answers. Asked whether he had anything to say, he replied by kicking over the C.O.'s table. It was quite some seconds before the horror-stricken escort and sergeant-major recovered their presence of mind, fell upon the rebel, and carried him out fighting like a tiger. I don't know what they did to him outside, but when he was marched in again all the "kick" had gone out of him. Six months' "hard" was the subsequent court-martial sentence.

Round the Married Patch

After "orderly-room" comes "C.O.'s parade," that is if it is one of the appointed days, for the C.O.'s office duties will rarely permit of his personally commanding parade more than two or three times a week, except, of course, on manoeuvres.

"Papers" are the bugbear of the C.O.'s life. As there are only twenty-four hours in a day it is usually impossible for him to read half of what is put before him. Generally he has to trust to his subordinates, the orderly-room sergeant in particular, that everything is in order. Even so, merely signing his name will absorb three or four hours a day.

Of course, he has many special duties to perform.

Once a week, usually Saturday, he will visit the barrack-rooms for kit inspection, and on Sunday he usually goes round the "married patch."

There are recruits to be inspected before they are dismissed drill, and, if musketry is on, he will pay frequent visits to the range.

There are recruit officers to be examined, and once a week the C.O. lectures to and examines the officers as a whole.

He presides at officers' mess meetings, and, one way and another, his time is fully occupied. But his real work is unofficial.

He should be the "father" of his regiment, and, without prying, he should know everything that is going on in it. He should know when to administer that unofficial word in season which will pull an erring youngster straight.

As a rule, the C.O. is married, but if he is a bachelor his position calls for great tact, for then he lives among his subordinates. So far as possible he lays aside his rank in the mess, but at the same time he is generally responsible for the maintenance of good order and discipline.

The man who commands a battalion shoulders responsibilities and performs work which in civil life would bring him a handsome reward, but the C.O.'s expenses are such that he can rarely live on his pay, while at the end of his term he usually has nothing to look forward to but retirement on $2,100 a year.

NATURAL BASIN NEAR CALGARY

Immense Water Supply is Only Thirty-five Miles Away

That the citizens of Calgary have a natural basin with an estimated storage capacity of [illegible] gallons of water, enough to supply the city for an entire winter, only 35 miles up the Elbow river, was an interesting report made by Mr. A. W. Wilson Fawkes.

For some months Mr. Fawkes had a crew of surveyors and assistant engineers working out the data on a pipe line scheme and also a proposed filtration and pumping scheme as an alternative.

On a trip up the Elbow Mr. Fawkes inspected three feasible sites for the location of an impounding dam. The nearest of these for a pipe line is about 35 miles distant, and here the Elbow widens into a big basin with the immense storage capacity mentioned. It would be necessary to have a dam at this point 400 feet long. Five miles farther up the river and again three miles above this point there are other suitable sites. But, of course, the closer site, 35 miles up, has the advantage, when the cost of constructing a pipe line is considered. The upper sites would on the other hand be narrower and would not require as long a dam.

ADVERTISING A NATION

How Canada is Made Known Across the Waters

In the course of a lecture made by J. Obed Smith, immigration commissioner of Canada he said: "Because there is very little red tape in this department a great deal of responsibility rests upon the officials. While Ottawa controls the policy, the details, including expenditures, are worked out in London. Outside the British Isles we have agencies at work in Paris, Belgium and in the Scandinavian countries. There is a good deal of work required in advising and planning discipline for 4,000 booking agents who can be made into good advertising agents for Canada.

"In advertising Canada, the department of the Interior offers no apology, particularly in the old land, where there are fewer opportunities for farm laborers.

"Correspondence also plays a big part in the propaganda, for while it indicates publicity work, it is becoming most productive. So much information has been diffused about Canada that those writing are not content with one or two questions, but set out voluminous inquiries. This indicates that the enquirers have been reached by advertising, and they in their turn have led others to also seek information. Our department, while primarily concerned with advertising Canada alone, is also obliged to set out the advantages of each province. The policy of the department is not along such lines as to make advertising pay a government as well as a business firm.

"Our work is largely carried on by bringing before the public the advantage of farming in Canada. Our agents attend every show or fair, and distribute literature and also give advice to those requiring it. These results are most satisfactory, but perhaps our most effective work consists of carrying information to every town and village by means of motor and horse wagons. These are in charge of experienced Canadian officials, who stop outside schools, and having obtained permission from the teachers, address the children on Canada, although nothing is said about immigration. Later on we get good results from this campaign.

"Another important phase in advertising is that of giving illustrated lectures. Hundreds are given each season, principally in the winter, and afford us the means of getting into closer touch with the intending emigrant. The most valuable adjunct is the after meeting, when the people gather round and ask questions. We also endeavor to supply news items to the reading public.

"There are good and bad advertisements. The latter consist of derogatory letters and complaints from those who have not succeeded. However, Canada does not want the immigrant to fail, but, on the other hand likes to point to the successful settler as illustration of what can be done out here."

The Whirligig of Time

In place of the hitching post and the carriage stepping stone has come the gasoline filling station. In place of the livery stable has come the modern garage, and the old-fashioned roadside smithy has been turned into a modern automobile repair shop.

The motor car has brought many changes, but with the changes has come prosperity. The foundry that once turned out ornamental hitching posts with a horse's head, or a little iron negro jockey patiently waiting to hold old Dobbin's reins, is manufacturing automobile parts.

The gasoline motor has played its part in making the automobile the popular method of transportation, but without the pneumatic tire the motor car would be limited to improved city streets and boulevards.

Many Centenarians

According to official statistics compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410; France, [illegible]; Italy, 197, Great Britain, 92; Russia, 89; Germany, 76; Norway, 23; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 5 and Denmark 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 3,882 centenarians, and there are another 1,074 in Roumania and 573 in Servia.

The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the toughest bone.
The constant cooing lover carries off the blushing maid,

Week-End Summer Time Costume Hints

By Madge Marvel

[redacted]

WHAT clothes shall I take for the week-end visit? Shall I take a trunk? These two questions perplex many feminine minds during the summer months, when the week-end party is the favored form of entertainment.

The average guest arrives at her destination by the late train Friday afternoon or the early one of Saturday morning. She leaves Monday. She will not need a trunk. There are suitcases and bags with capacity for all needed garments.

The clothes required will depend entirely upon the manner of life in the house where you are a guest. In packing the suitcase the wise woman has this in mind, and tries to make her clothes fit perfectly into the picture.

If one arrives Friday night, there are three evenings to consider. There will be need for some attractive dinner gown, an evening gown if there is the usual dance on Saturday, and a suitable evening wrap, shoes and all the accessories. There should be a smart sports costume for Saturday morning, which will be suitable for tennis, golf or tramping. Also provision should be made for the motor trip, which is sure to be in the program, and a motor-bonnet and veil takes little room. Saturday afternoon there will undoubtedly be need for a light reception frock, which will grace the tea-dance, the lawn party or any similar occasion.

A gown suitable for church wear should be taken for Sunday. To specify: The travelling gown may be of taffeta in some dark shade, in plaid or stripe or check, with fresh, crisp organdie collar, which will be correct for Sunday morning. With this may be worn a cape-coat, which will serve for the motor trip or any similar occasion.

The gown for Friday night's dinner may be made to serve for Saturday's dance. If white lace be chosen, the underskirt may be worn Friday with a tunic and bodice of pale blue or pink taffeta or charmeuse with a rose in contrasting color stuck in the girdle.

On Saturday night the tunic and bodice may be of the lace with a girdle of yellow or mauve.

Saturday afternoon's frock will probably be some simple voile or batiste, and with it will be worn a large hat with flat trimming, which can be easily packed.

Saturday morning's costume may consist of a pique skirt and tailored blouse of linen with [illegible] effect, or girdle and collar of pique. It will be quite permissible to wear the same gown of Saturday afternoon or evening for Sunday night, depending upon the program arranged.

Three pairs of shoes will be required. Black dull kid colonials for travelling, for Sunday and for Saturday afternoon, some lighter dancing shoes for evening wear and a [illegible] pair of white duck or canvas for Saturday morning.

The evening wrap may be simple, a cape of charmeuse or a voluminous scarf being all that is needed.

TALES OF THE SEA :: :: By Michelson

Copyright, [illegible] by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

SAILOR MEN are notorious for tall yarns, so that it would be quite in good form that tales which might be told by any temporary sailor to any temporary sailor-ess should be regarded leniently. But you will say after a single glance that the tale that is being told in this case is not one that is at all in the sea-yarn class. Something SERIOUS is being said.

SHE is curious, too, and when you can get a girl in a lonesome corner of a big ship to listen to you seriously you have an important matter on your hands. Only the vagrant birds of the blue-green highway are noticing. No one else cares, because it happens every day.

What a difference it makes when tales of the sea are not ABOUT the sea at all!

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Coffee May Aid You and Harm Someone Else

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG
A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

[redacted]

DR. HIRSHBERG

A PRIOR of a monastery in Arabia discovered coffee as a beverage. This monastery was situated in a sylvan dell where coffee grows.

The worthy father observed that the goats who ate the coffee plant became brisk and alert, so he determined that his monks, who were more lethargic than they might be, should try it.

The experiment was successful, and coffee as a beverage came into general use.

Despite prejudices and opinions to the contrary, coffee puts both vigor and valor into a healthful man's muscles. The non-nervous individual, who drinks wisely and well of it, may smite the inert world as Moses did the rock, to see rich fluids gush forth.

Excess of coffee, to be sure, like too much meat or oatmeal, carries dire destruction with it. To gild gold, to paint the lily, to light the sun, or add colors to the spectrum, is to destroy each of these several effects. So with coffee. An intelligent drink, temperately and sanely taken, this bean of Arabia can upon occasion play havoc and high jinks.

Certain Concrete Facts.

Violent cravings lead to eruptive ends, as the electric spark explodes the harmless gases hydrogen and oxygen. Too much honey palls upon the lips and many cooks spoil the broth.

Prof. Hollingsworth, the far-famed psychologist of Columbia University, at great expense and trouble, last year subjected a squad of fellow-[illegible] to a series of brilliant experiments with coffee.

Without, as some ungracious doctors do, admonishing a steep and thorny way to coffee heaven; while like a puffed and reckless libertine he trod the [illegible] path of primrose dalliance, Dr. Hollingsworth obtained certain, indisputable, concrete facts about coffee.

In well persons who do not indulge in self-pity, who are not inclined to be nervous, sensitive and suspicious, he and his fellow-conspirators discovered that one grain of caffein—as much as is in a good strong cup of coffee—increases the power of exertion.

It adds to the strength and muscular skill. Physical capacity is augmented, thought is stimulated, the senses are more alert and the ability to associate objects with ideas, memory with things, words with thoughts are all conclusively improved. Moreover, the endurance of the individual shows a pronounced excellence for an hour or so after a strong cup of coffee is taken.

The Danger Line.

When, however, two cups, or more than a grain and a half of caffein are swallowed, Bedlam breaks loose in the candidate's muscles. Tremblings and tremors, shivers and shakes which last longer than those of a pneumonia victim, seize the textiles of your anatomy. In fine the foolish person, who drinks two or more cups of strong coffee at a time, is in a fair way to vibrate herself—women are often the worst coffee fiends—into an asylum.

—A surfeit of the sweetest things
The deepest loathing of the stomach brings.

From all these experiments it must be plain that coffee, unlike learning, is a dangerous thing when more than a little of it is drunk. It is, moderately enjoyed, a muscular tonic of the first rank, at least to eighty or ninety persons in the hundred.

To others it is taboo. To all an excessive amount is poisonous in the extreme.

Answers to Health Questions

W. A. J.—What will remove warts on the hands?

Bathe the hands in hot vinegar two or three times a day and paint collodion on the warts at night. To one ounce of collodion there should be added 10 grains of salicylic acid.

The Good Night Story

Princess Tabby Cat—By VERNON [illegible]

ONCE in the long ago there was a boy named Fred, who was the youngest son of a man that lived [illegible]. His father owned a great farm, but was undecided to which one of his sons he should leave it. So, one morning, he called his three boys into the study and told them that the one who brought him the finest horse should be his heir.

That afternoon Fred and his two brothers set out on their search. When they were out of sight of the house, they tried to run away from Fred, but Fred kept up with them. Next morning they succeeded, because they slept in a cave and they got up long before Fred was awake.

Fred felt very badly about being left all alone in the great woods. He did not know which way to go to find a horse. But, as he was walking near a brook, a Tabby cat ran up to him and said:

"Hello, Fred, you haven't found your horse, yet, have you?"

Naturally Fred was surprised to have a cat speak to him, particularly as that cat knew all about him without having to be told. Yet it was such a friendly Tabby that Fred stroked its fur and talked with it. After a while the cat said:

"Fred, if you'll come with me and serve me willingly for seven years, I'll give you the finest horse in the world. Is it a bargain?"

Fred did not know how else to get a fine horse, so he agreed. Then Tabby led him to an enchanted castle, where all the servants were cats and all the decorations were gold and silver. For a long time Fred had nothing to do except enjoy himself, but one day Tabby called and asked him to take a gold scythe and a silver rake and go out in the fields and cut the catnip hay. She said he must be careful not to lose the precious tools.

So Fred went out and cut the catnip and stacked it up in little piles for the cats to carry to the castle. Then Fred gathered up his tools and brought them back safe to good-natured Tabby, who was very much pleased. But she did not then give Fred the horse, and Fred did not say anything about it.

After a few years had gone by Tabby asked Fred to take [illegible] and to go out where the lumber was [illegible] and build [illegible] a house. So Fred went out to the lumber pile and [illegible] year building the house. When it was finished all the [illegible] Tabby and told Fred that it was the nicest house they had ever [illegible].

As the seven years [illegible] now up, Tabby gave Fred the finest horse [illegible] and [illegible] the coach to get the state coach ready to take Fred home.

When Fred [illegible] the wonderful coach he found a beautiful princess waiting [illegible] was Tabby, released from a wicked spell by Fred's seven years [illegible] service.

[illegible] to the farm with presents for Fred's father, and [illegible] they had treated him so badly. Of course, his father had to give Fred the farm, for his horse was the best in the world, but Fred gave it to his brothers. You see, Fred had everything that he wanted in all the world. He also had a kind heart, which is much better [illegible].

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 122.

Art and Debt.

[redacted]

LEONA DALRYMPLE

"I'M sorry," I said, after an electric interval, "but, Mary, I am not going to use this $50 for anything so foolish as an art course. You can do very nicely without Mr. Cassell, and he can do without you."

Mary looked hurt.

"Just what are you going to do with it?" she demanded.

"I'm going to pay up a lot of little bills. We've been running behind, as you know, and we're more or less in debt. Beside this will give me enough ahead to keep a check account. My salary was always gone so long before I drew it that it was silly to put it in the bank."

"What do you mean?" asked Mary. "I don't understand your horrid old banking scheme, Peter."

"I mean," I said, "that I shall deposit every single check in the bank. I mean that I shall put into operation a pet stunt of mine, that I've had ever since I discovered that money gets away from you so easily. Each month I shall give you $15 for yourself. No, on second thought, I can't do that, either. I shall do this: I, personally, will pay every household bill by check—it's an automatic system of book-keeping, anyway—and, then, whatever money is left at the end of the month, after every single bill is paid, you and I will divide evenly. That's fair enough, I'm sure."

"But—but," protested Mary, "suppose there isn't anything left? What then?"

"Well," said I, "in that case you'll do without it, and so will I. One won't suffer any more than the other."

"I—I think that's perfectly horrid," said Mary, almost in tears. "I'll never know whether I have any money or not."

"I never know now," I commented grimly. "And I do all the worrying. I'm through with that. I've asked you to economize, and you can't seem to [illegible] it. When I give you money to put aside for anything it just sort of filters through your fingers."

"But—but it comes out all right," put in Mary eagerly. "Didn't I use up the payment on your father's note for Christmas things, and then, Peter, he gave you the whole $50 for a gift. That's an awful lot of money."

"It's a lot of money," I agreed, "as long as you don't have your pretty fingers on it. Once you touch it—it somehow won't seem so much. No, I don't mean to be disagreeable, Mary. We've literally come to the end of the rope. I can't, and won't, have Dad putting his hand in his pocket to rescue me from financial muddles that I ought to have sense enough to keep out of. I make an excellent salary. My father and mother, and your father and mother began on half as much and got along beautifully. Why we can't do it is a mystery to me, but for a time, at least, I'm going to manage the purse strings and see how we come out. We made our biggest mistake when we took an apartment as fashionable as this, and we made a big mistake when we got the social bee in our bonnets." I said "we" merely out of politeness. I've never had the social bee to any violent extent. Mary has it badly, and she drags me with her.

But Mary wasn't listening to my lecture. She was waving at her mother, who had appeared in her front window across the street.

"Mother's waving a yellow book," exclaimed Mary suddenly. "Likely Dad's given it to her for Christmas—isn't he sweet?"

It may have been a reproach, and it may not—I don't know and I don't care. I'm getting a hardened soul. It's not exactly as sensitive as it was a few months ago.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

BANANAS form so important a portion of the average diet it is well to know some of the various ways of serving this delicious and valuable fruit. In addition to its other qualifications, the banana is one of few foodstuffs which is usually within the reach of every one, for the price does not fluctuate, and is seldom prohibitive.

Banana salad is a favorite with many who like fruit salads. It is simply prepared. Peel the bananas, removing all the inner white thick skin, and slice them lengthwise, roll them in crushed walnuts or peanuts, and serve with mayonnaise dressing on lettuce leaves.

Banana sandwiches are always a welcome delicacy with children. Slice the fruit in thin rounds, add a dash of salt, a sprinkle of sugar and a bit of lemon juice, and press between thin slices of buttered bread.

When it is desired to serve something out of the ordinary for a vegetable, especially as an accompaniment to broiled chicken, try baked bananas. Allow one banana for each person. Slice each banana once lengthwise. Allow for each banana a teaspoonful of butter melted in a tablespoonful of hot water. Arrange the halves of the fruit in a buttered baking dish, and pour the melted butter and water mixture over them. Then sprinkle with sugar and a bit of salt and over all squeeze the juice of half a lemon. Bake for half an hour in a moderate oven.

If it is desired to keep the flavor of the banana intact, [illegible] with a little syrup of [illegible].

Banana fritters may be [illegible] good or they may be [illegible] as lead, according to how they are made. If they are [illegible] and cooked in fat, they are [illegible].

[illegible] the bananas [illegible] through the middle and then cut each half across. Sprinkle them with powdered sugar and lemon juice and let them stand half an hour. Dip them in fritter batter and fry in deep fat which has been tested. Drain on paper and serve with [illegible] sauce.

Deviled bananas have more flavor than many of the other dishes in which they form the most important part. They are easily prepared in a chafing dish.

Melt a tablespoonful of butter, and to it add a tablespoonful of chopped red pepper, half as much chopped pimiento, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and a dash of salt. Then add four bananas which have been peeled and cut into four equal parts, and cook five minutes.

Sauted bananas are simply prepared and excellent to serve with cold meats for luncheon or supper. Peel and quarter four bananas, melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and half a cup of sherry. When hot add the bananas and cook until they are tender. Serve very hot.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have read with great interest the very valuable advice which you so kindly give to young girls. So would deem it a great favor if you would give some to me.

I have a gentleman friend who takes me out a great deal to dances, etc., and pays me a lot of attention. Whilst we are together he seems to think quite a lot of me, but there is one thing which puzzles me greatly. He never asks to come and see me either Saturday or Sunday evenings.

Do you think I ought to encourage his attentions? IN DOUBT.

WHY, you funny little girl you, how in the world can he ask to come and see you. It's your place to ask him. Didn't you know that?

If a man is dead in love with you he mustn't speak to you in the street if he's known you for years, unless you speak first, that's the rule. Foolish, [illegible] possibly; but not so foolish as it may look to you.

It is a woman's place to say "yes," you know, and a man's place to do the asking—[illegible] for a good [illegible] or a good afternoon.

The next time you go to a dance with your young man ask him to come and see you some evening, and see what will happen. [illegible] the skies will not fall at any rate.

Probably the poor thing is wondering and wondering why you treat him so heartlessly, and do not ask him to visit you at your home.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

Tricky Methods of German Officials

The resident correspondent in Berne, Switzerland, of a leading London daily, in a communication to his paper, published on October 30th, throws some interesting lights on the methods adopted by the German authorities to try and substantiate their oft-denied charges that the British and French armies in Europe have been using dum-dum or explosive bullets. This gentleman writes :—

"The Germans continue to hammer away at the dum-dum bullet question. As I telegraphed the other day the German Legation in Berne, and probably all German Legations and Consulates in every neutral country are inviting all and sundry to go and see the dum-dum bullets in their possession, which have, it is said, been taken from the French and British soldiers. The other day the German Legation here invited representatives of the various local papers to see these famous bullets. One of those who complied with the invitation in this case the editor of the principal paper, who, like every Swiss, knows something about bullets, informs me that after he had examined the bullets supposed to have been taken from the French he asked where were the English bullets, but was told that they had not yet arrived. 'As soon as we receive them, we will let you know,' was added; but this is now about ten days ago and he has as yet heard no word of the arrival of the English dum-dum bullets. Many Swiss daily newspapers, and, as far as I know, all their illustrated supplements, have been induced to public pictures (from blocks supplied free by Germany) of these celebrated bullets."

The Morning Post correspondent continues.—"The Journal de Geneve, as I also telegraphed, sent Herr Meyer von Stadelhofen, the well-known Swiss rifle champion—a world champion—who carefully scrutinized the alleged dum-dum bullets in the German Legation in Berne. I am now giving his report in full. On arrival at the German Legation Herr Meye von Stadelhofen was presented with a note emanating from the office of the Secretary for Foreign Affairs in Berlin, to the effect that in the pockets of the French prisoners, especially in the region of Schimmeck, Montmedy and Longwy, a quantity of steel covered bullets had been found, the noses of which had evidently been scooped out by mechanical means, and that at Longwy a machine had been discovered which obviously served for the conversion of bullets into dum-dum ammunition.

"Five bullets were then shown to Herr Meyer von Stadelhofen, who says: 'I noticed first that the transformation had been effected with the help of rudimentary tools, such as a file, a saw, or a puncheon; secondly, that of those five bullets no two were cut in the same place, the mark on the instrument having been sometimes nearer and sometimes farther from the nose of the bullet; thirdly, that the scooping-out was not done in the middle of the bullet; fourthly, that the metal had been newly worked, for the lead was STILL VERY BRIGHT (the caps are not mine). His conclusions, therefore, are that obviously these bullets were not altered by mechanical means, and that they were not altered at the time or under the conditions referred to in the German note handed to him. To put it plainly, the statements of this note are not borne out by the examination of the bullets, with which it was accompanied, while, to put it still more plainly, the famous dum-dum bullets were made in Germany, or at any rate were turned into dum-dum bullets there. Herr Meyer von Stadelhofen then asked whether the Secretary of the Berlin Foreign Office had sent the German legation in Berne any medical evidence testifying to the use of dum-dum ammunition, to which the answer was No, an explanation being added, about which an army surgeon's opinion would be highly interesting, that 'German doctors consider that it is virtually almost impossible to know whether a wound is or is not due to a dum-dum bullet, owing to the fact that modern bullets have such a rotary movement that they often cause wounds similar to those produced by dum-dum bullets, especially when they do not strike quite direct, as is frequently the case.'

"It is now generally felt in Switzerland that the whole charge of the use of dum-dum bullets by French and British troops is of a piece with Mr. John Burn's famous speech and Mr. Cornelius Vanderbilt's almost equally celebrated interview, so vehemently repudiated by him. It is very curious that on the same day as the Swiss rifle champion report was made two entirely independent statements should have also been published, both directly controverting the use of dum-dum bullets by the Allies. One of those statements appeared in a highly pro-Russian Swiss newspaper. The first and most valuable of them is by a well-known Swiss medical man, Dr. Haberlin, a member of the Zurich Medical Association, who has just returned from various German military hospitals in Arlen (Grand Duchy of Baden) and Ludwigsbur where he acted as a volunteer surgeon. Dr. Haberlin states that the most numerous, and also the least complex wounds are the bullet wounds, most of which can be treated in field ambulances and are quite cured in from ten to fifteen days on an average. Much more serious are the injuries caused by grenades or shrapnel, men hit by either being hardly able to bear being transported behind the firing line. Dr. Haberlin particularly remarks that he never heard anything of a dum-dum bullet wound.

The other testimony, which appeared on the same day as Dr. Hobberlin's, against the German assertion of the use of dum-dum bullets by the Allies, is that several Bernese ladies who were allowed to visit the German military hospitals in Freiburg-in-Brisgau. After giving a very interesting account of these hospitals, which can accommodate about 5,000 wounded at one time, these witnesses say: 'Verwundete durch dum-dumgeschosse kennt man in Freiburg nicht' — 'wounds caused by dum-dum bullets are unknown in Freiburg.'

"This account of the Freiburg-in-Brisgau military hospitals bear out all others which have come to my knowledge. No Swiss, whether a medical man or not, knows anything about wounds caused by dum-dum bullets."

GERMANS TO RESIST INVASION AT ANY COST

Petrograd, Nov. 23.—Via London.—The advance of the Russians into the Masurian region of Eastern Prussia, near Johannisburg and Arys, has revealed the extent of the preparations made by the Germans to resist invasion. The whole region is a gigantic fortress facing to east and to south in the form of a huge semi-circle, 30 miles in extent.

The spaces between the lakes which range from marshy ponds by the hundred to bodies of water ten miles long, are entrenched with wire fences. At intervals there are earth redoubts which are reinforced with stone work and protected by mine fields. Wherever it is practicable canals have been dug. Behind these canals lie German trenches.

At Arys, where the Russians are reported to have made a considerable advance in the last few days, they have been compelled to storm concrete blockhouses, resulting in some instances in heavy losses of life. Improved conditions in Galicia are indicated by the fact that communication by rail between Kiev and Lemberg was re-established yesterday.

Reports from Caucasia state that the Russian advance into Turkey is proceeding without serious resistance, although the invading forces are under fire from Turkish light artillery, located on the hilltops practically all the time.

CURES LAME RACERS

Frenchman Makes Use of Radio-active Clay Product

Foreign jockeys located in France tell of a new French treatment for all kinds of lameness due to bony growth thrown out by race horses on account of the hard pounding and continual strain of training and racing. Jockey Milton Henry says that George Cunnington Senior, the trainer of Nimbus, used this wonderful new treatment with great success. In fact such was his success on horses in his training stable that he undertook a course of it for his old enemy the gout.

This new treatment for bony excrescences, soft and hard, in race horses, is known as the "Bourad" treatment. It is based on a new and successful specific brought out at the instigation of Prof. Petit, who does not claim to be its discoverer, but is considered one of the authorities on veterinary treatment at Alfort College, in France. This specific differs from all lotions, blisters, liniments and embrocations in that it is a species of clay. It is one of the by-products from the residue after extradition of radium. It is said to retain some radio-activity, and to hold in appreciable quantities carbonate of lime oxides of uranium and magnesium iron and aluminum, thus possessing all those astringent qualities so keenly appreciated in cases of bowed tendons, splints, spavins, curbs, wind-galls, heated tendons and injuries to the suspensory ligaments or articulations.

Fred Burlew, one of the biggest of English trainers, tried the "Bourad" treatment and found it a valuable adjunct to his training stable. Prof. Petit claims that horses do not have to be stopped in their work or training while undergoing the "Bourad" treatment, and this claim is endorsed by Monsieur Chapard, one of the leading trainers at Chantilly, who is said to believe it will prove the long desired successor to the old-time and painful custom of firing horses for lameness.

PROFESSIONAL SPORT

It is rather a popular thing to decry professionalism in sport, and to assert that the disappearance of the professional would be a good thing for the game. No one familiar with sport would believe this. A sport or pastime might take the position of croquet or lawn bowling without professionalism, but a major sport could hardly survive without it, although polo might be thus classified, and polo is not a professional game. However, look over the chief games and sports of the English-speaking peoples. There is cricket, football, baseball, lacrosse, rowing, hockey, field and track athletics, boxing, wrestling, etc. All of these games or sports were conceived in amateurism, but gradually they became professionalized, and if professional baseball has hurt amateur baseball or professional football has hurt amateur football the fact has not been discovered.

The point is that the greater the public interest in a game, the more swift and certain is the development of professionalism. The public demands an increasing amount of skill on the part of those who play the games for which the public pays admission, and increasing skill means that the players must devote more time to practice.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

DESPERATE, ENEMY WILL RESORT TO ANY MEANS

French forces have captured the heights of Orne, near Verdun, and silenced two German batteries according to official despatches today.

Paris, Nov. 21—Reports today indicate that the Germans are about to try a new plan of driving the allies from their trenches in Flanders by sending down the Yser Canal and over the inundated areas, huge steel barges of burning oil. According to report, a large number of these barges have been constructed and a great supply of crude oil has been brought up. The intention of the Germans is probably to send them over the flooded district between Dixmude and the coast.

Fighting along the northern front was still confined to artillery fire today. There were signs of new activity on the part of the British troops from Arras, however, in the movement which has for its objective the piercing of the German line of communication.

The Germans are making a new effort over toward the east of the line to extend the wedge they have driven between Verdun and Toul at St. Mihiel on the River Meuse. At the same time, the French who have never ceased their efforts to envelop the Germans holding St. Mihiel, seem to have anticipated the plan and to have advanced a little from the north and south of their line.

Lively Air Fighting.

Vivid descriptions of the brilliant air fighting since the war began have reached here in chronicles of events in northern France. On the evening of November 18 four German Taubes at a great height soared toward the allies' lines. Two French and two British machines accepted the challenge and in diminutive speedy machines rose to the attack.

The eight pilots approached, bunching their machines in air, then flew apart, sweeping round in circles, rising and descending in an effort to gain the advantage. With these evolutions, lasting ten minutes, the eyes of the fighting men below centred on the spirited encounter while the mitrailleuses cracked from all directions without success.

Suddenly the allied aeroplanes fled, while the Germans pursued at tremendous speed, stopping too late as they realized their danger, when a shower of shells from hidden French batteries exploded around them. They were in the trap and in another five minutes their four shattered machines fell to the ground in front of the English lines, the eight fighting men they carried being instantly killed. The allied machines then volplaned to the ground and the air fighters [illegible] generously lauded with credit for skill and pluck.

A local lawyer remarked to the Times yesterday "The Kaiser issued invitations to his generals to a banquet in Paris on Aug. 22." Possibly Generals French and Joffre will dine in Berlin on Dec. 25th.

The First Regatta

June 23 was the date of the first British regatta, held between Westminster Bridge and Ranelagh in 1775, to which Dr. Johnson appears to have taken Mrs. Thrale. It was suggested by Lady Montague's description of a regatta she had witnessed in Venice. The only rowing contest was "a race of wager-boats," after which a procession of boats manned by red, white, and blue oarsmen rowed from Westminster to Ranelagh, where various festivities followed in a Temple of Neptune. Some of the 200,000 who attended seem, says the "Westminster Gazette," to have supped "not wisely but too well," for on the return journey "many accidents occurred," and seven persons were drowned.

CREDIT FOR FARMERS

What a Western Man Learned by Trip to Europe

The Canadian farmer suffers the greatest handicap in the world in the matter of facilities for borrowing money, said Mr. J. H. Haslam, of Regina, Sask., who went to Europe as chairman of a commission to investigate agricultural credits. While the Canadian farmer (presumably, the Western farmer) pays anywhere from eight per cent. up to 50 per cent. for advances, the European farmer with less land and a smaller investment can secure "almost any amount he may ask for" at from two to six per cent.

In France money is at the ready disposal of the farmer at a rate of interest ranging from two and a half to three per cent. In Germany he pays from three and a half to five per cent., in Italy from four to six per cent., in Belgium and Holland from three to four per cent., in Austria-Hungary four and a half per cent., and in Russia from four and a half to six per cent. [illegible] by the farmer obtains money as cheaply as or more cheaply than the banks.

Cross a Real Mystery

Leach Cross is one of the mysteries of the ring, says Jim Corbett. There is no denying he can fight when he cares to. Nearly all his battles have been over the ten-round course right in New York. At times his showing has been of a high order, and at others he has looked like a preliminary scrapper. Cross likes to meet the rushing, slam-bang fellows. He has a wallop, second to none, and knows how to use it on the fellows who tear in. Long experience has taught him that. But every time that Leach has boxed a clever man, his showing has been very ordinary, and that is the reason why he so frequently enters the ring at a good price in the betting.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

SAVING THE SEALS

Only International Agreement Saved Them From Extinction

Russia, England, Japan and America agreed to suspend sealing in the open sea for fifteen years and sealing on land for five years. The need for this close season is explained by George Archibald Clark:

Pelagic sealing proved very destructive to the herd. It respected neither sex nor condition of the animals found, and the catch fell principally upon the nursing females, which were taken upon the summer feeding grounds in Behring Sea; for when the migration route of the seals had been covered the sealers entered Behring Sea and lay in wait for the mother seals as they visited the fishing banks one or two hundred miles distant from the islands for the purpose of feeding. As a result of the death of the mother, the dependent young starved to death on the rookeries. In the fall of 1896 sixteen thousand fur seal pups died of starvation on the rookeries of St. Paul and St. George islands.

As pelagic sealing developed through the increasing number of ships, its catch grew from 5,000 at the beginning to a maximum of 140,000 in 1894; but this could not last, and with the declining herd the pelagic catch also began to decline. In the season of 1911, the last of the industry, the catch numbered about 15,000 skins. From the known catch of the sealing fleets and from conservative estimates as to animals killed but not recovered it is apparent that more than a million breeding female fur seals and a like number of unborn and dependent young were destroyed during the thirty odd years the pelagic industry has been in operation. The result is the depleted condition in which we find the herd to-day. Our best information places the number of animals in the herd in 1867 at between two and three millions. It numbers to-day about 220,000.

FREAK PLANTS

Trap and Devour Insects, Digesting Bodies of Their Prey

Among the strangest of all nature's products are the insect-eating, or carnivorous, plants. They actually catch, eat, and digest various insects by a process practically as thorough as that of the animals.

The so-called Venus "fly trap" or "vegetable butcher" is one of the most remarkable of them. It grows in a wild state in the forests of North Carolina, where it creeps along the ground, presenting thousands of gaping mouths, into which the unsuspecting fly or insect is lured and imprisoned.

The leaves of this plant consist of two valves, shaped like clam shells, which, when closed, form a trap. The ends of the leaves are baited with a sweet juice which attracts the insect. The leaves are covered with minute hairs, which correspond very closely to the arrangements of the nervous system in animals. On the edge of the leaves are rows of long, fine teeth.

When the unsuspecting insect has been lured to the leaf by the attractive juice he steps upon one of the microscopic hairs, and the two valves shut with a snap, keeping Mr. Fly secure.

Still more curious are certain plants in Borneo, which distill liquors for the purpose of luring their victims. Many of these are miniature grog shops. In their leaves are little pitchers, which are filled with hard alcoholic liquors. Each of the pitchers has a tight-fitting cover which keeps the dew and rain from diluting the liquor. No scientists have yet succeeded in analyzing the liquors with any satisfactory results, but it is evident that they are of different kinds, since different species of the plants attract different insects.

The most unique of all the productions of nature is the plant popularly known as the "goose plant." It is a native of Guatemala, and receives its name from the bud, which has the shape of a goose floating along the water with its neck proudly arched. The flower is very beautiful, but repulsive. It has an odor resembling that of decayed meat. The plant attracts the carrion fly, which is the agent of fertilization.

RAND HIGH-GRADERS

Precious Metal Stolen After It Leaves the Stamps

Most people have heard of I. D. B. (illicit diamond buying), a crime which in South Africa is punished with penal servitude on the breakwater at Cape Town.

The Rand, however, has the lesser-known offence of I. G. B. (illicit gold buying). Considering that in the Rand mines only a few pennyweights of gold go to a ton of quartz, it is obvious that the miner does not get much chance of stealing the precious metal. When does the gold thief get his opportunity?

The pieces of quartz are ground into dust by powerful hammers known as "stamps." Water then washes the dust over inclined plates coated with amalgam. The gold instantly combines with the mercury in the amalgam, afterwards being easily separated by chemical process.

It is of this gold-laden amalgam that the dishonest employe will scrape off portions which, though small, will mount up to a good bit of gold in time.

The claim which was made by ship owners and others, and which has been confirmed to a considerable extent by official reports [illegible] by the Marine and Fisheries Department of the Dominion, that the level of the river and Great Lakes is being constantly lowered, principally by drainage operations on a large scale, is to be thoroughly looked into by a Commission appointed by the [illegible] [illegible], which [illegible] at various points between Port Arthur and Quebec to make the required tests.

COSTLY ENTERTAINMENT

Enormous Sums Spent to Impress Khedive of Egypt on a Jaunt

The Khedive's tour through the Delta recently showed in a remarkable manner the wealth of the landowner in the provinces of the Nile. In many places private individuals decorated the roads over which the Khedive motored for distances of several miles. Coffee was served in cups worth $2,000; the chair in which the Khedive sat during brief visits to country houses had in many cases cost from $500 to $1,000.

One pasha who entertained the Khedive for half an hour is alleged to have spent $50,000 on the preparations, while another borrowed cannon from the Egyptian army and fired a salute as his Highness arrived. In many places the crowds were so great that the Khedival motor car was unable to proceed. Frequently the peasants kissed the car to demonstrate their loyalty.

Altogether the Delta had not witnessed such celebrations for a generation, since the time of Ismail.

Mighty Beer-drinkers

Judging from the consumption of beer at the annual "Maibock," when Munich's famous bock beer is brought out, the reports that the Bavarians are drinking less beer would seem to be premature, to say the least.

In the great "Hofbrauhaus" alone, whose beergardens are among the largest in Europe, the daily attendance of visitors averaged 12,000 and between them they managed to dispose of 6,000 gallons, an allowance of more than half a gallon for each person. About half of this was bock beer, and the remainder the ordinary Munich dark beer.

VARIATIONS IN MILK FAT

They Show That Cows Should be Tested at Frequent Intervals

Frequent experiments have shown that one single test of a cow's milk is not reliable as an indication of what percentage of fat her milk normally contains. A great many well known causes affect the test, also some causes that are unknown at present even by the closest students. This "variation in the test" is one of the puzzles of the cow's individuality, and because of these puzzling variations it is advisable to take composite samples at intervals so as to determine the average test.

Some interesting investigations at one of the dairy research stations in England, with [illegible] cows by [illegible] even covering each quarter as a separate test of [illegible] [illegible] three times a day, from the four quarters of the udder, show that while thirty pounds of milk per day [illegible] 3.5 per cent., the variation was all the way from only [illegible]-tenths of one per cent. up to nine and a half per cent. of fat.

This is clear proof of how misleading one single test may be. If the real earning capacity of each individual cow is to be computed, it must be on the basis of her annual production of milk and fat less the cost of feed; regular weighing and testing give that knowledge which every factory patron should have of each cow he keeps.

The Sheep Pays

Money invested in sheep will nearly double itself in one year, since the fleece will pay for the feed and care of the sheep, and the lambs, often two per ewe, are the profit. It is estimated that ten sheep may be kept where one cow may, and the risk is much less. It may be said that the sheep always carries her pocketbook with her. If she dies, her pelt or fleece pays her funeral expenses. If she lives, her wool in the spring and her lambs in the fall pay double revenue. No other stock pays as large a percentage of clear profit on the money invested. Nothing else will build up a rundown farm as quickly as a flock of sheep. While pasturing, the sheep's manure is distributed about so evenly that no manure spreader could equal the sheep in its work.

Poultry Industry

The value of the poultry industry to New Zealand was stated at a conference of poultrymen to be two millions sterling per annum, this sum changing hands for products, produce and materials in order to keep the industry going. The average price of eggs and table poultry was fully 50 per cent. higher than it was ten years ago. Five years ago they could count on one hand the number of persons engaged in poultry farming for a living. Now they could be numbered by the score. Farmers too, were giving poultry their attention, since they were realizing that the high prices received for eggs and table birds made the keeping of poultry a valuable adjunct to farm pursuits.

SIZES OF SILOS

Depend Upon Amount of Silage Required—How to Determine

The amount of silage required and the size of silo needed to hold it can be quite closely calculated provided the number and kind of animals to be fed from it are known before building.

An average cow or beef animal may be fed about thirty-five pounds of silage per day and the usual period during which silage is used in this latitude will be about 210 days. Large animals, or those that are being fattened, may consume considerably more than thirty-five pounds per day, but this has been found a fair average.

In a silo of ordinary depth, the average weight of the silage is about forty pounds per cubic foot. Near the top of the silo, however, where the pressure is not great, it will weigh only twenty-five pounds per cubic foot, while at the bottom of a thirty-five foot silo it may weigh sixty pounds. Taking these averages, if a cow eats thirty-five pounds of ensilage in a day, she will eat thirty-five fortieths, or seven-eighths, of a cubic foot per day; and with this as a basis it is easy to determine the number of cubic feet of ensilage required to feed a cow or any number of cows throughout the season. The diameter of the silo must be such that the stock on hand can use one or two inches of silage off the top each day during the winter and at least three inches per day when summer feeding of silage is to be practiced. This is necessary to keep the silage from spoiling.

A silo ten feet in diameter is adapted to feeding ten mature cattle. One twelve feet in diameter will feed fifteen head, and one fourteen feet in diameter will meet the needs of twenty head; but if there are thirty or more cows to feed a sixteen-foot silo should be erected. These silos should be thirty or forty feet, or even more, in height.—A. D. Wilson.

IMPROVED BROILER

Revolves on Pivot and Meat Can be Done on Either Side

An improved type of broiler for gas ovens has been invented. It can be moved up and down in the oven and turned about so that the meat is done equally on both sides. The broiler proper is pivoted to a framework that moves up and down in grooves on the inside end walls of the oven. By a lever outside this framework is operated. Like most broilers it is in two hinged sections that receive the meat between them. When they are locked the device can be revolved at will. A removable drip pan sets in the lower portion of the framework to catch the drippings from the steak, or chops, or whatever the meat may be. The advantage of being able to move the broiler up and down is that you can get it close to the flame or some distance off, according to whether you want it done quickly or slowly.

CAN BE MOVED UP AND DOWN

ORIGIN OF PAINTS

Ground up Mummies Furnish a Beautiful Brown Color

In order to furnish the innumerable delicate tints of paint required by artists, manufacturers have nowadays to ransack the world. Even mummies are called into use. Mummies are usually preserved in the finest bitumen, and this ancient bitumen has, in the course of centuries, turned the mummies a leathery-brown tint. It has been found that when the bitumen and the shreds of mummy are ground down by machinery, a beautiful brown pigment is the result—exactly the tint required for painting certain shades of brown hair.

Sepia is one of the commonest of artists' paints. It is a deep brown in color, and comes from a source equally strange. It is prepared from the black, inky fluid discharged by the cuttle-fish to blind and baffle its enemies.

Prussian blue is prepared from horses' hoofs, and is made by fusing the hoofs with potassium carbonate.

Raw sienna is soil from near Sienna in Italy. Burnt sienna, another common tint, is simply the same earth burnt.

The majority of pigments for making colors—that is, the dry powder—are obtained from minerals, but many pigments come from the animals kingdom. Cochineal, for example, comes from the dried bodies of insects. A kind of pitch is also used for certain pigments.

Our Friend the Cow

Of all animals the cow is most to be respected by man. She is more closely allied to him in her relations than any other quadruped, and in fact was brought across the ocean by him when he began to settle upon the American continent.

The most common name for a place in England is Newton, which occurs no fewer than seventy-two times.

CANADIAN DOCTOR WON MANY HONORS

Sir Thomas Roddick Secured Legislation Creating Dominion-wide Standard For Medical Men

Among the medical men who have won fame and honor in Canada is Sir Thomas George Roddick of Montreal, who rendered such eminent service to his profession by initiating the law which now qualifies its members for practice in any Province of the Dominion. Sir Thomas is a native of Newfoundland, was educated in Truro, Nova Scotia, and was a distinguished graduate of McGill University, Montreal, where he rapidly became famous as a surgeon and general practitioner. He was from 1901 to 1908 Dean of the Medical Faculty of his University.

His father left Dumfriesshire to become for many years principal of the Government School at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. During the rebellion in the Northwest in 1885 Sir Thomas organized the hospital and medical service for the expeditionary force, holding the rank of Deputy Surgeon-General. He is lieutenant-colonel (retired) of the Prince of Wales' Rifles of Montreal. He also saw active service during the Fenian raid in 1870. In 1896 he entered the Dominion House of Commons as M.P. for

SIR THOMAS RODDICK, M.D.

Montreal West, principally with the object—successfully accomplished—of securing legislation by which a medical man qualified in any one Province of the Dominion could practice in all.

Sir Thomas was president of the British Medical Association at the time that body in 1897 held its first annual meeting outside the British Isles, in Montreal, and was prominent in entertaining the numerous delegates and visitors. The degrees and honors conferred upon Dr. Roddick by other universities and institutions are too numerous to mention. It is sufficient to state that he received the LL.D. of Edinburgh University in 1898 and that of Oxford in 1904, and he is F.R.C.S. of London. As consulting surgeon to the Royal Victoria Hospital, to the Victorian Order of Nurses, and other charitable organizations and institutions, he has rendered invaluable service.

Sir Thomas married, in 1880, Miss Marion McKinnon, of Pointe Claire, Quebec, who died in 1890. In 1906 he married Miss Amy Redpath, the eldest daughter of the late Mr. J. J. Redpath, of the Manor House, Chislehurst, a member of an old Montreal family.

HOPE TO FIND COAL

Fuel Supply in Canada's Northland Would be Great Boon

There is under way a prospecting expedition to Hudson Bay, the main object of which is to investigate coal deposits in that area which can be utilized in connection with the operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. A supply will also be required for the steamers. At present all the coal that is required in connection with steamer traffic to the Bay has to be conveyed there by Newfoundland sealing steamers that are used for freighting purposes in the summer months. They are the only vessels available that can withstand the wear and tear of navigation in these northern ice-laden waters.

Coal for the needs of the railway construction forces is conveyed by train from Winnipeg and Le Pas as the railroad progresses. When the line is opened to Port Nelson and terminals constructed there provision for a large storage for coal will be made. Its cost, however, in view of the lengthy transportation from Cape Breton by water and from Western Canada by rail will be a considerable item. Hence the present efforts to locate coal deposits near Port Nelson.

Protect Young Timber

Mr. Clyde Leavitt, chief fire inspector of the Railway Commission, stated, in an interview, that the railways were doing everything in their power to prevent brush fires near the railway tracks from spreading. "It seems to me," said Mr. Leavitt, "that there is too little attention paid to the fires in the cut over areas, and too much protection [illegible] the merchantable [illegible]. If more effort were [illegible] to protecting the young timber it would give it a chance and [illegible] depending to the [illegible] when they are large enough for merchantable use."

If it gains headway you can't stop it from running into Catarrh, deafness, or serious throat trouble.

Catarrh spreads very fast.

From nose to throat it goes in a day. Soon the Bronchial tubes are affected—and before you know it, unless very healthy the lungs are hit, and it's too late.

While you have the chance, drive colds and Catarrh right out of the system.

You can quickly do so by inhaling the rich pine- vapor of Catarrhozone.

Catarrh is working will the healing fumes of Catarrhozone go in ten seconds.

No liquid medicine can penetrate to the deep recesses that Catarrhozone bathes with its soothing vapor—that's just why it proves so wonderfully effective.

The health-laden vapor of Catarrhozone cures the worst of coughs and hoarseness. The uttermost parts of the bronchial tubes are reached. Bronchitis is cured—every cell in the head, throat and nose is treated by Catarrhozone's wonderful fumes.

You can't beat Catarrhozone for huskiness, weak throat, sore nostrils, catarrhal and bronchial trouble of any kind. Get the complete $1.00 outfit. Smaller size 50c. Trial size 25c., at dealers everywhere.

The Bureaucratic Review

Speaking of the Czar's orders to stop the sale of Vodka, Russia's curse, the Review last night says: "The question is important in that it illustrates the advantages of bureaucratic government and the drawbacks of democracy." On Suspended Sentence.

At an "in camera" police court held yesterday morning, a former protege of the Children's Aid Society who came here from Apsley, pleaded guilty to having stolen a quantity of jewellery from a friend. Mr. Goodwill explained that whilst a hard worker, she has a love for jewellry, and hinted that with such goods she is practically a kleptomaniac. He asked that the girl be given a chance. The Magistrate gave the prisoner a heart to heart and uplifting talk about her action. She was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Yesterday's Police Court

At yesterday's police court Alexander Ross was charged with having been drunk. Alexander guessed he was guilty. He met a friend who was going to the war and had a few drinks with him. He asked ten days in which to pay the $2 fine imposed. The Magistrate answered "that's all right, we'll have you back here in that time." A local young man, now on the blacklist, pleaded guilty to having been drunk. The young man said he got his liquor in Lindsay. The explanation "went." A man named Costello, was fined $5.75. Michael Murphy, a blacklister, was charged with having been drunk. He pleaded not guilty. Mr. Murty, the Hunter Street merchant, said Murphy was very drunk on Nov. 19th. He took Murphy his brother, into their house and thought Murphy was going to die so they sent for a doctor. Murphy, in the box, said his falling on the street was due to the lack of liquor. He had had no liquor that day. Mr. A. Murty, recalled, said he smelled liquor off the accused. The case was enlarged until Friday. Inspector Stewart prosecuted in this last case.

DANDRUFFY HEADS BECOME HAIRLESS

Scalp Dries—Chokes out the Hair And Prevents its Growth.

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and thin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most if not all of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop and and your hair will be silky, fluffy, lustrous soft and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

British Warships Again Busy—Bombard Zeebruge, Where German Submarines are Being Put Together Latest Russian Victory Seems to be Decisive

GERMANS ARE FORCED TO RETREAT DECISIVE WIN FOR THE RUSSIANS

Official Confirmation of the Victory of Czar's Army in Poland--German Army in Retreat to South West--Russians Got in Behind Them and Inflicted Tremendous Losses

The news from Petrograd today indicates a decisive win for the Russians in Poland, where the invading Germans have been driven back. Unofficial reports assert that German forces appear to have been practically broken in two, one section taking a southward line of retreat and the other withdrawing to the north-west. The official statement, however, makes no mention of a retreat to the north-west. It is confined to the announcement of a withdrawal along the line to the south-west. The [illegible], however, appears to be most decisive and another great victory for Russian arms.

Meanwhile the Russian campaign to the north of Poland in East Prussia, and the campaign to the south in Galicia have continued, notwithstanding the pressure on the Russian centre, giving a striking object lesson as to the extent and strength of the Czar's forces.

London, Nov. 24.—An official communication given out in Petrograd according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch, announces a German retreat in Poland. The statement follows:

"Between the Vistula and the Warthe the Germans have retreated from the line running from Strykow to Zgierz, Szadek, Zdunska, Wola, and Wemka."

The line from which the Germans have retreated, runs from the north-east of Lodz, down past that town, and to the south-west.

Szadek is twenty-five miles southwest of Lodz. Strykow is twenty miles to the south, and west of Lowicz, and the remainder of the line then extends to the south-west.

A Decisive Phase of the War.

The correspondent at Petrograd of the Paris Matin says:

"The Russians, after having checked the German offensive, on the Plock-Leczyca front, gained on that side a brilliant decisive victory. The enemy, who had heavy losses, is fleeing with al' speed toward the German frontier. An entire German regiment surrendered to the victors. The Russians are energetically pursuing the enemy.

"The Russians are also vigorously attacking along the Czenstochowa-Cracow line. This day seems to mark one of the most important and perhaps decisive phases of the war."

German Army Broken Up.

The Times' Petrograd correspondent in a despatch supplementing one declaring that private advices received in the Russian capital had confirmed the reports of a Russian victory over the Germans in Poland, says:

"According to unofficial information reaching here, the German army of 400,000, which made an eruption between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers has been broken up into several parts, one of which was compelled to divert its course southward and another northward. Apparently in each case the Russian forces succeeded in getting behind these disjointed corps, and inflicted upon them great losses.

"The Germans are believed to have suffered very heavy reverses at Brzeziny and Tuszyn. It is impossible as yet to give even approximate figures."

VON HINDENBURG HAS MET WITH MOST SERIOUS REVERSE

London, Nov. 24.—Gen. Von Hindenburg's army, which last week was sweeping toward Warsaw in its second advance through Russian Poland, to-day is reported from Petrograd to be in retreat after having experienced serious reverses inflicted by the Russians, who, with reinforcements, made a brilliant stand between the Vistula and Warthe rivers.

While the extent and the completeness of the German defeat was not known here, the very fact that Gen. Von Hindenburg had been checked was by far the biggest feature of today's war news. The same despatches that tell of his reverses, however, say that the German reinforcements were being brought up so that another great battle is likely to develop on a line nearer to the frontier of Posen, where the Germans will have the same chance of renewing a vigorous offensive as had the Russians in the present instance.

Gen. Von Hindenburg has about 400,000 men, but if the Petrograd report can be accepted, they have been separated, badly cut up, and thousands taken prisoners, so these German forces will require reformation and rest after the severe punishment inflicted upon them following their daring advance into the heart of Russian Poland.

Accepting the official reports of the Russians as correct, the tide of the great battle in Poland has turned in their favor. How important this change is and to what extent it will influence future operations in the struggle between Russia and Germany was not apparent today.

The Russian War Office, whose statements were vague and non-committal for several days, when the tension was running highest and the Germans to all accounts, were pressing swiftly toward Warsaw, made today its first definite announcement concerning the crucial battle. It stated that between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers, the Germans had retreated.

THE RATE ON WAR RISKS LOWERED BETTING THAT WAR ENDS BY MARCH

London, Nov. 24.—Lloyd's is betting two to three that war will end by March first. The rate on risks up to that time had been lowered, despite the [illegible] reports of preparations for an invasion of England as well as stories that additional [illegible] are to be [illegible] into the [illegible].

Brussels Heavily Mined.

New York, Nov. 24.—"Every foot of ground in Brussels is heavily mined. The slightest sign of revolt by the people will literally bring the city crashing in ruin about them." This was the declaration to-day of Edward Allen Cantrell, a member of the famous Kentucky family, and lately a soldier in the Belgian civil guard. He has lived in Belgium for several years, and fought against the Germans in the Belgian trenches. He will return to Newport, Ky., as soon as his wife, still suffering from the shock of the experiences in Belgium, sufficiently recovers. The [illegible] had left his wife in Brussels while he went on a [illegible] to London. It was what he saw in bringing his wife back through "the thickest of the German devastation" that "filled him with a desire to kill the Germans."

German Forces Broken in Two By Latest Russian Victory

Dundee, Scotland, November 24, (Special Cable).—The whole countryside here is fully prepared for a German raid. The villagers in many coast places are ready to abandon their homes and retire inland at brief warning. It is difficult, however, to see what any raiding party could accomplish here, particularly since the entrances to the Tay and Forth are heavily mined. Scotland's Canadian friends need have little apprehension of danger here. My strong view, which I believe is supported by the most expert authorities, is that any attempt upon the Scottish eastern coast would be a most risky undertaking on the part of the Germans.

Scotland is responding splendidly to the call for recruits, excepting in one or two of the large industrial cities. In many Highland villages possible men have volunteered and gone. Tales of the deeds of the Black Watch and the Gordons are repeated in every home, and fire the ardour of the people to an amazing degree. The great losses of those famous regiments, so far from keeping the recruits back, stimulates them. One Edinburgh magnate, Sir George McCrae, is now raising a regiment of his own. Scotland is proud of what her sons have done at the front and the people here follow with particular interest any accounts of the Canadian Highlanders' Regiments in the contingent, feeling confident they will maintain the ancient reputation.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—"I have been asked to be neutral and I am neutral, when I say that all of the water in the River Rhine cannot wash the blood and shame from Germany's mailed fist."

This was the bitter comment against the German government today by Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N.Y., who is a delegate to the World's Bible Conference. His remark was apropos of the German devastation of Belgium, and of the general results of the war. Hillis declared that a democratic government, similar to that of the United States, would supplant the autocratic rule of Germany's crowned head.

A TURKISH PLOT TO MURDER GEN. SAM HUGHES FRUSTRATED

London, Ont., Nov. 24.—That the arrest of three Turks at a Wellington street house last Thursday night by Detectives Egleton and Down frustrated an attempted assassination of Major-General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, is the allegation made to-day by police authorities.

Letters found in the possession of the prisoners and interpreted by a Government secret service man, are claimed to be a direct indication that an attempt was to have been made on the life of General Hughes when he was in the city tomorrow.

Urged to do Duty.

One of the letters, bearing a Detroit postmark on the envelope, urged the Turks to "do their duty" and to not be afraid of "getting the man they had been instructed to kill." This same letter also contained information about "one of Canada's biggest military men" coming to this city.

This reference, say the police, is one to General Hughes' visit.

Another letter, turned over to the military authorities in Ottawa, and the contents of which the police will not divulge, is said to have contained information that definitely assigned the Turks to the assassination of General Hughes.

Details Discovered in Detroit.

Details of the plot, which was to have culminated here, first leaked out in Detroit. Secret service agents there are said to have sent out the first alarm. Chief of Police Williams admits this, and to the Advertiser says "It was information from the Government authorities in Detroit and Ottawa that lead to the arrest of the men. As soon as we had our instructions the detectives were assigned to the case and made the capture."

Since the arrest of the trio, in whose possession a military Ross rifle and a quantity of ammunition was found, the detectives have been searching for a number of other letters and papers, said to have been in the possession of the Turks before they were arrested.

ERNIE MARKS STOCK CO. AT THE GRAND

The old-time favorites with Peterborough lovers of comedy-drama and high class specialties—the Ernie Marks Stock Company—opened a five nights' and Wednesday and Saturday matinee engagement at the Grand Opera House last night, as customary, they played to good business and put up a clean and clever night's entertainment. This well-known and exceptionally versatile company was seen last night to commendable advantage in the thrilling drama of two continents, "The American Girl," together with several excellently handled vaudeville numbers. All of their repertoire are pretty stage stories admirably interpolated, and offer very acceptable dramatic, comedy and specialty presentations. We bespeak for the Ernie Marks Co. on this visit the same generous patronage as enjoyed by them on all previous occasions.

NO IMPORTANT CHANGES IN THE SITUATION IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM

Foggy Weather Handicaps the Belligerents in their Operations--A British Fleet Bombards Zeebruge to Good Effect--Roads are Frozen and Artillery Can be Moved With Ease

Paris, Nov. 24.—The official statement given out in Paris this (Tuesday) afternoon says that generally speaking the situation on November 23 showed no changes of importance.

The text of the communique is as follows: "Speaking generally, it may be said that the situation during the day of November 23rd has shown no important changes. Along the greater part of the front the enemy manifested his activity particularly by an intermittent cannonading, which, however was less spirited than on the preceding day. Nevertheless there were here and there some infantry attacks, all of which were repulsed. As we have come to expect, these attacks were particularly violent in Argonne where we gained some territory, and in the region of Four de Paris. There is nothing to report between the Argonne and the Vosges, and furthermore very heavy fog has interfered with operations. The sanitary conditions of the troops are favourable."

German Engineers Forced to Quit Work.

The Hague, Holland, November 24.—Some British warships along the coast of Belgium today got the range of Zeebrugge harbour where six German submarines are being put together, presumably for an attack on the allied fleet and the British coast. For some hours the position was vigorously bombarded, and the German engineers forced to quit work. It is not known whether any of the submarines were hit.

Paris, Nov. 24.—The cold weather has greatly facilitated the movement of artillery, both in the allied and German lines. The roads not completely inundated may now be passed, having become partly frozen. The cessation of the rain and snow has also enabled the allied ships on the coast to aid the troops with more regularity. Zeebrugge is reported to have been vigorously bombarded today by warships, several buildings being damaged.

LONDON UNDERWRITERS ARE SPECULATING ON END OF WAR

London, Nov. 24.— Brisk business was done at Lloyd's yesterday in "end of the war speculation," that the war would be over by March. There is a certain volume of opinion there that thinks the chance good. Enquiries in the city yesterday showed that last week 75 guineas per cent, was quoted for a policy under which the total loss would be paid in the event of the war not being over by the end of next March. The rate had fallen yesterday to 60 guineas.

On the other hand there has been an increase during the last week or or ten days of 5s to 7s and even 10s in the full war risk rates of insurance of private house property on the east coast. For big works such as the Tyne yards the rate has advanced from 10s to £1.

What is in the minds of a few underwriters who are speculating on the duration of war is a secret, but the question of Germany's supplies is being much talked about in this city.

ILL-CLAD BELGIAN WOMEN STAND IN SNOW, AWAIT FOOD

London, Nov. 24.—A story of the terrible sufferings of homeless Belgians was received here today by the Belgian Relief Commission in a message from a representative of the Christian Herald, of New York, now at Rotterdam.

"At Antwerp one thousand scantily clad women stood in the snow and the cold awaiting food," the message stated. "At Malines, so acute was the suffering from hunger of old men and women, that they chewed our hands ravenously, necessitating the use of peroxide to prevent infection."

SOLDIERS' LETTERS

To the Editor of The Times.

Sir,—Yesterday I went to the post office to mail a letter to my son who is now, I believe, at Salisbury Plains. At any rate my boy has gone to risk his life for Canada and the British Empire. I found I had to pay full postage on my letter. I think, if this matter were brought to the attention of the Postmaster General, he would realize that letters from mothers and wives of soldiers, now at, or on their way to the front, should go free. We women have hard enough times now without paying postage on our men's letters addressed to the Front.

Peterboro' Mother.

A SMOOTH, WHITE SKIN THAT DEFIES WEATHER

During the coming months of biting winds and intense cold you who would keep your skin smooth, white and velvety should turn your attention to mercolized wax. Nothing else will so effectively remove a chapped, roughened or discolored surface. By gradually absorbing the weather-beaten cuticle, the complexion is kept in perfect condition, and even the beauty of expression appears more pronounced. If your skin is blotchy, pimply, freckled, sallow, coarse, or over-red, why not shed it? One ounce of mercolized wax, to be had at any druggist's, will completely transform the most unsightly complexion in less than a fortnight. Use the wax nightly, like cold cream, washing it off mornings.

If weather, age, or poor health has marred your face with wrinkles, here's good news. You can quickly remove every line by using a harmless, refreshing face lotion prepared by dissolving 1 oz. of powdered saxolite in ½ pint of witch hazel. The firmer, smoother skin, the more youthful appearance, even after one application, will astonish you.

STRENUOUS DUTIES OF INFANTRY C.O.

The "Old Man's" Responsibilities Heavy, His Pay For Services Light

The officer commanding a British infantry battalion, who is known as the O.C., C.O., or, behind his back, the "old man," receives $6.35 a day pay, exclusive of certain allowances. His gross income is well under $2500 a year, and he is certainly not overpaid, for he must be exceptionally lucky to get command before he is forty, and his responsibilities are heavy.

The C.O.'s daily day varies greatly according to climate and other circumstances, but, as a rule, he starts work with "orderly room" at 9 or 9.30 a.m.

The "orderly-room" is the regimental police court, and, like those of a police magistrate, the C.O.'s penal powers are limited. He must investigate every charge brought before him, but in the case of serious offences such as desertion, he must either dismiss the charge altogether, reduce it to one of absence without leave, with which he has power to deal, or remand the prisoner for trial by court-martial.

The severest punishment the C.O. can award is fourteen days "cells," save in the case of absence without leave, when he can order imprisonment up to twenty-one days.

A "non-com." can be summarily punished by reprimand or severe reprimand only, otherwise he must be sent for trial by court-martial. The C.O., however, can reduce a non-com. who holds acting rank. Officers are subject to "wiggings" only, and the "Officer's call" is usually the precursor of the "rough side of the old man's tongue."

"Orderly-room" is usually humdrum enough, but sometimes there is excitement.

I remember one occasion when a man was marched in charged with a fairly serious offence, says a writer in Answers. Asked whether he had anything to say, he replied by kicking over the C.O.'s table. It was quite some seconds before the horror-stricken escort and sergeant-major recovered their presence of mind, fell upon the rebel, and carried him out fighting like a tiger. I don't know what they did to him outside, but when he was marched in again all the "kick" had gone out of him. Six months' "hard" was the subsequent court-martial sentence.

Round the Married Patch

After "orderly-room" comes "C.O.'s parade," that is if it is one of the appointed days, for the C.O.'s office duties will rarely permit of his personally commanding parade more than two or three times a week, except, of course, on manoeuvres.

"Papers" are the bugbear of the C.O.'s life. As there are only twenty-four hours in a day it is usually impossible for him to read half of what is put before him. Generally he has to trust to his subordinates, the orderly-room sergeant in particular, that everything is in order. Even so, merely signing his name will absorb three or four hours a day.

Of course, he has many special duties to perform.

Once a week, usually Saturday, he will visit the barrack-rooms for his inspection, and on Sunday he usually goes round the "married patch."

There are recruits to be inspected before they are dismissed drill, and, if musketry is on, he will pay frequent visits to the range.

There are recruit officers to be examined, and once a week the C.O. lectures to and examines the officers as a whole.

He presides at officers' mess meetings, and, one way and another, his time is fully occupied. But his real work is unofficial.

He should be the "father" of his regiment, and, without prying, he should know everything that is going on in it. He should know when to administer that unofficial word in season which will pull an erring youngster straight.

As a rule, the C.O. is married, but if he is a bachelor his position calls for great tact, for then he lives among his subordinates. So far as possible he lays aside his rank in the mess, but at the same time he is generally responsible for the maintenance of good order and discipline.

The man who commands a battalion shoulders responsibilities and performs work which in civil life would bring him a handsome reward, but the C.O.'s expenses are such that he can rarely live on his pay, while at the end of his term he usually has nothing to look forward to but retirement on $1,100 a year.

Chile raises its best tobacco with seed obtained from Cuba.

Sweet oil, followed by rubbing with a dry cloth, will cleanse brass beds.

NATURAL BASIN NEAR CALGARY

Immense Water Supply is Only Thirty-five Miles Away

That the citizens of Calgary have a natural basin with an estimated storage capacity of 500,000,000 gallons of water, enough to supply the city for an entire winter, only 35 miles up the Elbow river, was an interesting report made by Mr. A. W. Ellison Fawkes.

For some months Mr. Fawkes had a crew of surveyors and assistant engineers working out the data on a pipe line scheme and also a proposed filtration and pumping scheme as an alternative.

On a trip up the Elbow Mr. Fawkes inspected three feasible sites for the location of an impounding dam. The nearest of these for a pipe line is about 35 miles distant, and here the Elbow widens into a big basin with the immense storage capacity mentioned. It would be necessary to have a dam at this point 400 feet long. Five miles farther up the river and again three miles above this point there are other suitable sites. But, of course, the closer site, 35 miles up, has the advantage, when the cost of constructing a pipe line is considered. The upper sites would on the other hand be narrower and would not require as long a dam.

ADVERTISING A NATION

How Canada is Made Known Across the Waters

In the course of a lecture made by J. Obed Smith, immigration commissioner of Canada he said: "Because there is very little red tape in this department a great deal of responsibility rests upon the officials. While Ottawa controls the policy, the details, including expenditures, are worked out in London. Outside the British Isles we have agencies at work in Paris, Belgium and in the Scandinavian countries. There is a good deal of work required in advising and planning discipline for 4,000 booking agents who can be made into good advertising agents for Canada.

"In advertising Canada, the department of the Interior offers no apology, particularly in the old land, where there are fewer opportunities for farm laborers.

"Correspondence also plays a big part in the propaganda, for while it indicates publicity work, it is becoming most productive. So much information has been diffused about Canada that those writing are not content with one or two questions, but put out voluminous inquiries. This indicates that the enquirers have been reached by advertising, and they in their turn have led others to also seek information. Our department, while primarily concerned with advertising Canada alone, is also obliged to set out the advantages of each province. The policy of the department is set along such lines as to make advertising pay a government as well as a business firm.

"Our work is largely carried on by bringing before the public the advantage of farming in Canada. Our agents attend every show or fair, and distribute literature and also give advice to those requiring it. These results are most satisfactory, but perhaps our most effective work consists of carrying information to every town and village by means of motor and horse wagons. These are in charge of experienced Canadian officials, who stop outside schools, and having obtained permission from the teachers, address the children on Canada, although nothing is said about immigration. Later on we get good results from this campaign.

"Another important phase in advertising is that of giving illustrated lectures. Hundreds are given each season, principally in the winter, and afford us the means of getting into closer touch with the intending emigrant. The most valuable adjunct is the after meeting, when the people gather round and ask questions. We also endeavor to supply news items to the reading public.

"There are good and bad advertisements. The latter consist of derogatory letters and complaints from those who have not succeeded. However, Canada does not want the immigrant to fail, but, on the other hand likes to point to the successful settler as illustration of what can be done out here."

The Whirligig of Time

In place of the hitching post and the carriage stepping stone has come the gasoline filling station. In place of the livery stable has come the modern garage, and the old-fashioned roadside smithy has been turned into a modern automobile repair shop.

The motor car has brought many changes, but with the changes has come prosperity. The foundry that once turned out ornamental hitching posts with a horse's head, or a little iron negro jockey patiently waiting to hold old Dobbin's reins, is manufacturing automobile parts.

The gasoline motor has played its part in making the automobile the popular method of transportation, but without the pneumatic tire the motor car would be limited to improved city streets and boulevards.

Many Centenarians

According to official statistics compiled in Germany, the number of centenarians in Europe is far greater than is generally imagined. Spain possesses 410; France, 213; Italy, 197; Great Britain, 93; Russia, 89; Germany, 76; Norway, 23; Sweden, 10; Belgium, 5 and Denmark 2. Switzerland has none. The Balkan States hold the record. In Bulgaria alone there are no fewer than 3,883 centenarians, and there are another 1,074 in Roumania and 573 in Servia.

Is the Modern Woman on a Marriage Strike?

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

[redacted]

Winifred Black

MRS. RHETA CHILDE DORR says that women are going on a marriage strike—unless immorality among men is eradicated.

There's nothing wrong with that statement, Mrs. Dorr—except this: Women are not going on a marriage strike unless the men behave—they've gone.

Twenty years ago every girl who graduated from high school or from the convent wanted to be married, or at least engaged to be married, before she'd been out of school a year.

Forty years ago every unmarried woman over 30 had to be prepared to give an account of herself to any one who cared to ask. She was a freak—and she knew it—and nobody tried to keep her from knowing it in the least.

Today the intelligent girl who marries before she is 22 is the—"freak."

I spent the Christmas vacation with a lot of young people home from various schools for a good time.

Some of them were clever and some of them were stupid, some of them were sensible and some were silly. They all liked to have what they called "a good time," but every one of them was scared blue at the idea of falling seriously in love. We talked about it one day, some of the girls and I.

"Love," said one of the girls—and she was the prettiest one of the lot, too—"no, thank you, not for me. I saw my aunt die by inches because she loved my uncle—and my uncle treated her as seven out of ten men seem to treat their wives.

"He gave her a fine home and a limousine and plenty of good clothes—and we all knew all the time about The Other Woman.

"We couldn't help it. I'd rather die than care enough for any man on earth to let him treat me like that."

Faith and Public Opinion.

"No love for mine," said a Smith College girl. "A home some day, yes—an establishment, a place of my own in the world—a husband—and children. I shan't marry a man unless I respect him, but I do hope I shall never be fool enough to fall so dead in love with a man that I couldn't live without him, even if he did act like a cruel fool."

"Marriage," said the boarding school girl, "I suppose so. Nobody seems to be able to get out of it—for long. Mother says it's a necessary evil."

And so the talk went, and they meant it—every word of it, those little, soft-eyed, round-cheeked, slender things not long out of their mothers' arms.

That's what comes, ladies and gentlemen, of allowing women to learn to read and write.

The modern woman is not going to live with the man who is unfaithful to her—and let's her know it. Public opinion will not let her do it.

It used to take pride to make a woman stay with a man, even when she knew that he was dead in love with some one else—and didn't care whether she knew it or not. Now it is her pride that makes her leave him.

I do not, for myself, agree with this point of view. To me love is just one of the things in marriage—the most important thing, to be sure—but only one thing after all.

There is the home; there are the children; there is the whole structure of the family. I do not see that it is right to tear all these things down just to try to be "free" and "happy" yourself.

Happiness is not the only word in the dictionary of life. Way up in the first volume there's a little word called Duty that seems to me to mean a good deal—after all.

Women are too much like men—these days—and I confess I do not quite see where, in the new scheme of things, the children are going to come out. Or the family—or the home.

Gone Because Unappreciated.

It is not important that Mrs. Mary Smith is a happy woman. It is important that she is a good woman, and that she keeps the flame burning on the hearth at home. But the modern woman will not keep that flame burning—alone.

I believe that the women who would win the higher and the nobler type of woman. But, gentlemen, you didn't appreciate her—and she's going so fast that in another generation she'll be a tradition—and a tradition alone—like the [illegible] after the wedding out in Wisconsin [illegible] years ago.

The new girl isn't half so sweet and, perhaps, half so good and noble as her old-fashioned mother—but she is the girl of the period. And if you live in this period you've got to live with her—or without her completely.

Between you and me, I'm afraid we women have the best of the bargain. A woman can live without a man a great deal easier than a man can live without a woman.

A woman can make a home out of a hall bedroom and an oil heater—and a man can't even make a home out of the finest club that was ever founded—and in the human heart there is planted deep a love and a longing for home that nothing on earth will ever supplant.

If you want a home, Mr. Man, you will have to have a wife. And if you want to keep a wife these days you'll have to behave yourself.

Mrs. Rheta Childe Dorr says so—and the only thing wrong about her statement is that she should have made it in the present tense—instead of the future.

It is a condition, gentlemen—and not a theory—that confronts us. Dear me, how serious it does begin to look—to some people!

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have a friend who lives in a village not far from a great city. She has few gentlemen friends, but is very fond of society, and she likes to go to all of the entertainments, but is especially fond of the theatre.

Now, there is a young gentleman with whom she is acquainted who has an automobile, but who is very [illegible].

She believes that he would take her [illegible] or would go with her to the city to attend the theatre if she [illegible] him. She hesitates, however, [illegible] ask him, because she thinks [illegible] would be improper. She has asked me [illegible] advice, and I am at a loss what [illegible].

Will you kindly [illegible] whether or not my friend [illegible] the [illegible] did ask [illegible]?

QUERY.

NO, Query, she [illegible] to take the initiative [illegible] gentleman. [illegible]

[illegible] asked you? Is he deaf and dumb, or only tongue-tied? Can't he even speak the sign language, and, say, why not a letter?

Now listen, little girl, and listen hard; you need to hear what I'm going to say. If that man wants to take you automobiling, or to the theatre, or to a tango party, or to a prayer meeting, he'll ask you, all right. You won't have to tell him how. Let him alone, poor wretch, let him alone.

Don't make his life such a burden to him that he's afraid to drive his own automobile down the street for fear some goose of a girl is going to throw herself in the path and get killed just to make him pay some attention to her.

Why do you think he is bashful? He isn't bashful, he's just busy—and, besides, he's afraid of you. I should think he would be.

If you want to go to the theatre why don't you buy some matinee tickets and go? Don't throw away your own self-respect just for an automobile ride and a theatre ticket.

It wouldn't pay, my dear, it wouldn't pay—it never, never does.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from [illegible] readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

NOVELTY IS BEAUTY'S GOAL

Clothes That Startle by Their Originality, Yet Please the Critical Eye, Are Fine Art

"THERE is a philosophy of clothes, I have been told," smiled Ethel Aromita Kelly from the easy chair in her cosey room, "but I know nothing about that.

"All I know is this one thing: a girl who wants to look pretty enough to be remembered must study, not the prevailing fashion, save as a guide, but her own little self. Mere prettiness in an ordinary dress is soon forgotten, but in a gown that is startlingly original, yet pleasing to the eye, it will long be remembered.

"I always make my own clothes—yes, economy is a big factor—but a greater factor is the opportunity it gives me to make the most of what pleasing lines I possess. I follow the fashion up to a certain point, but there I turn aside and twist it to some original novelty. In the costume I wear in 'The Passing Show' I think I achieved a stage novelty.

"After all, the great thing is novelty, isn't it? It is the everlasting goal of life and art—and clothes."

Slimness by the Bran Muffin Diet

By LUCREZIA BORI

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York.

Special arrangements have been made with Senorita Lucrezia Bori, the famous prima donna soprano, who has created a wonderful impression in Europe and New York on account of her remarkable beauty and artistic attainment, to write for this paper a series of articles on beauty. There is probably no authority her equal in giving the newest and most approved methods of attaining and preserving "the divine right of woman."

LUCREZIA BORI

THIRTY-TWO pounds in six months!" exclaimed a friend whom I met recently and gazed at in astonishment, for there didn't seem to be half as much of her as when I saw her last. "Thirty-two pounds of useless, tiring, disfiguring, annoying, embarrassing fat!" she continued. "And oh, the difference to me! Any woman with a will can lose her excess weight. But it takes time, patience and perseverance."

She gave me the "cure" which had worked such wonders for her, for one of the remarkable things about her reduction is that she looks younger, fresher, less wrinkled than when she was so plump.

It seems to me that, in telling what her cure requires of the patient, she omitted to mention [illegible] I contend that any woman who eats a [illegible] water. Stay until you feel that you have opened the pores, and then wrap yourself, without drying, in a wool bathrobe and jump into bed, pile on a lot of clothes and stay there until you feel as if you were in a sea. Under the clothes rub your body during the sweating process. Begin the cooling off with great care, for there is danger of taking cold.

My friend's husband declares the plan followed is the same used when cooling off a race horse after the race. The clothes are lightened very slowly, one cover at a time, until the temperature of the body seems normal. Then the patient is rubbed down with a preparation of alcohol, salt and camphor.

This rub-down compound is made with a pint of alcohol in which is dissolved an ounce of camphor gum and two tablespoonfuls of salt, then add a pint of water.

"The entire secret of flesh reduction," said my friend, "lies in taking out all the starches and sweets of the diet, and burning up the [illegible] adipose, replacing it with good natural tissue. Fat is simply a disease, and is becoming recognized as such by medical men. It may lead to all [illegible] serious physical ills. But I [illegible] sample of what may be done in the way of reduction. I can say with a clear conscience women can weigh whatever she wills."

THE man who takes up his residence near his mother-in-law is a fool. I'm learning that more and more every day. If Mary is excited and pleased about anything she runs across the street to tell her mother; if she's at all disturbed [illegible] does the same. Some day, when I have more time than optimism, I'm going to write a stirring jeremiad on the evils of dwelling near your kin.

The young husband and wife need considerable time for soul adjustment unless [illegible] and I are not. And the proximity of any relative with an aptitude to give advice complicates things considerably. At the risk of being dubbed a [illegible]

You can see too much of your relatives and your in-laws! I'm learning that bitter fact, too. And when you see so much of each other and know every petty detail of each other's existence it leaves nothing very stirring to talk about. If you're three blocks away, or, better still, three miles, you look forward with absolute pleasure to your visits, and have a lot to talk about. You get the troubles in a lump and you worry about them in a lump. You don't hear some trifling mishap every day, as I [illegible] do.

[illegible] it's something like this:

"Peter, isn't it a pity, mother's down with one of her headaches, and it's the maid's day out. Were you coming home for lunch?"

"I did think of it," I venture.

"Well, you'd better not, for I'll have to run over there and do some of her work for her, and you'd better get your lunch down town."

And I depart with the pleasant reflection that [illegible]

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Emotion, Not Reason, Rules the People's Will

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

[redacted]

DR. HIRSHBERG

NOT one lawyer, physician, clergyman, financier, or, for that matter, any man or woman, bases his or her actions, reasonable though these be, upon any logical thought.

The object of the Bonapartes of the law, the pulpiteer or of any one who tries to influence others, is not to put facts and philosophy without flaws before the world, but to touch some common chord with which to elicit attention, sympathy, interest and power.

In fine, when the public are greeted by any so-called leader, writer, or other influential person, the supremacy of the latter depends more upon the agreement of the auditors' minds with the protagonist's words than on the mass of facts presented.

To most persons, in reality, the question with reference to a statement is not, "Is it the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?" but, rather, Does it please, and coincide with their sentiments, feelings and previous impressions.

Mental Life a Balance.

The punch and vigor of the cold blooded facts of logic may smooth the path for, but it does not incite, agreement with the proposed views.

Certain procedures or courses of action, really due to emotion, may need the justification of reason, but it is the emotion that honestly does the business. The causes of intellectual action, according to Dr. Ralph H. Vincent, eminent as a psychologist, are purely emotional. Facts are not factors of emotion.

Mental life is an elaborate balance between ideas, reflections, sentiments and facts. No single act is strictly the result of facts, emotions or ideas.

Any impression made upon your feelings leads the intellect to influence your actions. The things done, or thought, are the consequences more of the emotions aroused than of the facts presented.

Hypnotism, salesmanship, advertising, spell-binding, pulpit-pounding, the healing art and all sorts of conditions of suggestion depend for strength and efficiency less upon the number of the facts presented than upon the susceptible emotions excited.

Fatigue, sleep, even the infectiousness of indolence, a slight "cold," injuries, friendships, confidences, mutual interests all suspend in a fashion the powers of motion, of sense and of tissue and thought resistance.

The state of reverie by day and the dreaming attitude at night find their counterparts in the hypnotic state. Sleep walking and somnambulism are degrees of both conditions.

Unconscious Will Power.

The sleep walker clearly sees his way as he passes by, but he does not understand words or persons seen. He is awake only to perform one isolated act. Dr. Carpenter explains how, if words are in reference to the subject in hand, they do understand.

A young lady at school frequently talked in her sleep. If encouraged by questions connected with the talk she soon disclosed all her own peculiarities. She was, however, insensible to all other sounds.

In the active, motor, waking state nothing is remembered of either the somnambulistic or the real hypnotic state during waking hours.

Under the stress of fear extraordinary feats have been performed by many unexpected persons. Men chased by dogs have leaped high fences, cleared hurdles and achieved unheard of records.

A man with locomotor ataxia, who had been unable to walk for some years, was caught in his rolling chair in an elevator. He leaped out in great fright and has been walking ever since.

The will thus brought into action by shock and surprise had lain dormant for years.

Answers to Health Questions

J. M. A.—Would you advise the seashore as a good place to live permanently for a person with a weak throat, and who takes cold easily?

Yes, a very good place.

GEO. K.—What is good for a coated tongue and a bad breath?

Look to your teeth, your toilet and your stomach. Indigestion very often causes a coated tongue and bad breath. Take lactic acid bacilli and plenty of charcoal at meal times, see that your blood pressure is kept low, and take Epsom salts once or twice a week before breakfast.

* * *

L. A.—1—What will remove pimples from the face? 2—What should I use for purification of blood to prevent their appearance?

1—Try this: Sulphur, ½ ounce; spirits camphor, 15 drops; resorcin, 10 grains; acacia, 1 ounce; rose aqua, 1 ounce; lime water, 2 ounces.

2—Eat lots of plain food, such as meats, eggs, fruits and green vegetables. Salts, such as Rochelle and Epsom, are good. Avoid sweet and greasy, oily foods.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

Grease stains on any material can be removed if moistened with a solution of chloride of [illegible], and then washed immediately in plenty of cold water. It is wise always to keep a bottle of this solution. If the stained article cannot be washed, then alcohol must be used.

Flowers wither quickly in the heat, but a small piece of camphor in the water will keep them fresh much longer.

Cakes get very dry in warm weather, but if placed in a tin box with an apple they will keep moist. Renew the apple when withered. The cake will not "taste."

Rain spots on cloth need not be regarded [illegible] very soft brush [illegible] the marks will vanish.

Soup quickly goes sour in the warm days, but it will keep sweet if a pinch of carbonate of soda is added to every quart.

Sunburn is not [illegible], but it can be removed by [illegible] the face in warm water in which a lemon has been squeezed and a pinch of borax added.

Fruit stains are very "obstinate." To remove them from white material, put milk and hold the stained part in it for a minute. On linen apply [illegible] at once, and leave for a [illegible].

Hot and stuffy rooms can be made cool and fresh by suspending a sheet wrung out in cold water over the open doorway. If a visitor comes it can be removed in two seconds, and your friend will surely remark how deliciously cool your room is.

Where Fish Are Caught by Hand

By TEMPLE MANNING

LATE in the dry season, when the rivers are low in the heart of Africa, the Gouri, who inhabit the central Soudan, set out on protracted fishing expeditions. I found the natives who live on the banks of the rivers [illegible] fishermen, taking great pride in their work, but the village Gouri are not very sporting in their methods. They go out for the final result rather than for the pleasure of the sport.

They pour the juice of locust tree pods into the pools, to which the streams have shrunk, and this causes the fish to leap out of the water. Wildly they leap, flopping out on the dry river bottom as often as not, but the excited natives do not wait for the fish to catch themselves. They lean over the shallow water, finding great delight in catching the leaping fish as they flash from the river.

I have seen a small party of half-naked Gouri work their way from pool to pool down the river and stop at noon with an afternoon's work ahead to pack the day's catch back to the fishing camp. Sometimes they will bet their most treasured possession on the number of fish each man will catch with his hand during the expedition.

This custom of using the "locust juice" seems to have been handed down from time immemorial among these strange Africans.

"Only a Piker"

In a restaurant two business men were discussing a third.

"He's only a piker!" said one.

"Would you mind explaining just what you mean?" asked the other.

"What I mean," the first replied, "is that he started small and is content to potter around with little details instead of reaching out for the big prizes."

Now, suppose he had chosen the other course; had dared for the big prizes and won.

Would he have been better off?

To be sure, instead of hiring a few workers and passing his business hours in happy comradeship with them, he could have directed an army of strangers from behind a mahogany desk in a swell office far away. He could have exchanged his modest home for a palace on the avenue. He could have ridden behind a chauffeur while his wife wore diamonds in an electric. And he could have headed charity lists to solve some of the wounds caused by the ruthlessness of his great business machine.

But that doesn't answer our question. Would he have been better off—a better husband or father; a kinder neighbor; a more upright or useful citizen; a happier man?

It seems to us that instead of being a term of reproach the term "piker" implies a tribute to good sense.

This country was made by "pikers." The bulk of its security, if not of its material wealth is in the hands of pikers and of the men and women who, perhaps, don't aspire even that high.

Prince Rupert Lands Fine Body of Men To Join Contingent

Prince Rupert, B. C., the Western Terminal of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, was incorporated as a municipality in March, 1910. It is one of the youngest of the Empire's bustling cities, yet a remarkable indication of the progress it has made is seen in its splendid response to the call for men for Canada's Second Contingent. News received at G. T. P. headquarters in Montreal state that the Company's steamship, the "Prince George" has left Prince Rupert for Victoria with 129 of Northern British Columbia's brawny sons, on route for the front. Some were fresh from office and shop, but some had lived their lives in the out-of-doors, toughened by the saddle and the canoe. They were given a great send-off by their friends in Prince Rupert.

Building Activity at Prince George

Good progress is being made with the execution of the machine shops and round house for the Grand Trunk Pacific at Prince George, B. C. This district is showing rapid growth, and it is probable that there is no other locality in British Columbia in which greater building activity is taking place. During the past three months there has been nearly $500,000 worth of new residences and business blocks completed. While at the present time there are buildings valued at $250,000 under construction.

"Nerviline" Cures Cramps And Misery Instantly

NO REMEDY SO SPEEDY OR EFFICIENT.

A real cramp cure!

Yes, a real one—in a twinkling the cramp is a dead one, and the last spasm is over, once you get a stiff dose of Nerviline on the inside.

This isn't mere talk—it's a solid truthful fact. No other remedy—not a single one—will cure cramps so quickly and harmlessly as Nerviline. It hits the spot in a jiffy and saves a heap of misery.

"Last Saturday night my stomach felt like an infernal machine," writes T. P. Granger from Hartford. "I was awakened from a sound sleep and found myself suffering the worst kind of torture. I was so doubled up I could hardly cross my room. I had used Nerviline before for the same thing and took a real good dose. Once I felt the warm, soothing sensation of Nerviline in my stomach I knew I was all right. It finished the cramps—just one single dose."

Sickness at night is rendered a nightmare of the past if Nerviline is handy. It may be earache, toothache or cramps, Nerviline in every case will cure at once and save calling the doctor. Nerviline is a family physician in itself. The large 50c. family size bottle, of course, is most economical. Small trial size costs a quarter. All dealers sell Nerviline.

RICHES OF MEXICO

Vast Storehouse of Mineral Wealth—That's Why It Attracts

"Mexico is the land of big stakes. Humboldt called it 'The treasure house of the world.' It is all that and more."

A man who has spent years of his life on the south of the Rio Grande, was talking and this was the burden of his talk.

He told of a subterranean lake of oil, known to be 300 miles long and from 25 to 30 miles wide, with a "gusher" that flowed more than 200,000 barrels in 24 hours before it was "capped" or regulated; of valleys filled with oil in that 24 hours.

He told of ore that assayed $26,000 to the ton, and hundreds of tons of it in sight.

"Under Spanish rule," said the man from Mexico, "the mines of Guanajuato alone produced over $1,000,000,000 worth of silver. The mine owners made millions so quickly that one of the Spanish viceroys was forced to issue an order forbidding them from scattering handfuls of silver on the streets because it increased the number of beggars.

"Well, it isn't very different now. For instance, there's Pedro Alvarado, the owner of the Palmillo mine. He is an ignorant Indian who has no idea how much money he has, nor any idea of its value. In the last few years he has built 50 churches, at least 100 schools, and has given away several fortunes. One Christmas, Pedro Alvarado gave away $2,000,000 to the poor 'for the love of God,' he said.

"Why, there are lots of creeks or streams, particularly in Sonora, where a peon or a Chinaman can make from $5 to $10 a day washing for gold with an ordinary pan. They call these little streams 'poor men's banks.'"

DEVELOPING A SUPERMAN

Siberia Should Produce One If Eugenic Theory Counts For Anything

Siberia's unique population should possess considerable interest for the eugenists, says a well known medical journal. From 1653 until 1900, from 2,000 to 20,000 Russians were exiled annually to Siberia, mainly for voicing ideas and opinions which favored democracy and other modern theories; in other words, the inhabitants of the territory seem always to have been men and women of original habits of thought, of mental qualifications which would have made them prominent and distinguished under a form of government more like our own.

As we understand it, these exiles have lived an outdoor life, rigorous, perhaps, but of the most healthful kind. Consequently we find in Siberia a most unusual combination of intellectual equipment of high quality with physical surroundings adapted to furnish bodily vigor and excellent health, a union produced by accident of the exact kind that eugenists are striving to effect by design.

The colonization of Siberia by the method above referred to practically ceased more than a dozen years ago, there should be now, even in the absence of first rate schools, a population with most exceptional gifts, veritable supermen if the theories of the eugenists are soundly based.

SAFETY IN COAL MINES

Steam Will Dampen Dust and Prevent Explosions

The fact that dry bituminous coal dust will explode under certain conditions has been proved both by the experience of the past and by laboratory tests and is now generally admitted by all coal men.

That coal dust may be rendered inert by the proper application of moisture has been shown both by laboratory tests and by the absence of explosions at mines in which moisture is present in the proper proportion to the quantity of dust produced. The result of an investigation of the humidity of mine air, carried out by the Bureau of Mines, leads to the belief that steam may be applied to the intake air in such a way as to offer the most economical and efficient method of dampening coal dust.

The Arms of Glasgow

The explanation of the coat of arms of Glasgow is curious. On it are an oak tree with a bell hanging on one of its branches, a bird at the top of the tree, and a salmon, with a ring in its mouth, at the base. St. Kentigern, in the seventh century, took up his abode on the site of the present city of Glasgow. Upon an oak in the clearing he hung a bell to summon the savages to worship, hence the oak and bell. A queen, having formed an attachment to a soldier, gave him a precious ring, which the king had given her. The king, aware of the fact, stole upon the soldier in sleep, abstracted the ring, threw it into the Clyde, and then asked the queen for it. The queen, in alarm, applied to St. Kentigern, who went to the Clyde, caught a salmon with the ring in its mouth, handed it to the queen, and was thus the means of restoring peace to the Royal couple.

Butterfly's Long Trip

Brilliantly colored butterflies or moths, three inches in length and brightly hued, are not common in Canada, and consequently some workmen in a Toronto lumber yard were surprised to see one of this kind fluttering around in a car. It was in with some ash lumber, which arrived from the Southern States, so that evidently it had traveled the distance from its native clime in a box car. It was three inches long and measured three and a half inches from tip to tip of the wings. The body was two and a half inches long and the wings were striped with grey, yellow, black and white.

ORIGIN OF ENTENTE

Scotchman Residing in Paris Was Means of Bringing It About

Great Britain's stand from the very beginning of the present European situation has been so aggressively pro-French largely because during the closing years of the last century there resided in Paris a Scotchman with an idea. The man was Thomas Barclay, and the idea was the desirability of an entente between the monarchy and the republic.

If any individual (outside of cabinet or ex-cabinet ministers) can tell the world of this momentous entente, Barclay is the man. England gave him his knighthood—he has been Sir Thomas for ten years—because of his services in the bringing about of the understanding, while France made him an officer of the Legion of Honor for the same reason. After the signing of the Anglo-French treaty of arbitration in October, 1903, Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Lord Alverstone, Chief Justice of England, gave to Barclay chief credit for the bringing together of the nations, while Paul Cambon, French Ambassador to London, did so at a later date. Lord Alverstone wrote that "no one knows better than I that the signing of the Anglo-French treaty is entirely due to you."

Sir Thomas, who used to be President of the British Chamber of Commerce in Paris, achieved his result in consequence of years of molding of public opinion on both sides of the English Channel through speeches, through the newspapers, through letters, through personal interviews with men in the highest official places, through a set campaign carried forward month after month with profound determination.

In view of the present alignment of the European powers, two facts brought out by Sir Thomas are of peculiar interest. The first is that the alliance between France and Russia, antedating the Anglo-French rapprochement, was entered into largely as a result of hostility to England; the lands of the President and the Czar were both unfriendly to Great Britain at that time, therefore they had in this a common ground of sympathy on which they met and embraced. The second odd point, when Europe's situation of to-day is viewed, is that there was in the beginning no intention on the part of France or England that their friendship should be in the least either a means of defense from Germany or a means of offense against that power; Germany was not considered, the entente being solely to straighten misunderstandings and banish hostility between the Briton and the Gaul. But the entente has changed with age, undergoing evolution with the growing power of Germany.

FISH STORIES

Lightning Killed a Bass Weighing Eleven Pounds

From the Eastern Townships of Quebec there came a story of an eleven-pound black bass killed by lightning. That was pretty good. Nobody had ever seen an eleven-pound black bass before in the world, and nobody had ever seen a fish killed by lightning. The story was a double-edged stroke of genius. Next from the New England States there came a story of a lad who rammed his fist into the gills of a fish he was diving and landed another big one. And this was followed up by a story from Baltimore, where an old tar tells of having his ship lifted out of the water on the back of an enormous whale.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1912 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs—all young foxes—good for at least 20 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the finances for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $90,000 worth of stock for themselves. $20,000 worth has already been disposed of, leaving $200,000 to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this exceptional company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $[illegible] and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pair that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs, shipped from Prince Edward Island ranches to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

SHARES

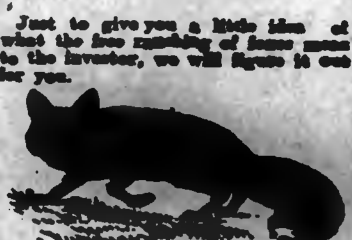
Shares are selling at $25.00 each: 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st, 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the fox ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.



We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four pups, this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the increase for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain English what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business—and judge for yourself to have been [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown daily newspapers.

RIOT AMONG THE ALIENS ON ISLE OF MAN

London, Nov. 23.— The Manchester Guardian, referring to the rioting last Thursday in the alien detention camp on the Isle of Man, in which five prisoners were killed and twelve wounded, says this outbreak was due not merely to discontent with the food and treatment given them, but was part of a desperate plan of the prisoners to escape from the camp with the ultimate hope of seizing a vessel in the harbor and making their way to some neutral country.

The dining room of the camp, where the trouble occurred, gives access through the adjoining kitchens, to the only part of the camp enclosure not protected by a double circuit of barbed wire. The prisoners employed in the kitchens were aware of this condition. The prisoners on Wednesday went on a hunger strike. This rapidly developed into an angry demonstration against England. The prison commandant succeeded in quieting the disturbance, but not before the Union Jack had been torn down.

The mutiny began Thursday, the signal for the outbreak being the throwing of a chair through a window. The prisoners, instead of making for the main doors leading from the dining hall, all rushed toward the kitchen doors. Only six soldiers guarded these doors.

The correspondent of the Manchester Guardian expresses the belief that the prisoners hoped to capture enough arms to hold the guards at bay until the [illegible] in the camp had time to get possession of a boat in the harbor.

The medical officer at the camp assured the correspondent that the food was sufficient, but it was admitted that a certain consignment of potatoes was bad and that some of the [illegible] leaked. Many prisoners in this camp are men of title and of wealth.

They were allowed to purchase their own food, and they enjoyed course dinners. This was another source of discontent. The captains in charge of the divisions of prisoners were chosen from among the educated aliens, and it is not believed that they had any knowledge of the uprising.

Extra guards have been placed on duty at the Isle of Man camp, and the number of prisoners permitted in the dining room at one time has been reduced.

An inquest held at camp shows that the affair occurred just after the midday meal. There was 2,000 alien prisoners in the dining-room at the time. The guards, consisting of national reservists, were standing in a room which separates the diningroom from the kitchens.

The prisoners suddenly attacked the guards with cups, saucers, tables and anything else that happened to be handy. The guards fired a volley into the air. This failed to quell the riot and a result of which four of the prisoners fell dead or so seriously wounded that they died almost immediately. Twelve others were so badly wounded that they had to be conveyed to the hospital.

GERMANS ARE AGAIN REPULSED IN ARGONNE

Paris, Nov. 23.—The text of the official communication issued this (Monday) afternoon follows:

"Yesterday was marked by a violent artillery fire. The enemy directed particularly to the town of Ypres, where the belfry, the cathedral, the markets, and a number of houses were set on fire, to Soissons, and to Rheims.

"In the Argonne the day was characterized by very hot fighting. The enemy delivered very spirited attacks which were repulsed.

"In the Woevre and in the Vosges the situation is without change."

Battle of Great Ferocity Fought

Paris, Nov. 23.—Renewed bombardment of Nieuport is reported here today from the front together with reports of the greatest activity among the Germans along the coast.

Fighting is now centering around Middelkerke midway between Ostend and Nieuport. South of the city there has been a battle of great ferocity, the German and allies' forces resorting to the use of the bayonet.

When the garrison of Bruges was relieved by the lightly wounded soldiers that the sound troops might be rushed to the front, the wounded men marched into the city singing. This change in the Bruges garrison was made on Friday.

Back of the German lines there is said to be a considerable movement of troops and guns through Belgium toward the coast. Heavy guns have been mounted between Knocke and Nieuport with the evident intention of returning the fire of the allied warships, which have been bombarding the German lines.

Ypres has again been bombarded after a partial cessation of fighting there. The town hall and the market place were destroyed, and the city, already partially ruined, was further damaged. In the Argonne, the Champagne district and along other points of the line the Germans are reinforcing their trenches or endeavoring to build new ones in the face of the allied artillery fire.

HEARING IS RESTORED TO DEAF

Without Mechanical or Artificial Hearing Devices. Deaf Hear With Their Own Ears. A Wonderful English Discovery.

Thousands of people suffer from catarrhal deafness or poor hearing, who having tried specialists, advertised treatments, artificial ear drums, ear phones, electric vibrators and various mechanical appliances without success have at last resigned themselves to a "world of silence" thinking that nothing can ever restore to them their normal hearing. Yet their case is not hopeless. A remarkable scientific treatment discovered a little more than a year ago in England is making people hear after years of deafness and is also unequalled for quickly stopping the distressing head noises that are so often the companions of defective hearing. This discovery is called Parmint and has attracted widespread notice throughout Europe where reports of the remarkable results it has given to deaf people have come in by the hundred.

The effect of Parmint it seems is by tonic action to produce a stimulous necessary to reduce all inflammation, swelling, enlargement or thickening of the organs of hearing and to stimulate the entire auditory tract.

Parmint is now being sold by many leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity and a speedy trial is urged upon all who suffer from catarrhal deafness or head noises in any degree. Ask the druggist for 1 oz. of Parmint (Double Strength) and take it home and mix with ½ pint of hot water and 4 oz of granulated sugar until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day and you should soon find a remarkable improvement in your hearing.

IMPORTANT.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine st., Montreal, P.Q. who make a specialty of it.

SHOPS OWNED BY CHRISTIANS ARE SACKED

London, Nov. 23.—Percy J. Philip telegraphs to the Daily News, from "Northeastern France" as follows:

"The great bayonet charge by the Zouaves near Dixmude of which you have already heard, was a particularly gruesome affair, for the Zouaves, like the Gurkhas, love the joy of a hand to hand battle. And it came at the end of three days constant fighting.

"They charged a wood, an officer told me, like a gale of wind, not giving a cry until they got within touch then they let out yell upon yell as they plied their bayonets among the dripping trees.

"The enemy were mostly first line men and met them like heroes, firing in volleys once or twice, then leaping out to the combat. The impetus of the Zouaves carried them through. They did not stop to kill. They dashed through the first time, killing only as they went, then they charged back on the broken lines.

"There were hand to hand struggles until ten o'clock that ended with both sides falling on the ground exhausted. Four of the Germans fighting together gave a terrible account of themselves before they died. Three of the four, were, I think, brothers, and they were brave soldiers."

Athens, Nov. 23.—Shops owned by Christians were sacked and three Christians killed by a large force of Turks at Trebizond, a message received here from Constantinople today, declares.

Trebizond is a seaport of Asiatic Turkey, on the Black Sea.

The First Regatta

June 23 was the date of the first British regatta, held between Westminster Bridge and Ranelagh in 1775, to which Dr. Johnson appears to have taken Mrs. Thrale. It was suggested by Lady Montague's description of a regatta she had witnessed in Venice. The only rowing contest was "a race of wager-boats," after which a procession of boats manned by red, white and blue oarsmen rowed from Westminster to Ranelagh, where various festivities followed in a Temple of Neptune. Some of the 200,000 who attended seem, says the "Westminster Gazette," to have supped "not wisely but too well," for on the return journey "many accidents occurred," and seven persons were drowned.

ART OF GROWING TALL

You May Easily Increase Your Height by This Process

Not a little envy must have been created in the minds of those who lack stature, and who aspire to greater physical height than that with which nature has endowed them, by the recent announcement that there is a man living who can add several inches to his height in the course of a few minutes. Such extraordinary growing powers are, of course, unique; but, at the same time, it is possible, without artificial aids, but by merely indulging in certain exercises, to add appreciably to one's height, even after what is popularly known as the "stop growing" period has been passed.

It should be mentioned, however, that exercises are scarcely likely to be beneficial after one has passed thirty years of age, for at that time the bones and cartilages have been so thoroughly matured that it is practically impossible to affect them. The following exercise, however, is often indulged in by army men, and if systematically carried on is said to give a man an extra inch in height.

The main exercise consists in standing, back to wall, until you are just as erect as possible. Then take two steps forward away from the wall, letting the arms hang by the sides with palms outward, and slowly raise the arms above the head until the fingers meet, taking care not to bend the arms in the least, and keeping the palms outward; then lower the arms. By doing this exercise thirty times in the morning and thirty times at night every day for a month or so, one seldom fails to add at least half an inch to the height, and it has been known to give a man even an inch and a half.

There are also certain simple rules which, if carried out, add considerably to one's height. There is the old habit of stooping, for instance. Nearly everyone stoops a little, and if we would only endeavor, as far as possible, to prevent this habit, we should not only look taller but feel taller.

Endeavor to sit up perfectly straight at all times, and stand up perfectly straight. It is not easy at first, particularly when one follows a sedentary occupation. In fact, one is rather apt to feel uncomfortable, but by quiet persistence it will be found quite as easy in a short time to walk and sit perfectly upright as it is to stoop.

If you wish to relax when sitting, don't get into an easy chair and bend over or sag down into a lazy position. Always rest in a chair by leaning back, no matter how far; but never bend forward to rest or talk or read.

ONE DRINK AT A TIME

Peculiar Rules in Vogue at Odd London Drinking Places

At a well known London public house called "Dirty Dick's," it is the rule that only one drink can be served to customers at a single visit. There is another licensed house in London where not only is a similar rule enforced, but where smoking is strictly prohibited.

The proprietors of this licensed house, which is in Artillery Lane, Bishopsgate, frankly state that they reserve to themselves the right to conduct their business upon any system they may deem expedient, and they cannot permit their rules to be broken on any account with impunity. Furthermore, they "respectfully request all persons objecting to the regulations, and who are not willing to act in strict conformity therewith, to kindly transfer their patronage to some other establishment."

For upwards of sixty years they have adopted among others, the following three rules:

"No person or party of persons can be served, under any circumstances, more than once, the rule being that he, she, or they (as the case may be) must have left the house at least half an hour before either are entitled to be served again.

"The quantity served upon any occasion, for consumption on the premises, not to exceed one gill of wine, half a gill of spirits, or one glass of malt liquor, for each person.

"Smoking is stricty prohibited at all times and under all circumstances."

Canada was the first of the dominions to establish government wireless telegraph stations.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

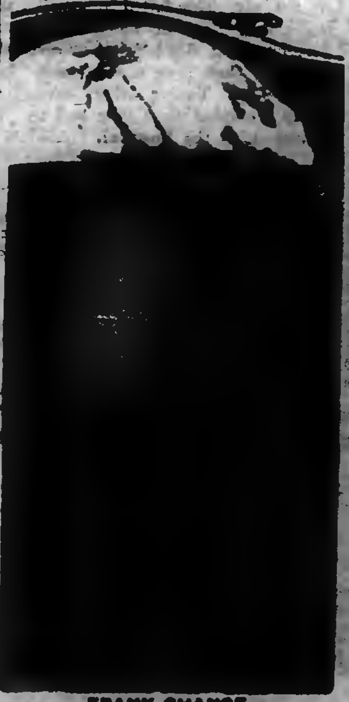
ROYAL YACHTSMEN

Apropos of King George's success as a yachtsman, it is interesting to note that yachting in bygone times owed much to English sovereigns, from Queen Elizabeth, who had a fine pleasure schooner built at Cowes, to William IV., who founded the Royal Yacht Squadron; but the keenest of all Royal yachtsmen was Charles II. In all, the Merry Monarch owned fourteen yachts, ranging from twenty-five to 103 tons, and one of them, the "Jamie," was designed by the King himself and built at Lambeth under his supervision. Charles and his brother James generally steered their yachts themselves, and Evelyn, in his diary for October 1st, 1661, describes a sailing match between the Royal brothers—the first contest of the kind in British waters of which we have any record.



FRANK CHANCE

Men who know Frank Chance, the American league's $25,000 manager, can perhaps imagine what Chance is shouting at some Highlander, in this picture. Chance does not believe in handling his players with velvet gloves. He rules them with an iron hand and doesn't hesitate to use language that rasps. It is not difficult to imagine Chance raising the skin of some player in this instance.

DUELLING DAYS

Young Bloods Practiced With Long-Barrelled Pistols

By the end of the seventeenth century the pistol had come fairly into vogue as a duellist's weapon in England, and from that time forward pistol duels were frequent—more frequent than those with the sword. Gunmakers devoted their best workmanship to duelling pistols, and at duelling range, say up to twenty paces, these weapons were as near perfection as skill could make them. The latter-day pistol had a ten-inch barrel, and carried a ball of 48 to the pound. Only constant practice would make a good shot, and a very high standard of marksmanship was set for the man who aspired to be considered an expert with the pistol. When he could hit twelve wafers at fourteen yards, and do it within six minutes, loading his pistol himself between shots, he might consider himself proficient; and it will be borne in mind that the muzzle-loading pistol took several seconds to properly charge.

Proficiency, of course, was not everything. It was quite as daunting to face a pistol at twelve yards as to face the sword at close quarters, and no proficiency at wafers would atone for nervousness on the ground. One ardent practitioner schooled himself with a contrivance of his own invention. He had the life-size figure of a man with a bracketed hand in which a pistol could be held at the "present," and by means of a cord from the trigger of the pistol in the dummy's grasp to his own belt, he discharged the weapon himself as he fired his own pistol, by slightly drawing back.

Great stress was laid on the importance of aiming at a small object. "Mark well one of the gilt buttons on his coat; a person can never fire with accuracy unless he aim at some small object." Which explains why the experienced duellist "went out" dressed entirely in black, that his person might offer no such mark as the gilt button of an older day.

Being in position, the men each held his arm well in to the side and raised his pistol to the proper level, keeping the head straight, the eyes turned as much to the right as possible, and the pistol directed steadily towards the small object—that gilt button, if the adversary were so obliging to wear such. "Move only the forefinger, and that with just sufficient force to discharge the pistol," was a rule supposed to be carefully observed.

Clean pots and pans with GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

ROUGH TACTICS WIN PENNANTS

Baseball General of Bygone Day Believes in Real Warfare on the Diamond

Patsy Tebeau, one of the gamest of old-time managers, has no use for "kid glove" baseball. When he heard that President Ban Johnson regarded Manager Birmingham's Cleveland players as "too rough" Patsy expressed the opinion that the mollycoddle days had come.

"Show me a ball club that is fighting every inch of the way and I'll show you a team that is after the pennant," he said. "This having players shaking hands every time they meet is foolish. It gives the fans the wrong impression. You've got to get the fighting spirit to win.

"We never thought of greeting our opponents. Our idea was to get out and beat them. I can see a runner sliding to first with me playing the bag and getting his head pumped with the ball. Think I'd apologize? Not Patsy Tebeau! 'Get your head out of the way and you won't get hurt,' would be more like it. About a year ago I saw a fellow steal second. He came up all dust, and what do you think happened? Why, the second baseman helped him dust his uniform. And that team finished last in the race. That isn't my brand of baseball.

"Rush the other fellows off their feet. Make them think you're tough.

PATSY TEBEAU
Fighting manager of the old Cleveland Spiders.

Scare them to death and you've got them licked. We used to sit on the bench and file our spikes. They had to be shiny to give when they cut into the ground and at the bags [illegible] the other team knew we wouldn't give an inch in a pinch. One day I was sharpening my spikes when I heard a man on the other team say, 'When Tebeau slides into r.. you bet I'm going to get out of the way.' I had him scared, see?

"There's a difference between rowdyism and aggressiveness. The aggressive player will be on top when the rowdy boy is at the bottom. Off the field, oh, well, that's different. On the field fight them to the last."

BEN TINCUP IS RICH

Indian Pitcher Plays Ball Only Because He Likes It

The majority of ball players are in the game for the amount of money they can get out of it; a few play it because of their love for the pastime. Ben Tincup belongs to the latter class. Tincup is a Cherokee Indian pitcher the Phillies picked up. He hails from Texas, and is said to be the richest ball player in the world, and probably one of the wealthiest men in baseball.

When the Indian comes of age in a few months his yearly income will be over $50,000 a year. He already has $50,000 stored away in a bank, besides being the possessor of 400 acres of valuable oil lands in Oklahoma, which the Government is keeping for him. So if Tincup fails to make good in the big leagues he won't have any cause to worry.

Since he is one of the few remaining Cherokee Indians, all the Oklahoma lands are held in trust for him. As soon as he is 21 years old he will go to Washington to collect the dividends which are accumulating for him. As Tincup's allotment of land was among the oil fields he is wealthier than many of the other survivors of the Cherokee tribe.

Preparing in Time

Antwerp has already commenced to prepare for the Olympic games, to be held in that city in 1920. A committee has been formed, and the support of the most influential persons in Belgium obtained.

The town authorities are to obtain a vote of several million francs for the expenses, and everything is being done to make the event a huge success. In recent years Belgium has come to the fore in international sports.

Forgot Bride For Dog

So anxious was Charles Hamer, of Carlisle, Pa., a noted wing shot, to recover a black and white pointer that he had lost that he forgot that it was his wedding day. When he was told an hour before the wedding by his [illegible] that the dog had disappeared he rushed out of the house and started hunting through the woods of his estate and the wedding party was getting nervous when he was reached by phone after finding his dog [illegible] to his bride [illegible] so [illegible] that he had "forgotten."

FAMOUS PHRASES AND THEIR ORIGIN

Some Everyday Expressions Have Come Down to us From the Time of the Caesars

The average person probably does not know the origin of half the common phrases used in ordinary conversation.

No less a person than Cicero first made use of the expression, "While there's life, there's hope," in a letter he wrote to Atticus. "We are in the same boat" is not modern slang, but occurs in a letter written by Clement I., Bishop of Rome, to the Church of Corinth in the first century. This letter is still in existence.

"I never put off till to-morrow what I can do to-day," was Lord Chesterfield's explanation of how he managed to do so much work. "Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well," he wrote later in the famous "Letters to His Son."

Lord Eldon, Lord Chancellor of England during the first twenty-six years of the nineteenth century, continually mispronounced the name of Henry Brougham, afterward to be a successor in the Chancellor's office. Brougham objected to being called Broffam, and once, after Brougham had made a speech, Eldon, by way of apology, pronounced his name correctly and made a proverb, "New brooms sweep clean."

"No man is a hero to his valet" has been paraphrased by scores, from Madame de Cornuel, a witty Frenchwoman of the seventeenth century, to Dr. Johnson and Napoleon. The first record of it, however, is found in Plutarch, who states that when Hermodotus addressed a poem to Antigonus I., King of Sparta, hailing him as son of the sun and a god, the monarch replied, "My bodyservant sings me no such song."

The phrase "circumstances over which he has no control" was used by the Duke of Wellington in a letter concerning some affairs in which his son was mixed up, and with which he declined to interfere.

"Conspicuous by their absence" has been used on many occasions in modern oratory. It was first used by Tacitus in relating that in the funeral procession of Julia, niece of Cato, sister of Brutus, wife of Cassius, many of the images of the most famous families in Rome were seen, but "Cassius and Brutus shone pre-eminent because their images were not displayed."

"Nothing is certain but death and taxes," wrote Benjamin Franklin, stating that the Constitution of the United States was in operation and to all appearances would last.

"Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones," was said by James I. of England, when his favorite, the Duke of Buckingham, complained that a mob had broken his glass windows, which were at that time a luxury.

"Mind your P's and Q's" is said to have been taken from an old French phrase at the time of Louis XIV. A very low bow was in fashion, and the dancing master, instructing his pupils, would warn them to look out for the position of the feet and the movement of the head, lest their queue wigs be disarranged. The French word for foot is pied. "Mind your pieds and queues," soon came to be transplanted into English, and abbreviated.

FORCE OF EXPLOSION

Amazing Freak of Gelignite in British Columbia

It seems incredible that an explosion could be of such force as to cause an ordinary steel rail to wrap itself twice around the trunk of a large tree; yet there was just such a result from the discharge of gelignite at Nanaimo, British Columbia. Twelve workmen lost their lives by this explosion. The rail was lying on the ground fully thirty feet from the spot at which the explosion occurred; yet it was lifted into the air, sent in the direction of the tree, and twisted round the trunk, just as if it had been a piece of piano wire. It was so tightly wrapped about the trunk that it cut deeply into the green wood and caused great splinters to start out on all sides. The explosive responsible for this unique occurrence is one of the most powerful preparations known, composed of nitroglycerine, nitrocotton, sodium nitrate, sodium carbonate, and wood pulp.

How do Animals Know?

One of the mysteries still unsolved is that of the sense by which the lower animals become aware of the approach of earthquakes. For three or four days before the severe earthquakes at Guadalajara, Mexico, the many parrots of the city showed great and unusual restlessness, and during the period of disturbance the increased cries of the birds gave warning of the nearness of the worst shocks. Rats, also, became alarmed, fleeing from the city before the earthquakes came. Supersensitiveness to faint shocks hardly gives satisfactory explanation, for modern seismographs are very sensitive, and it is quite unlikely that tremors too slight to be registered would be felt so strongly as to give alarm.—"Science Siftings."

SHADOWING THE BALL

An Old Trick Which Fools Batters and Sometimes Wins Games

Can a pitcher be made to order?

Joe Boehling's success raises the question.

Boehling is one of the strangest pitchers the game ever has seen. Every batter who walks to the plate returns in disgust, declaring that "he ain't got nothing."

Boehling was pitching for a team down in Virginia. Clark Griffith saw possibilities in him, because he seemed to have the intelligence and cunning necessary to pitch winning ball and took him in hand. After Boehling had gone to the pitching school under Griffith and Altrock he was as much changed as if he had turned green.

Boehling worked a game against Chicago White Sox once that Griffith used in his best days. And not one of them saw it.

There was a trick used by many of the old-time pitchers known as "shadowing." It consisted of throwing the body to one side as the ball was pitched, so that the pitcher's body was on the line of sight of the ball and "shadowed" it, the body forming the only background. Boehling was doing this repeatedly, and the Sox were swinging late at the ball, although it was not speedy. Batters used to complain that Griffith had more speed than he seemed to have. The secret was that he "shadowed" the ball with his body and the batter did not see it clearly until it emerged from the shadow, and, therefore, thought it much faster than it was.

Ed. Reulbach worked the shadow trick once in another way and won a game by it. There was a new umpire working behind him. Early in the game Reulbach became very friendly with the umpire and, instead of kicking when strikes were called, he was polite and seemed to be anxious to assist. He suggested:

"Stand over a bit. Get on the line of the ball and you can see them better."

For five innings that umpire shadowed the ball, unconsciously helping the Chicago pitcher beat Brooklyn. Then some one kicked and the ruse was exposed.

A WHEAT RECORD

An English Stack Went Unthreshed for Forty Years

The longest authentic period for which a wheat stack has been kept unthreshed is forty years. The story of this forty-year-old stack is briefly as follows: The crop of which the stack was built was grown in 1855. This stack and another belonged to two brothers, both farmers, who lived in the neighborhood of Harrogate, England. In March of the preceding year the Crimean War broke out, and the price of wheat rose by leaps and bounds. Shortly after the stacks were built the price of wheat rose to $22.28 per quarter, and at this price one of the brothers sold out. The other, however, determined not to sell until the price rose to $25.00.

In March, 1856, the war terminated, and the price of wheat fell. The farmer, however, stuck to his resolution and refused to sell. He kept his stack until 1895, when the farm passed into the hands of a younger brother, who then thrashed it out.

During the whole forty years of its existence it had enjoyed perfect immunity from rats, but was the abode of thousands of spiders. It yielded eighteen quarters of wheat, but the quality of the grain rendered it fit only for chicken feed.

BULLETS THAT DRUG

A Soldier Hit by One Goes Painlessly to Sleep

A new kind of bullet, known as the "narcotic bullet," is now being experimented with. A minute particle of morphia is used, and the drug is carried in tiny wells in the steel jacket of the regulation army bullet. The inventor claims that it in no way interferes with the effectiveness of the missile. The slight indentation in the steel jacket causes no splintering when it comes in contact with the bone, and no deleterious effects will follow the unique administration of the drug.

The soldier receiving a slight flesh wound from the new bullet fights no more that day; he calmly stretches himself on the ground and goes to sleep. The man receiving a serious wound suffers no agony, as the narcotic from the bullet is absorbed by his system, and he is insensible to pain before he reaches the hospital.

MARVELOUS BALSAMIC ESSENCES CURE CATARRH
NO DRUGS TO TAKE—A DIRECT BREATHING CURE

STATISTICS PROVE NINETY-SEVEN PER CENT OF CANADA'S POPULATION IS INFECTED WITH THE GERMS OF CATARRH

This disease is most dangerous owing to its tendency to extend to the Bronchial tubes and lungs, where it causes Consumption. Unfortunately the people have had faith in sprays, ointments and snuffs, which can't possibly cure, and in consequence catarrhal disease has become a national curse. Science is advancing every day, and fortunately a remedy has been discovered that not only cures but prevents Catarrh. This new treatment "Catarrhozone" has sufficient power to kill the germs of Bronchitis, Catarrh and Asthma. It contains pure pine essences and healing balsams that go to the remotest part of the nose, throat and lungs, carrying health-giving medication to every spot that is tainted or weak. You don't take Catarrhozone like cough mixture—you inhale its healing vapor at the mouth and it spreads all through the breathing organs, soothing and curing wherever Catarrh exists. This is nature's way of supplying the richest balsams, the purest antiseptics known to science.

A running cold is cured in ten minutes. A harsh cough is cured in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system. For Asthma and Bronchial irritation nothing can equal Catarrhozone—every physician and druggist says so, and we advise our readers to try this treatment if suffering with a winter ill. The complete outfit costs $1.00, medium size 50c., at all dealers.

London's Beauty Writers

Weekly Selections from Noted Beauty Experts Writing for the English Press. Simple and Effective Methods.

By Olga Ambrose, Special Correspondent, London, Eng.

Each week in this department I will endeavor, by careful clipping from the London papers, to keep my Colonial readers informed on the latest and best advice of the London beauty experts. Owing to the [illegible] London newspapers and periodicals are now devoting more space to the serious consideration of beauty culture. Many of these new [illegible] experts to advise and instruct in methods most effective for enhancing or preserving beauty of face and figure. I append herewith a few clippings from leading English publications. Any of the ingredients mentioned could be obtained from Canadian chemists or druggists, so I am told. Look out for more hints next week. I shall endeavor to keep right up to date.

Homely Hair Hints

The effect of a good [illegible] solution upon the hair and scalp is really quite remarkable. It is a pity some enterprising firm has not taken it up and advertised such a preparation. As it is one must make up one's own. This is a very simple matter, however. From the druggist get one-fourth pint of bay rum and about an ounce of pure [illegible]. Mix together and apply to the scalp and hair roots occasionally, with the finger tips. The dandruff disappears like magic and as dandruff is the principal enemy of the hair, there is a marked improvement at once. The scalp is left fresh, clean and invigorated, and the hair roots fairly tingle with new life.

About Shampoos

To quote an eminent London physician: "The dirty soap cannot dissolve the scalp impurities, but only adds to the trouble by completely choking the pores with animal matter. The substance sticks, decomposes, thereby causing the hair to assume a dead, dull color." I heartily endorse every word. Avoid soaps (and soap, too) on your hair. Try the delightful preparation made by stirring a teaspoonful of stallax in a cup of hot water. It will bring out any beauty possibilities in your hair, will clean and prevent dandruff, and leave [illegible]

[illegible] Hair in [illegible] Weather

[illegible] has no terrors for the woman who has adopted the [illegible] method of keeping her hair in curl. The effect is more lasting than when the hot waving iron is used, and yet the hair is quite manageable, regardless of how it is done up. Besides the hair has the appearance of being most naturally wavy and curling, and the application is really beneficial. Most any druggist can supply the liquid [illegible] and a couple of ounces will be sufficient. A small quantity should be put on before retiring, using for the purpose a clean toothbrush. The effect upon arising is delightfully surprising and there is no stickiness, greasiness, nor any other unpleasant accompaniment.

Effectually Killing Superfluous Hair

Many women know how to remove ugly growths of superfluous hair temporarily, but few know how to remove it permanently. For this purpose pure powdered [illegible] may be used. Get about an ounce from your druggist and apply a little directly to the objectionable hair. The purpose of the recommended treatment is not merely to remove the superfluous hair instantly but also to kill the hair roots completely in a comparatively short time.

Brushing the Eyelashes

Much can be done to train and beautify the eyebrows and lashes by gently stroking them with a soft camelhair eyebrow brush. There is nothing which so enhances the beauty of the face as fine eyebrows and long, curling dark lashes. Clipping the lashes to make them grow longer and stronger was long ago abandoned as worse than useless, and smart women of to-day will risk no such radical method. Instead many of them use a perfectly harmless but very rare and delicate substance known to druggists as [illegible]. To greatly stimulate and also to darken the growth of the hairs in brow and lash, it may be applied at night with the finger tips close to the hair roots.

An [illegible]

Instead of face powder, use a simple lotion made from one ounce of [illegible] and four tablespoonfuls of water. This lotion will tone and clear the skin and acts as a protection against wind and drying dirt. A little applied with the finger tips instantly gives the skin a delightful "bloom" appearance. No powder is necessary, and the result lasts all day long under the most trying conditions.

THE MANNER IN WHICH GENERAL DE WET ANNOUNCED HIS REBELLION

"I am Going to Pretoria to Pull Down the British Flag and Proclaim a Free South Africa --- Can Endure No Longer the Miserable and Pestelential English,"---Flag at Pretoria Awaits in Vain the Coming of De Wet to Haul it Down.

English papers have made public a despatch from the Governor General of South Africa giving an account of General De Wet's announcement of his rebellion. The account is as follows:

"At four o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, October 28th General De Wet entered Vrede with about 150 mounted men, of whom half to two-thirds were armed. After passing through the town gate a chase ensued after a post office clerk, who had been posted on the outskirts of the town to form an estimate of De Wet's force as they approached. The clerk, mounted on a bicycle, managed to retain the lead from a number of horsemen, in spite of their threats to shoot him. He was however, overtaken in front of the post-office, from where he shouted the information he had gleaned to the post master who was waiting at the instrument to despatch the news to the Transvaal. The postmaster succeeded in getting his message through before the men had time to burst the doors and prevent him. As soon as they got into the office they smashed up the instrument, knocked down the postmaster and kicked him. The rest of the troopers galloped through the town in all directions, ordering the inhabitants to assemble at the monument in front of the Dutch church, they being promised no sjambokking if they disobeyed.

General De Wet had meantime taken up a stand on the monument and ordered that the Magistrate should be brought to him. Two men were despatched to the Magistrate's office, to order the latter to attend the meeting. In entering the office one of the men (De Wet's son), extended his hand to greet the Magistrate, who told him he would not give his hand to a rebel and when ordered in the name of General De Wet to attend the meeting he replied that he was not going to attend a meeting held by the enemy. This message was brought to De Wet, who was furious, and sent six men to bring him (the Magistrate) by force, and, if necessary, to drag him up. The men again entered the Resident Magistrate's Office and laid hands on him, pulling him out of his chair. The Resident Magistrate thereupon said that if they were going to take him by force he would go, and walked with them. He faced De Wet with a defiant air

"General de Wet, after employing some abusive language to the Magistrate, addressed the meeting as follows:—'Ladies, Gentlemen and Burghers, I have asked you to come together here to explain to you my position. Then turning to the Magistrate, he said: "Magistrate, I want you to get a shorthand writer to take down every word that I am going to say, because whatever I may do in the future I can never commit a greater act of rebellion than I have already committed. I am going through to Maritz, where we will receive arms and ammunition, and from there I am going to Pretoria to pull down the British flag and proclaim a free South African Republic. All those who side with the Government must go to them. I signed the Vereeniging Treaty and swore to be faithful to the British flag, but where has been so down trodden by the miserable and pestilential English that he can endure it no longer. His Majesty King Edward VII promised to protect us but he has failed to do so, and allowed a Magistrate to be placed over us (he is one of the pestilential English) who is an absolute tyrant, and has made it impossible to tolerate it any longer. I was charged before him for beating a native boy, I only hit him with a small shepherd's whip, and for that I was fined 5s."

"Here the Magistrate interrupted de Wet and asked him whether he did not plead guilty. He admitted that he had pleaded guilty, and ordered the Magistrate to keep quiet and he would allow him to say as much as he liked when he had finished speaking, and if he would not hold his tongue he then would make him hold it.

"But, continued de Wet, after the Magistrate had delivered judgment, instead of reprimanding the boy and ordering him in future to be obedient and do his duty, he looked at the native as if he would like to give him a kiss. The Magistrate was the brother-in-law of a man for whom he had greatest respect, and who was very dear to him (President Steyn) and for that reason he would give him another chance, otherwise he would have taken him prisoner and gone and handed him over to the Germans. The Magistrate's father was one of the staunchest pillars of the Church, and if he were alive today he would be heart and soul with him in this movement and condemn the dastardly act of robbery which the Government were going to commit. The ungodly policy of General Botha had gone on long enough, and the South African Dutch were going to stand as one man to crush this unholy scandal. Some of his friends had advised him to wait a little longer until the English had received a bigger knock, but it was beneath him and his people to kick a dead dog.

"Proceeding, de Wet said: England has got her hands full enough. I hate the lies that are constantly being spread to the effect that thousands of Australians, Canadians, and Indians can be sent to fight us. Where could the English get them from? She has not enough men to fight her own battles. I am going through the town to take the following six articles, namely horses, saddles, bridles, halters, arms and ammunition, and if anybody should refuse to hand my men these articles, if they should be found in their possession, I will give him a thrashing with a sjambok. I now order the storekeepers to go and open their shops, and I will select men to go round and take whatever I require apart from the above articles and they will give receipts for what they take, and if they do not open their shops willingly, I will open them in another way.

"My advice to you English is to remain quiet in your houses and not interfere with my men. If you do not, beware when I come back. I have got my eight sons and sons-in-law here with me, and the only people left on my farm are my wife and my daughter. Anybody can go and see if they like, and request the Magistrate to give them any help they may require, if they will do so."

Russian Victory Said to Be Growing In Its Magnitude

Petrograd, Nov. 25.—It is confidently believed here that as additional reports of the fighting between the Vistula and the Warthe are received and the retreat of the Germans continues, the Russian victory will grow in magnitude. The Germans are now declared to be retreating along a forty mile line. Reinforcements are advancing from the south of Silesia, but the superiority of the Russians in numbers over the Germans, even with new troops is expected to force the Kaiser's troops back upon their own frontier for a second time. The battle line is swinging to the southwest.

London, Nov. 25.—Lieut. Graham, whose name appears among the wounded, is Alan Charles Graham, formerly A.D.C. to the Duke of Connaught.

Geneva, Switzerland, Nov. 25.—A telegram from Belfort states that the commanding officer there had a parade on Monday in honor of the British airmen, Commander Babbington and Flight Lieut. Sippe, who participated in the raid on Friedrichshafen and decorated them with the legion of honor.

Toronto, Nov. 2.—On a charge of high treason against the Empire, Paul Mauer, a young Canadian corporal in the Canadian militia, born of Austrian parents, was sent up from the police court to the assizes for trial today. Mr. W. K. Murphy, Jr., his counsel, put up the plea that the young fellow was going to visit in the States, and did not deliberately attempt to smuggle three Austrians out of Canada. The interesting feature of the case is that Mauer was acting as the government interpreter in enrolling the alien enemies at Port Hope.

Berlin, Nov. 25.—The Reichstag has received the draft of the second supplementary Imperial Budget for the year 1914. This empowers the Imperial Chancellor for the purpose of meeting extraordinary expenses, again to raise one and a quarter billion dollars in the form of credit, furthermore the Chancellor is empowered to issue treasury notes up to a hundred million dollars, for the widows and orphans, and the relief of distress.

FRENCH NEWSPAPERS NOW PRINTED IN THE TRENCHES

Paris, Nov. 25.—The French in the Argonne trenches edit a paper called "The Argone." The printing press is a battered typewriter. This sheet has a competitor, for the colonial troops also issue a paper called "Le Petit Colonial." Both report a three-act vaudeville hit called "What a Boche You Are" as having been played recently by the soldiers on a farm within range of the enemy's guns. The characters were the Kaiser, Herr Von Jagow, Von Moltke, and numerous assassins and German officers. There were many songs, with such titles as "William's Moustache," "German Truth," and "Belgian Independence" the last being sung to the tune of the Marseillaise. The authors apologize for the meagre theatrical equipment explaining soberly that the discomforts are due to the war which has broken out between France and Germany.

VELVET SUPPLY IS SEIZED FOR FRENCH ARMY TROUSERS

Amiens, France, Nov. 25.— Illness in the trenches is increasing, but it apparently is worse among the Germans than the French. German prisoners say that typhoid fever is becoming epidemic in some places.

The sound of cannonading is audible here every few days and the civil population continues somewhat nervous. For example, the director of the local branch of the Bank of France is still refusing to accept payments in silver, preferring paper, which is easier to transport.

1,500 Civilians Taken Prisoners

When the Germans evacuated Amiens they took along 1,500 civilian prisoners. A few of these have since then returned; and I met one, a market gardener, who tells me how he had escaped. Amiens is surrounded by gardens where vegetables are cultivated. As the column of prisoners passed over the Somme this man saw a young woman pushing a wheelbarrow full of to watch the procession. Then he had cabbages, and she stopped a moment an inspiration. Stopping as if to tie his shoe, he murmured:

"What's your name? quick, you can save me."

"Celestine," she replied.

"Start talking with one of us and walk a little way beside him."

The woman did as she was told and the man seized the wheelbarrow and started back down the road. Then he called --

"Well, Celestine, are you not done talking? Come along."

Thereupon he continued peacefully into the town. But when the next day he went to pay a friendly call on her who had saved him, another man came running up furiously and demanded an explanation. It was her husband, who happened also to have been in the column of prisoners, and upon hearing a stranger calling his wife familiarly by her first name he became so jealous that he took a [illegible] pretty risk and also extended [illegible] [illegible]. When he learned his [illegible] rival's story he was mollified.

Fine Trousers for War Service.

Amiens is the centre of the corduroy and velvet industry and the French authorities recently requisitioned the entire stock, and already one begins to meet in the streets soldiers wearing corduroy trousers of [illegible] [illegible]. This variety of that greatly [illegible] [illegible] the major commanding and he sent for the manufacturers and ordered them to dye all the corduroy red. They managed to explain that this was technically impossible, and soldiers still stroll about in blue, grey, green, and mauve garments.

DRAMA AND SONG AND DANCE

The Ernie Marks Stock Co., presented the Canadian Drama in four acts, "The Call of the Woods," to a large and responsive audience in the Grand Opera House last night. The play is a pretty Canadian romance, pleasingly told by Mr. Mark's versatile aggregation. Between the acts several musical numbers were rendered in a very acceptable manner. Ernie and Kittie Marks are favorites with Peterborough audiences, as evidenced by the flattering business they always play to.

The Ernie Marks Co. is here for the balance of the week, with a special matinee on Saturday at 2.30. They are giving commendable historic and musical attractions at popular prices. Spend an evening with them and forget the war

NEW SIEGE GUNS

London, Nov. 25.—A silent gun, probably of the pneumatic type, is being used by the Germans in Flanders, a report from Col. Swinton, the British "eye witness" at the front, asserts to-day. Describing conditions on the western front, Col. Swinton says:

"The cold hard weather has improved transport work and aerial scouting, but owing to the intense cold, the men are sometimes lifted stiff [illegible] the trenches when relieved. The snow shows up all roads and positions to the aerial scouts, but the [illegible] themselves may also be seen more clearly. The situation up to the [illegible] [illegible] was unchanged.

"The trenches in some cases are only forty yards apart. The opposing sides hold shooting competitions and throw packets of tobacco at one another.

ATTACKS IN ARGONNE ARE VERY VIOLENT

London, Nov. 25.—Gen. Von Hinment given out in Paris this (Tuesday) afternoon says that generally speaking the situation on November 23 showed no changes of importance.

The text of the communique is as follows: "Speaking generally, it may be said that the situation during the day of November 23rd has shown no important changes. Along the greater part of the front the enemy manifested his activity particularly by an intermittent cannonading, which, however was less spirited than on the preceding day. Nevertheless there were here and there some infantry attacks, all of which were repulsed. As we have come to expect, these attacks were particularly violent in Argonne where we gained some territory, and in the region of Four de Paris. There is nothing to report between the Argonne and the Vosges, and furthermore very heavy fog has interfered with operations. The sanitary conditions of the troops are favourable.

German Engineers Forced to Quit Work.

The Hague, Holland, November 24.—Some British warships along the coast of Belgium today got the range of Zeebrugge harbour where six German submarines are being put together, presumably for an attack on the allied fleet and the British coast. some hours the position [illegible] orously bombarded, and the German gineers forced to quit work. It is not known whether any of the submarines were hit.

Paris, Nov. 24.—The cold weather has greatly facilitated the movement artillery, both in the allied and German lines. The roads not completely inundated may now be passed, aving become partly frozen. The cessation of the rain and snow has also nabled the allied ships on the coast to aid the troops with more regularity. Zeebrugge is reported to have been vigorously bombarded today by warships, several buildings being damaged.

STEAMER HELD BY STATES

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 25.—The steamer Olson and Mahony was refused clearance from this port yesterday by Collector Davis, acting upon instructions from the Treasury Department at Washington.

The steamer had been loading a cargo of ship supplies similar to that carried from San Francisco by the steamer Sacramento reported seized off the coast of Chile by German cruisers several days ago.

The Washington order received yesterday stated that clearance papers should be refused pending a thorough examination.

ALLIES ARE WINNING TERRITORY, FLEETS BATTERING DOWN FOE'S LINE

No Infantry Attacks From North Sea to Ypres -- German Troops Again Caught Between Fire of Allies War Ships and Land Artillery -- Serious Damage Inflicted Upon Germany's So-Called Naval Base at Zeebrugge. Docks Reported Destroyed.

Paris, Nov. 25.—The official statement given out by the French war office this afternoon says:

"From the North Sea to Ypres there have been no infantry attacks.

"Between Langemarck and Zonnebeke we have gained territory.

"In the vicinity of La Bassee, the Indian troops recaptured from the enemy certain trenches which had been taken from them the evening before.

"From La Bassee to Soissons there has been almost a complete calm.

"We have made slight progress near Berry-au-Bac, and in the Argonne.

"At Bethincourt, northwest of Verdun, a German attack has been repulsed, and a suspension of hostilities requested by the enemy has been refused.

"In the region of Pont-a-Mousson our artillery found it impossible to bombard Arnaville.

"Nothing has happened in the Vosges."

London, Nov. 25.—The allied fleet is battering down the German line established along the Belgian coast. Reports today tell of the German troops being caught between the fire of the warships and the land batteries in the vicinity of Nieuport. The bombardment of Zeebrugge, which has resulted in the partial destruction of the town and the fighting on Westende, all clearly indicate the determination with which the British fleet has set to the task of curbing the ambitions which the Germans may have of establishing a base for a raid on England. Reports from Holland declare that Zeebrugge was partially destroyed by the Germans that their guns might have a clear sweep for the duel with the warships. The inhabitants of the city are in flight. Serious damage has been done by the warships.

Middelburg, Knocke and other towns of the western Belgian district have felt the main force of the British attack. Should it develop that the docks have been destroyed and Zeebrugge otherwise disabled as a naval base, a severe blow will have been struck at the German plans of operations from the Belgian coast.

MEN IN FRENCH TRENCHES GET HOT AND COLD BATHS

With the French army at the Front via Paris, Nov. 23 (delayed).—French trenches on the battle-front are real works of art. I entered and inspected the details of newly occupied works today while the soldiers were still digging.

The trenches are deep, well drained, and sanitary. At the beginning of the war French soldiers scorned to entrench more than a few inches. --- the war quickly switched to trench fighting, and France's fighting men changed their tactics accordingly. The trenches I saw were provided with spacious rest rooms and toilet, and covered bomb-proof observation chambers. Some were provided with kitchens with a system for carrying off the smoke, and even with baths and hot and cold showers.

The French are so well protected the officers in charge of the wounded told me that in the past less than 400 cases had been sent to the rear, despite the violent German attacks. On the contrary, I understand the German losses during their offensive movements continue to be enormous.

The military attaches of the foreign countries on the present tour concluded their study of the battlefields leading up to the present lines today. They are now entering the second phase of the program, inspecting the actual operations. They naturally refuse to discuss the manoeuvres, but are enthusiastic over all they have seen of the French army, its organization and fighting qualities. I personally covered the same ground and was surprised to see such a big change in the French soldiers. They are much better now than at the start of the war, proving the French the most adaptable soldier in the world.

BRILLIANT EXPLOIT OF INDIAN TROOPS ON WESTERN WAR FRONT

London, Nov. 25.—An Indian corps has retaken trenches which they lost to the Germans yesterday, and captured three German officers, over 100 men, three machine guns and one mortar. A statement from the War bureau announced today, says the general situation is declared to be unchanged.

YPRES CATHEDRAL DAMAGED

Amsterdam, Nov. 25.—Berlin despatches here today declare the Germans admit their bombardment at Ypres demolished the steeple of the cathedral there.

CURE FOR SEASICKNESS

Important Discovery is Attributed to Dr. Fischer

Dr. Joseph Fischer, the well known heart specialist of Nauheim, in a Munich medical weekly, claims to have discovered a method whereby ocean voyages will lose their terrors. According to his reports as the result of extensive experiments with sea sick passengers he found that an injection of atropin completely cured the worst cases. During a trip to New York Dr. Fischer made experiments on the way across the ocean to endeavor if possible to determine what sea sickness is and what causes it. He found that an injection of physostigmine produced the exact clinical symptoms of sea sickness, and that this was caused by an irritation of the vagus nerve. He then discovered that an injection of atropin paralyzed this artificial mal de mer. He immediately began experimenting with atropin in real sea sickness, with excellent results in the west ships. Dr. Fischer says atropin is not dangerous, and has no ill-effects.

SMOKERS IN FACTORIES

Their Carelessness Causes Many Needless Fires

It is an open question whether the careless fool or the deliberate criminal does more damage by fire. Advantage seems to lie with the fool, because he is everywhere gladly bringing down destruction, while the fire bug must go about his deadly work stealthily, at weird hours and in awkward places.

Chief among the fools who carelessly cause fires is the smoker. His blazing match is cast down still alight. His cigarette end falls into piles of paper or shavings. The burning ashes of his trusty pipe descend gently into oil vats and barrels of gunpowder. If the fool destroyed only himself, the world could bear his actions philosophically, but he usually escapes while better men perish.

In England great wealth was accumulated by a man who was shrewd enough to locate small tobacco stores opposite factory entrances, but his fortune represented the loss of many fortunes by his brother manufacturers.

Smoking should be absolutely prohibited in or about every Canadian factory, and employes breaking this rule should be dismissed. If the rule became national, manufacturers could inform each other of these dismissals and could refuse employment to persistent offenders. If it were enforced there would be fewer fires, better work would be done, and the smoker would enjoy his weed more keenly in the evening, after a day's self-denial.—Industrial Canada.

NO SALT HORSE

It Costs Huge Sum Nowadays to Provision Ocean Liners

In these days, when the high cost of living is so much in the public mind, it is interesting to know what it costs a steamship to provide the necessities of life to the hordes of passengers who cross and recross the Atlantic. The annual statement of the North German Lloyd Company throws some interesting light on the subject.

For one year the company's bill for provisions alone was $4,[illegible], while during the same period the coal man was paid $7,[illegible] for 1,[illegible] tons of coal which were shoveled into the ships' furnaces during the twelvemonth. For these two items alone—provisions and coal—the company paid the enormous sum of $12,[illegible].

The itemized provision bill showed that the butcher got $1,[illegible] for meats. This does not include fish and game; for the former the company paid an additional $239,000, while the bill for the game amounted to $412,[illegible], a total of $652,[illegible].

Preserves cost $[illegible] for the twelve months and fresh vegetables ran into the respectable figure of $126,110, while for "sundries," including bread, flour, spices, fruits and the thousand and one articles that are used in the kitchen, the company paid $1,[illegible].

More potatoes were consumed during the year than any other single article, the total amount having been 17,275,872 pounds. Flour ranked next with 6,212,152 pounds, fresh beef third with 5,760,124 pounds, while the bread was fourth with 2,[illegible] pounds. The passengers consumed 7,[illegible] eggs, 4,271,000 oranges and lemons, 797,[illegible] pounds of onions and [illegible] pounds of salt. They used [illegible] pounds of coffee and 41,729 pounds of tea and [illegible] cans of sterilized milk, to say nothing of 14,912 bottles of fresh cream.

THE GREAT LAKES

We all know in a general way that Lake Superior is the largest and Lake Ontario the smallest of the Great Lakes, but the relative facts are scarcely known to the average person. While Lake Michigan ranks second in size, being forty-five miles shorter than Lake Superior, it is twice as deep at its greatest depth, the figures being [illegible] feet for Lake Superior and 1,[illegible] feet for Lake Michigan, so that in cubical contents the latter far outranks Superior. Lake Huron's greatest depth also is a hundred feet more than that of Lake Superior, so that the greatest is not superior in everything after all.

Lake Erie and Lake Ontario are comparatively shallow, with maximum depth of 204 feet and 412 feet, and yet we should not like to fall overboard in either of them. In width—maximum figures—Lake Superior comes first with 160 miles, Huron second with 105, Michigan third with 84, Erie fourth with 60, and Ontario last with only 52 miles of greatest breadth.

In comparison with its area, Ontario leads with a drainage of 29,760 square miles for its area of 6,700, the others being Erie, drainage, 30,000, area 10,000 square miles; Michigan, drainage, 70,000, area, 22,400 square miles; and Superior, drainage, [illegible], area, 32,000 square miles. Drop in elevation is very gradual, Lake Superior being 600 feet above sea-level, Michigan 578 feet, Huron 574 feet, Erie 564 feet, and then comes a big drop to 234 feet for Lake Ontario.

How to Grow Old

Don't smile.
Suspect everybody.
Keep your wireless station tuned to rumors, trouble, gossip or misery.
Specialize the grouch habit.
Be afraid of people and things. Imaginary fear is a great producer of wrinkles.
Envy your neighbor.
When you hear of another man's good fortune, feel mean about it.
When you sit down to dinner tell your wife and the children what everything costs.
Never mind the pleasant day. Rain tomorrow.
These are sure and positive rules.

A REAL ESTATE YARN

Ex-Mayor Waugh of Winnipeg told a real estate yarn in a way that was as fetching as the story itself. A real estate agent, selling California city lots in the mid-West, entered a town when it appeared to be deserted. Discovering that the town was virtually paying its respects to one of its departed citizens, the agent, seeing no chance of doing business, joined himself to the company of mourners in the cemetery chapel. He entered as the clergyman was asking anyone who would like to say a word in memory of the deceased, let him now come forward. No one accepting the invitation, despite a repetition of the request, the real estate salesman rose and respectfully said: "Mr. Minister, as no one seems anxious to say a word for the deceased, and as I didn't know him when he was alive, perhaps you will permit me to tell you something about some California lots that I have to sell."

BUSINESS IN 2,000 B.C.

The Babylonians and Their Neighbors Knew of "Short Cuts"

The deciphering of the old Babylonian records of clay have revealed some very interesting facts with reference to business life two thousand years before Christ. In many cases these records relate to trade transactions, to business disputes, incidental to the ordinary, every-day doings of the merchants, and to their troubles as to the title to property. There are even data to show how the Babylonians and their neighbors conducted their accounting systems. Nearly four thousand years ago these people had so far progressed in "business" that it was actually found necessary to enact special laws to deal with those who were trying the "short cuts" to wealth. The young man with "prospects," like his prototypes of today, was wont to utilize these prospects in negotiation with the professional money-lender. The banker of Babylon accepted regularly and issued his brick "checks" and bill of exchange, and the law intervened, as it does to-day, to uphold the rights of property. Most careful accounts of revenue and expenditure were kept. These show in many cases that investments in loans and purchases of land, as well as other profitable dealings, were a regular part of the fiscal activities.

BUILDING MATERIALS

Valuable Resources Being Gradually Opened up in Western Canada

With the exception of British Columbia there is very little building stone produced in Western Canada. This is due to two causes. First the rocks which underlie the developed portions of the Prairie Provinces are of comparatively recent age, and are, consequently, soft in character and weather rapidly; second, there are very few rock exposures in the settled portions of these provinces, except in the Rocky Mountains and the foot hills. In British Columbia there are large potential resources of building stone. They have, however, been developed only in certain localities on the Pacific Coast, and have been confined to Cretaceous sandstone and certain volcanic rocks, situated on Vancouver Island and adjacent islands. Varieties of marble are also quarried on Texada Island.

MANGELS FOR POULTRY

A Cheap Food to Grow Where There is Room

In the production of mangels as a poultry food, very small areas, or comparatively large ones, show a decided profit when given over to the culture of these beets. They have proved to be one of the best and one of the most popular of the roots used as poultry food, because of their ease of growth and of their very heavy yielding qualities. They grow to immense size, and will produce a good many tons of roots per acre on good soil, are easily stored with little expense, and are highly relished as a part of the daily ration throughout the winter months.

Crooked Billet

The Crooked Billet—an inn which still stands upon Tower Hill, as it has stood for generations past—boasts itself as the oldest wine and spirit house in London. There is every reason to believe that the inn dates from the time of Henry VIII. Certainly no London inn is more romantic in the matter of sliding panels and concealed doors, secret rooms, and underground passages—one of them reputedly leads to the Tower—and thick walls richly carved. There is a tradition that Oliver Cromwell once lived (or lodged) at the Crooked Billet.

Constancy

The constant drop of water wears away the hardest stone.
The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the toughest bone.
The constant cooing lover carries off the blushing maid.
And the Constant Advertiser is the one who gets the Trade.

Refreshing Sleep

A glass or two of the "Beer That Builds" at bed time, will bring restful, refreshing sleep. The tired business man—the woman who is nervous and run-down—will find this tonic and food most beneficial. Rich in food value—easily digested—and extra mild.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishing this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 115.

Forced to Borrow.

LEONA DALRYMPLE

[illegible] hurt me more than I said to have Mary think so much of painting [illegible] and "At Home" days when she knew well enough that I could not afford it. It hurt me that she did not realize how blindly we were drifting behind in our domestic bookkeeping. The instalments on the new furniture were left unpaid—agents began to call with disconcerting frequency, and Mary was very much upset.

"He—he comes nearly every day," said Mary, "that furniture man. Oh, Peter, what will the neighbors say?"

"I don't care what the neighbors say," I admitted. "My chief thought is how to stop his visits in a wholly agreeable way."

"Can't you send him a check?"

"I'd like to," said I. "But a check's only good when it stands for something. I can't overdraw."

"I—I don't see why it is," said Mary tearfully.

I said nothing. Why waste words? Either Mary could not or would not understand that we were living extravagantly, that the fault was wholly hers, that she could put her shoulder to the wheel and help me economize.

"I—I don't understand financial things," she would insist when I tried to make her understand. "You know I don't, Peter. I never had to think of money at home."

"And that was a mighty bad beginning," I said pointedly.

"I don't think so," said Mary. "I don't see why women have to worry about that side. Their side is housekeeping."

"Housekeeping needs financial oil to keep the machine in order," I said.

I do not think Mary always means to be extravagant. Money slips from her fingers like rain drops from a puddle. She literally does not know where her money goes.

I gave her money for the furniture instalment—money that I saved with the most rigid economy—and it got away from her—she didn't know where.

We had a scene. I interviewed the furniture man and he refused to wait. We faced the disgrace of having our furniture taken away from us.

Mary did nothing but cry, and how in heaven's name can you reason with a crying woman. If you shoot logical facts at her when she's crying—she'll cry harder. If you shoot them when she stops crying—she'll cry again.

Mary uses her tears for a weapon. I know of no better one.

"There is only one way left," I said. "I'll ask father to go on my note at his bank."

I went to Dad and told him the facts, saving Mary as much as I could.

Dad looked grave.

"You're welcome to the money, son," he said, laying his hand on my shoulder, "but aren't you and Mary living pretty fashionably for your salary? You're travelling with a crowd that has more money—you're living up to every penny—aren't you?"

"Living one beyond the last penny," said I bitterly.

"And," said Dad, "notes are bad things. You've got to pay sooner or later, of course. It's merely postponing the day of reckoning."

I spoke of the furniture bill.

"Well, well," said Dad, "that's too bad. Let's clean up that furniture bill once for all. I'll give you a note for [illegible], Peter, and you'd better pay it in full."

I had only meant to ask Dad for [illegible] just sufficient to tide over one or two instalments. But two hundred and fifty I figured would put me safely on my feet. I thought hard for a minute and took it. Dad's eyes were very kind.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

The scientific housekeeper plans to so order her house during the hot weather that the work of cooking is reduced to a minimum. Electricity, gas, the fireless cooker have materially helped in the solution of the summer problem.

But in arranging household affairs so heat and work shall both be minimized, the housewife must not forget that there are certain food elements that must be incorporated in each meal, else the health and happiness of the family will suffer. Food must be selected that will furnish the needed heat and energy to accomplish the daily work of the individuals composing the family, and supply the material for growth and repair. The work of feeding a family is not a haphazard task. There is [illegible] defined science to [illegible].

Perhaps there has been [illegible] in selecting food in the [illegible] than in the [illegible]. [illegible] the [illegible] dessert which ends the dinner or luncheon.

The rich pastries and heavy puddings which once were every day features of the average meals are practically [illegible] by the modern cook. Fruits, jellies, custards, lighter and [illegible] concoctions have supplanted them.

Gelatine proves the foundation of so many delicious and [illegible] desserts it has gained a well defined place in the consideration of the [illegible] cook. It is sometimes overrated as nourishment, but it has many qualities of worth.

One ounce of gelatine will make one quart of jelly. The same rule of procedure in preparation obtains, no matter what kind of gelatine dessert is to be made. The gelatine is soaked in cold water, using half a cup of water to each ounce of gelatine until it is soft, and then dissolved in boiling water. The proportion of boiling water to be used depends upon what other liquid may be used in the flavoring.

Snow pudding is easily made and delicious.

The simplest rule calls for two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatine soaked in two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Dissolve in half a cup of boiling water. Add one cup of sugar and a third of a cup of lemon juice. When the mixture begins to thicken as it is stirred, add the beaten whites of three eggs and beat with an egg beater until stiff enough to drop.

This may be molded in individual molds or in one form. It should be served with a custard sauce, made with a pint of [illegible] milk poured over the beaten yolks of three eggs and a third of a cup of sugar cooked two or three minutes in a double boiler. Add a pinch of salt to the milk and flavor with vanilla.

[illegible] pudding is made as follows: Soak half a box of gelatine in a [illegible] of cold water and dissolve in a pint of boiling water. Add the juice of a lemon and an orange, half a cup of sugar and pour it over a pint of preserved berries, strawberries or raspberries. When mixed, strain a portion of the clear juice into a separate dish, and when it begins to stiffen add the beaten whites of two eggs and beat as you would the snow pudding. Pour this over the other mixture, which should be allowed to harden in a mold. Whipped cream may be served, but is not essential.

Those who like the flavor of banana [illegible] by banana [illegible].

Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatine in a quarter of a cup of cold water, and dissolve it in a cup of scalded cream. Add one cup of sugar, [illegible] three [illegible] of the bananas and a quarter-cup of lemon juice. As it thickens fold in a cup of whipped cream. Line a mold with lady fingers, add the mixture, chill and serve with whipped cream garnished with cherries.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I have been going with a fellow over a year now. He has never told me he loved me, but has written to me telling me how much he cares, and he kisses me when he comes in and goes out.

But I have always distrusted him. I have thought he was not as true as he should be, and just lately I found out I was right. He goes to see another girl [illegible] than a week. [illegible] I never went at all. When I told him I found out, he was [illegible]. He said he would [illegible]

[illegible]

While [illegible] your [illegible]. You will have nothing but [illegible] if you think of the man who has treated you so many times. He is a selfish, cold-blooded brute, and he does not love you.

No man who loves a girl will treat her as you say this man treats you. Get rid of him—get rid of him now.

It won't be half so hard as you think. The world is full of nice, decent chaps who are just hungry for some nice girl to love them deeply and sincerely. Don't waste your love on such a worthless object.

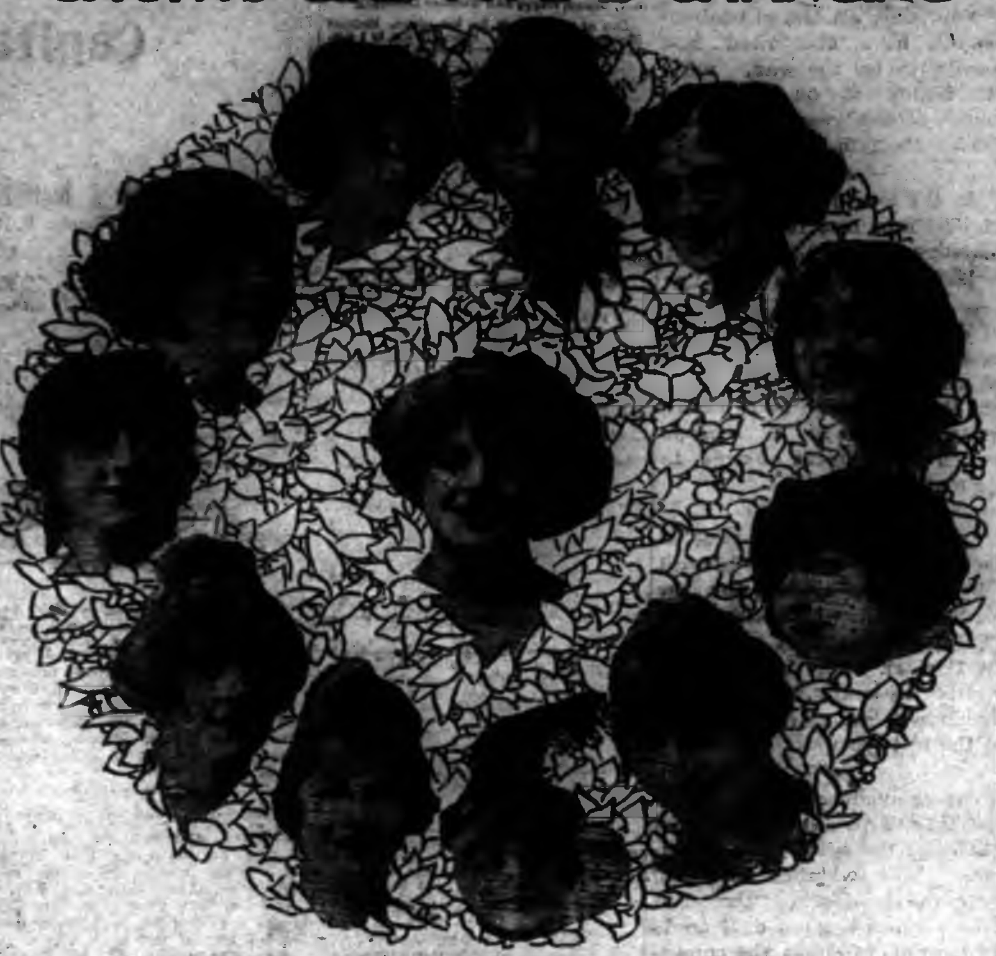
Don't try to make him over, you might as well attempt to fashion a fine cloak for Sunday wear out of a worn, old, potato sack. Let the man go to some one who will make him suffer as he is making you suffer [illegible].

And [illegible] to the right [illegible] the right time, you will want [illegible] every [illegible] cause you had.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care of this office.

CHORUS GIRL TYPE IS CHANGING



FACE AND FIGURE GIVING WAY TO CLEVERNESS

By ELEANOR AMES

There are ever-changing styles in everything, clothes, jewels, motor cars, Chorus Girls. Especially in Chorus Girls. There is more difference between the Chorus Girl of today and her sister of ten years ago than there is between motor cars representing models of the same periods.

The old style Chorus Girl is nearly extinct. Her too golden hair, excessively pink cheeks, duskily shadowed eyes, pronounced curves, colorful gowns, gorgeous and flamboyant hats and scintillating jewels, exist only in memory.

In her place is a girl who might be just out of school, as she often is, or enjoying her first year in society, or earning her living in some of the arts or professions so open to well educated women.

The old style Chorus Girl was unmistakable. The new style Chorus Girl is natural. The old style girl emphasized her shape. The new girl cultivates her head.

Every little while some theatrical wiseacre, not actively in business, declares the girl has had her day and must retire from the stage, until there is another change in the drama which will make her necessary. And, to refute such statement, some very busy manager puts on a show made up of girls. And such girls! Beautiful, clever, witty, wise, graceful, and NICE. For the Chorus Girl of today is more often NICE in the accepted meaning of the term than not.

She is just a sweet, sensible sort of girl, who has a lovely face and an attractive figure, who can dance and sing and wear clothes, and chooses the stage as the best place to have her talents appreciated. Frequently she has had a high school education. Often she has ambitions. She may want to be a leading lady, or a prima donna and she knows that there are unexpected chances, and the best policy is to be ready to nab 'em, if it comes her way.

Some of the Chorus Girls who look the most stunning from the house go home after the performance and take care of the baby, and do the mending for Friend Husband.

The fact is that brains play a very important part in the career of the new type of girl. It is an everyday remark that some girl, who is asking for a chance, is "pretty enough and good figure, but she has no brains."

Speak her name as lightly as you please, and allot her a place in the froth of life, but the fact remains, when you know facts, that the Chorus Girl, in the modern play which needs her talents, has to have a lot of ability—has to be an all-round, clever, active and intelligent young person.

An inventory of one of the big Broadway successes this past season proved that one-third of the chorus girls were studying for some profession. One was taking a course in architecture. Another was studying dress designing. Several were working hard to cultivate their voices, and had dreams of going abroad to try for grand opera. Two were making a specialty of interior decorating, and one had several commissions for fitting up small apartments in an apartment hotel. Half of them were studying languages, French, German, Spanish and Italian.

The old style girl was conspicuous. The new type of girl is dignified and reserved and natural and spontaneous.

Neither one is perfect, as there is no perfection in this world, but if, when the old order changes, as change it will, it is always as much for the better as in the style of Chorus Girls, the world will not deteriorate.

Great Novels in a Nutshell

GEORGE ELIOT'S "THE MILL ON THE FLOSS"

CONDENSED BY AUGUSTA SHELBY

Close to the town of St. Oggs, where the Ripple flows into the Floss, stands Dorlcote Mill. On the green banks, by the never resting wheel, Maggie Tulliver loved to wait for Brother Tom, her hero and "big sweetheart."

Maggie was very lonesome when Tom went away to school, and she often went to visit him. There she met Philip Wakem, puny, white-faced and hunch-backed, and learned to like him. She did not love him, how could she, when she did not know what love was? But Philip loved Maggie with all his heart.

It had taken all their father's ready money to send Tom to this good school, and soon he became involved in a law suit that threatened to take even the mill away. Pivart, who had lands higher up the river, was taking water to irrigate them, and Mr. Tulliver went to law to stop him. Philip's father was Mr. Pivart's lawyer. Consequently, out of their fathers' quarrels there developed a [illegible] between Tom and Philip.

It made Maggie [illegible] and when her father commanded her not to see Philip [illegible] him when she went to tell Tom that he must leave school—for lawyer Wakem had ruined Tom most. The blow had fallen on their father. The law suit had been decided against him, and he had lost Dorlcote Mill, the land and everything. Nothing was left.

That night, when Tom and Maggie got home, they found the sheriff in possession of the house, and there was a debt against my father, besides, for [illegible]. Tom bravely took the debt upon himself and vowed to earn the money to clear his father's name. Against his will, Mr. Tulliver remained as Mr. Wakem's manager at the mill.

In the long months that followed Maggie sometimes met Philip as her walks through the lovely fields. He asked Maggie to marry him. She refused, and they parted, but Maggie had learned that she really loved Philip—and she told him so. It was only their fathers' quarrel that kept them from marrying.

In a few years Tom had paid his father's debt. But that was only the silver lining that lightened the black cloud that hung over the family. One day Mr. Tulliver met Mr. Wakem and they came to blows. Mr. Tulliver threw his rival from his horse, but the excitement ruptured his heart, and, in a few hours, he was dead.

Five years passed in Maggie's troubled life. She had grown into a beautiful girl. Philip still loved her, but was kept from a distance, and then Stephen Guest came upon the scene. Guest was one of Philip's young employers, who now owned Dorlcote Mill, and was also an engaged man, but he fell in love with Maggie.

Maggie learned to love young Guest, but she would not marry him. She felt that his engagement kept them apart, equally with her promise to Philip. And yet Maggie and Stephen often met.

One day they went rowing on the Floss, and Stephen let the boat drift so far below the mill that they could not get back that night. He pleaded his love so ardently that Maggie listened, and, together they took ship to Scotland, to be married. But, when dawn came, Maggie declared she could never marry Stephen, and, despite his heart-broken pleadings, she left him, and returned to her own home.

It was a sad home coming. Tom would not let her return to his house, and so Maggie, under the blackest cloud a woman can know, took up her residence in a boarding house in the town. Though all the world turned against Maggie, her mother and Philip still remained true to their love for her. A few months of bitter suffering and [illegible] came to Maggie, and then the end of it all.

One night, in her bedroom, while reading a letter from Philip, she heard the sound of rushing waters. The Floss had broken its banks. An empty rowboat, crashing against the shutters, gave Maggie her chance of escape.

Climbing into the boat she pulled across the waste of waters to try and rescue her mother and her brother Tom. Her mother had gone away for the night, and so was safe, but Maggie got Tom into the boat. They were together once more.

Half-way to safety a vast mass of wreckage, that spanned the stream, closed in upon them and crushed their boat. In each other's arms, forgiven and forgiving, Maggie and Tom disappeared under the yellow flood.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why You Rest the Best Sleeping on the Right Side

By DR. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

Sleep has through the ages been one of the greatest mysteries of life. It has been sought by the worried, wooed by the wicked, studied by the scientists, encouraged by poisons, hypnotism and unnatural practices, and investigated by everybody.

Almost all investigators are agreed that rhythmic movements of the circulation and respiration are essential to sound sleep. Disturbed, restless slumber is indicated, if not often caused, by irregular breathing, palpitation and spasmodic muscular movements. Of the many physical misdemeanors liable to unsettle a sound sleeper, none is more frequent than turning on the "wrong side" or resting on the back. Children, until they are 12 or 14, are able with comfort to sleep on either side, but from 70 to 80 per cent. of their elders sleep best on their right sides.

Why is this so? How is it you are more refreshed and contented after seven or eight hours of oblivion on your right side, than an equal period of restlessness on your back or your left side? The answer is a complex one, and includes hypotheses as well as facts.

Except in some 10 or more per cent. of individuals, sleeping on the right side means rest on the divan-like, soft, billowy pad of muscles, always thicker on that side in right-handed people than on the back or left side. Sleep on the right side removes pressure on the diaphragm of nature's true liver pad; it obviates all interference with the stomach sadly filled with late hour [illegible] from the gilded lobster palaces of the pale White Way, and of not the least moment is the remoteness of any disturbance of the heart action—a not uncommon cause of discomfort to many persons when lying on the left side.

What a Snore Is.

A snore is nothing more nor less than a form of stertor or noisy breathing. As the rhythmical inspiration and expiration take place through the open mouth, snoring may be prevented by gluing a bit of sticking plaster or fly paper over the closed lips.

In snoring, the moving waves of air impinge upon the soft palate and the little finger of flesh called the uvula, connected with the roof of the mouth and cause the muscles to vibrate. This rate of tremulo vibration is sufficient to cause a snore.

To lie on the back is more or less conducive to snoring. The reason is not far to seek. When the body is relaxed and symmetrically placed, the soft tissues of the cheeks become, if possible, even more flabby than when you sleep on the side. The part played by the bellows-like cheeks in causing snores has been generally overlooked. To put it mildly and modestly, I believe I am the first observer to call attention to the important role taken by the cheeks in snoring.

Any one who has witnessed as many instances of stertorous breathing and the accompanying blowing in and out of the paralyzed cheek in cases of apoplexy as I have, cannot but conclude that snores are caused as much by the relaxed cheek muscles as by other factors. True enough, any sort of nasal obstruction such as adenoids, thickened bones and membranes, overstuffed tonsils and such abnormalities, all tend to incite the bugle calls of the wee sma' hours. But the inevitable cause of the snore is, nevertheless, a complete relaxation of the cheeks, glottis, uvula and soft palate.

How to Cure Snoring.

Now, though a man may be immunized against most diseases, by the proper methods of health building, and an insomniac may by physical exercises be made to sleep, what can be done to prevent snoring? Well, much may be done. The solution can be read from the explanation of its cause. If lack of muscular tone has as much to do with snoring as other causes, such as resting upon the back, a cure may be effected by the simple procedure of restraining the one cause and removing the other. Thus by certain muscular gymnastics, such as blowing exercises, slapping the cheeks, rolling large marbles or licorice candies in the mouth, gargling and vocal training, the soft parts of the mouth become greatly raised in tonicity. Thus there is little chance for snoring, even though the mouth remains open.

What Back Sleeping Is.

Too much cannot be said in praise of breathing movements or physical culture gymnastics that cause deep respirations. Complete oxidation of the blood means proper tension in the muscles. Lots of breathing space in the nose and throat preclude the gaping-jaw habit. Close your mouth and lengthen your life, as well as save your neighbor's peace of mind.

Sleep is a defensive mechanism for the conservation of bodily resources. Reciprocally, automatically and vicariously, the poisons that accumulate in the tissues during waking hours produce in the living cells certain antagonistic juices or anti-fatigue toxins which lull to repose while destroying, like Mrs. Shelley's Frankenstein, the very things that created them.

As for back sleeping, it is not much better than backbiting and backsliding. Strengthening the good right arm, the mighty biceps, the hamstrings and the Olympic right side, will soon rid your relatively sensitive back from being the body's couch. If it does not, smear a bit of mustard on it a few nights, and I'll wager a can of sardines you will have no more sleeping on your back.

Some doctors recommend that some hard substance be fastened at the small of the back—for instance, say a towel with a large knot tied so as to be in the middle of the back when one turns over, or some similar device will have a tendency to prevent sleeping on the back. There is a story of a [illegible] man who fastened his good mother's biscuit cutter to his back, by means of a towel placed around his waist, and no further reports were received from him.

The Good Night Story

The Empty Boot—By VERNON MERRY

In the very long ago, when Evil still appeared upon the earth in person, a rich man went up to his treasury and, as he closed the door, something knocked, not on the door, but upon his heart. A voice spoke: "Have you been good to the poor; have you fed the hungry? Or are you content with your life and want more gold?"

The rich man had no time to answer, for there came another knock, this time on the door. He shouted, "Come in," and there stood a poor neighbor, who had come to him as a last and hopeless resort. All of the poor man's family were starving and he pleaded with the rich man to lend him four quarts of corn. The rich man refused to lend, but offered to give him eight quarts if he would promise to spend three nights beside his grave, when he was dead. The poor man did not like this, but he had to have the corn, so he promised.

The very next day the rich man died and was buried. The poor man found it hard for him to go and spend the night beside the rich man's grave, but he had promised and so he went. He spent that night without anything happening, and the second night passed in the same quiet way.

The third night, as he was sitting there by the rich man's grave, a soldier came into the graveyard. He frightened the poor man at first, but, when he had told the soldier why he was watching there, the soldier agreed to keep him company. Everything passed quietly until the church clock boomed the stroke of twelve, and then there came a rushing through the grass.

The poor man and the soldier looked up and there stood the Evil One himself. "Get off that grave," he ordered, "I have come for my friend the hard-hearted rich man."

But the comrades would not rise. Whereupon the Evil One offered them a purse of gold, but they refused. At last the soldier agreed to get up if he was given enough gold to fill his boot. The Evil One agreed, but, not having enough gold with him, went away to get it. Then the soldier cut off the sole of his boot and hung the boot on a grave with the foot in the grass.

When the Evil One came back he poured the gold into the boot, but it did not fill it; he had to go back for more. But the more he put in the less full seemed that boot—all the gold fell through into the grass. At last the Evil One grew tired and threatened them with bodily injury, and, just as he was about to strike, the first faint rays of dawn appeared in the sky and he was forced to fly back whence he came.

Whereupon the poor man and the soldier took the gold from out the grass and divided it into two equal parts. Half they gave to the poor. Upon the remainder they lived together in happiness all the rest of their lives.

Confusion in Mexico

(Boston Herald)

All advices received yesterday by the Washington government from its agents in various parts of Mexico contributed for showing a confused, chaotic situation. Mexico has been particularly unfortunate in the fact that its recent years of revolutionary struggle have brought no deliverer to the front. A contest for supremacy is now waged between Carranza, who has proved lacking in judgment, decision and disinterestedness, and the soldier Villa with an apparent genius for military service, but entirely unschooled in the principles of government, ignorant and unscrupulous, possibly with a vague sympathy for the common people from whom he sprang, but fitted only for such position as must be maintained by force. The other men at present conspicuous in Mexican affairs are comparatively unknown outside of their own country, and presumably are mostly adventurers and self seekers.

Few lucid conclusions can be drawn from the current news. Gen. Gutierrez, selected as provisional president by the Aguascalientes convention, has directed that Villa shall retain command of all the troops under the authority of the Convention —which Villa probably would do whether so commissioned or not. Gen. Obregon, remaining loyal to Carranza is reported to have declared war against Villa, the latter moving steadily with an army in the direction of the capital, and the Carranza following is evacuating Mexico City, for what cause or purpose is unexplained. The only immediate outlook is for more internal trouble for Mexico, with which this nation will not interfere if intervention can be avoided. The American people, enlightened by current events elsewhere, can have no appetite for the long and costly war which would be essential for Mexico's subjugation.

Football and Patriotism

When 70,000 people filled the "bowl" at New Haven, U.S.A., last Saturday all wars and rumors of wars save that on the gridiron were forgotten for the time being, submerged by the interest of the inter-collegiate contest. But if football is really subversive of patriotism, if that strenuous sport is conducive to carelessness as to national safety, even to individual cowardice, the fact is as surprising as it is lamentable. Such an effect is not believable, although the cable dispatches tell of indignation now poured on the formerly popular game by a great part of the British press.

It seems that recruiting rallies undertaken at the English games have entirely failed. Fifteen thousand persons were at a London match, and not a man in the crowd would enlist although fervid appeals were made for recruits. At Nottingham the attendance was [illegible]000 and the crowd cheered the players but nobody would enlist. The Pall Mall Gazette is moved to declare that "it is time to eradicate the football cancer." But is the fault at all with the sport — does football interest stifle love of country? The conclusion may be fair that the games have nothing to do with the success or failure of the efforts of the military authorities to fill the gaps in the fighting ranks. Nearly all the eligible men of England disposed to enlist may already have done so. In the American Civil War recourse to the draft became obligatory when the struggle was hardly more than half over patriotic as was the general sentiment of the North. The story of the football game is strongly suggestive that the necessity for conscription may be early perceived by the British government.

Magic "Nerviline" Cures Toothache, Earache.

IT RELIEVES EVERY EXTERNAL PAIN.

Cures Colds, Coughs, Sore Throat, Tight Chest and Hoarseness.

It's when sickness comes at night, when you are far from the druggist or the doctor, that's when you need Nerviline most. Experienced mothers are never without it. One of the children may have toothache. Without Nerviline—a sleepless night for the entire household. With Nerviline the pain is relieved quickly. It may be earache, perhaps a stiff neck, or one of the kiddies coughing with a bad chest cold. Nothing can give quicker results than vigorous rubbing with this old-time family remedy.

Nerviline is too useful, too valuable to be without. For lumbago, lame back, sciatica or neuralgia there is no liniment with half of Nerviline's power to penetrate and ease the pain.

As a family safeguard, as something to ward off sickness and to cure the minor ills that will occur in every family, to cure pain anywhere you can find nothing to compare with old-time Nerviline, which for forty years has been the most widely used family remedy in the Dominion. The most economical size is the large 50c. family size bottle, small trial size 25c. All dealers sell Nerviline.

Capable Service

On the eve of the relinquishment of his post to his successor, the press of Paris has been unanimous in praise of the devotion alike to duty and to the cause of humanity proved by Myron T. Herrick, for the last two and a half years Ambassador of the United States to France. Mr. Herrick might have returned home earlier, but he pleased the American administration by continuing in charge of affairs with which he was familiar when the crisis arrived in France and Paris was threatened with siege; and as one of the leading statesmen of France has written, "without forcing his diplomatic reserve, he showed himself attentive to dangers overhanging the city, and anxious to alleviate the sufferings of a people the victims of the worst of calamities."

Mr. Herrick formerly governor of Ohio, has long been conspicuous in American finance and politics. The ability with which he has represented his country abroad in a time of peculiar difficulty has verified the wisdom of his choice for so important a diplomatic post. Experience has shown that neither of the great parties in that great country to the south of us lacks men qualified to serve the nation's interests abroad, their capabilities finding finest expression when extraordinary conditions beset the government to which they are accredited.

Noiseless Window Shades

Heavy winds send the window shades flying out into the room and keep up such a noise that a lot of people simply cannot sleep. Here's a way to stop the noise. Instead of attaching the shade fixtures to the window frame get a pair of blocks as deep as the distance from the outer part of your window frames to the top edge of the top sash. Fasten these to the top of the top sash and then attach your fixtures to them. Then when you lower your window from the top the shade will come down, too, and there will be nothing to blow.

LAWLESS LONDONERS

Mr. Justice Darling Likens Modern Doings to Those of Middle Ages

A glimpse of lawless life in the neighborhood of Brick lane, London's famous Sunday dog market, was afforded the Old Bailey, which knows it well, when Mr. Justice Darling sentenced two Hornsey men, named Daniel Curtis and Edward Curtis, to twelve months' hard labor, a third, Richard Curtis, to eighteen months', and a member of their gang, John Craig, to three months. The affair arose out of "civil war" between rival gangs in the district. One gang struck the notion of raising funds by blackmailing a number of street betting men who "did business" there. The Curtises and Craig were four of the betting men.

Manifestly shy of calling in the police against the blackmailers, the betting men set about collecting a force of mercenaries, whom they employed to fight the gang. The rivals knew no law against each other but the law of the strongest. One night the betting men and some of their mercenaries caught a man named Charles Callaghan alone in a public house. He was one of the men whom they accused of forcing a levy upon them. Callaghan was immediately attacked, beaten on the head with an iron bar, and shot. He was left in the street, and eventually carried to hospital, where he recovered from his wounds, while the police ran down the four prisoners.

Addressing the prisoners, the Judge said: "You live in the midst of lawless men, and apparently in order to carry on your business you have to pay blackmail to a gang of people of whom Callaghan is one. The state of society in this part of London is very much that of many mediæval towns, very much the state of Verona, when the Montagues and Capulets flourished, very much the state of Florence at one time.

"It has, I daresay, certain picturesque attractions for you and men like you, and people who choose to go there and write about them, but in England you cannot be allowed to shoot people and beat people on the head, even if they do get their living by blackmail.

"This man was very grievously wounded; had he died all four of you would probably have been hanged—and society would not have had cause to regret your disappearance."

Devonshire Apple Cake

One pound of flour, six ounces of lard or butter, three ounces of moist sugar, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, six large sour apples (peeled, cored, and cut to the size of currants), one beaten egg, sufficient milk to make a stiff dough. Rub lard or butter into flour, add the rest of the dry ingredients and apples, then the egg and milk. The paste must be dry, as the apples moisten it in baking. Put it into a flat tin well greased, and bake in a moderate oven from thirty to forty minutes. When done, cut in squares, split open, butter, and dust with sugar. Join together again, and serve hot, or they are equally good cold.

Baked Tadcaster Pudding

Mix eight ounces of finely shredded suet (or six ounces of butter or sweet dripping is very nice) with one pound of flour, a little salt, three teaspoonfuls of yeast powder, a quarter of a pound of currants, a quarter of a pound of chopped raisins, two ounces of moist sugar, a little nutmeg and spice together. Then dissolve a tablespoonful of golden syrup in about three-quarters of a pint of milk. Stir the mixture into a stiff batter. Thickly coat a pie-dish with butter or dripping, pour the mixture in; it should be two or three inches thick. Bake for about one and a half hours in a moderate oven.

General Contractor, Belle Bay, P. E. I.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs — all young foxes— good for at least 30 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island famous foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William McDonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to skilfully manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining $90,000 worth of stock for themselves. $30,000 worth has already been disposed of, leaving $200,000 to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 5 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($75,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $300,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will not ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them there will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs shipped from Prince Edward Island ranches to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four foxes this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., still should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc., but after all the one object that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain English what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business— and then judge for yourself [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown daily newspapers.

THE FOUR SIGNALS

Some Practical Knowledge Simply Stated For the Emergency Nurse

Pulse, heart, temperature, and breathing; these are the four signals, and if you were asked, in a press of work, to take charge of a wounded or sick person until a trained nurse could arrive you would be useless almost without a knowledge of the four danger signals.

The pulse is due to a momentary distension of an artery, caused by the contraction of the left ventricle of the heart. "Feeling the pulse" is therefore to know the strength, regularity, and rate of the heart's action.

In health, for an adult man, the pulse rate is about 72 per minute (sitting), 80 (standing), down to 65 (reclining). So a pulse rate of 65-80 is within the range of health. Women have, generally, a quicker pulse than men, and a tall man a quicker pulse than a short man. In illness the pulse either slows, as in injuries, compression of the brain, etc., or quickens, as in fevers.

To take the pulse at the wrist use your right hand to feel the left pulse, or vice versa. Place three fingers (the fore, the middle, and the ring) of the right hand on the artery about half an inch from the outer, or thumb, side of the patient's forearm, and with the central of the three fingers one inch above the front of the wrist; at the same time placing the thumb of the hand behind the forearm, so as to support it.

Hold a watch, with a second-hand, in your free hand, and count the pulse rate for a minute, noting at the same time any intermissions or irregularities.

To take the temperature needs care. A mistake would mislead the doctor.

In health the temperature follows a well defined course through the day. From 4-6 a.m. it is at its lowest, about 97.5. As the morning advances the temperature rises to the normal of 98.4. After noon and towards evening in healthy persons it may rise a little farther above the normal, and then gradually decline again.

The temperature may be taken in the mouth by placing the bulb beneath one side of the tongue. The patient's lips must be closed, and he must breathe through his nose, and neither open his mouth to speak or breathe whilst the temperature is being taken. Unless the thermometer is marked "half minute" or "one minute," etc., it must be kept in place for four minutes at least. If there are difficulties in taking a mouth temperature, then the bulb of the thermometer is placed deeply in the recess of the arm-pit with its stem projecting.

Use a "clinical" thermometer; it is self-registering. If the temperature falls below 96 the patient may collapse; below 94 is alarming, and 93 means a fatal issue.

Respiration, or the rate of breathing, in health varies from 15 to 18 or 20 per minute in an adult. To take the rate of breathing you stand, unknown to patient, watch in hand, and count for a minute the rise and fall of the chest, or the number of breaths taken.

Absolute exactitude and written records are the two essentials if the danger signals are to avert danger.

ARGENTINE'S BIG STAKES

Horse Racing Flourishes Because of Huge Purses Offered

Don Miguel Martinez de Hoz who purchased Craganour, favorite in the Derby race made famous by the suicide of a suffragette, is no believer in the British racing system. He has an infinitely higher opinion of the methods of the Argentine racing authorities, and he attributes the flourishing condition of the breeding industry in that country entirely to the generous stakes put up for competition.

"In the Argentine," he pointed out, "the smallest stake for which we race is $3,000, and the highest is over $90,000, so that an owner with a decent string of horses can make from $100,000 to $150,000 a year from his racing ventures. The source from which these huge stakes spring is the totalizator system, which belongs entirely to the Jockey Club. The value of the stakes are increased enormously by the profits derived from the totalizator, and there is yet a surplus which is utilized for the buying of remounts, the assistance of hospital funds, and other institutions.

"In England such things are not possible, because you are practically racing your own money."

The price paid for Craganour, by the way, was $150,000.

Easy to Move Stove

Legs have been invented for stoves which contain casters, so mounted that pressure on levers projects them and enables the stoves to be moved easily.

Protecting Wage Earners

It is estimated that 90 per cent. of industrial accidents can be eliminated, 60 per cent. by the proper training of workers.

GERMAN FORCES WILL REQUIRE REFORMATION

London, Nov. 26—Gen. Von Hindenburg's army, which last week was sweeping toward Warsaw in its second advance through Russian Poland, to-day is reported from Petrograd to be in retreat after having experienced serious reverses inflicted by the Russians, who, with reinforcements, made a brilliant stand between the Vistula and Warthe Rivers.

While the extent and the completeness of the German defeat was not known here, the very fact that Gen. Von Hindenburg had been checked was by far the biggest feature of today's war news. The same despatches that tell of his reverses, however, say that the German reinforcements were being brought up so that another great battle is likely to develop on a line nearer to the frontier of Posen, where the Germans will have the same chances of renewing a vigorous offensive as had the Russians in the present instance.

Gen. Von Hindenburg has about 400,000 men, but if the Petrograd report can be accepted, they have been separated, badly cut up, and thousands taken prisoners, so these German forces will require reformation and rest after the severe punishment inflicted upon them following their daring advance into the heart of Russian Poland.

Accepting the official reports of the Russians as correct, the tide of the great battle in Poland has turned in their favor. How important the change is and to what extent it will influence future operations in the struggle between Russia and Germany was not apparent today.

The Russian War Office, whose statements were vague and non-committal for several days, when the tension was running highest and the Germans to all accounts, were pressing swiftly toward Warsaw, made today its first definite announcement concerning the crucial battle. It stated that between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers, the Germans had retreated.

GETTING THROUGH COLLEGE

How Some of Canada's Future Professional Men Pay Their Way

Students tell wonderful stories of their struggles to earn money to put them through college. They turn their hands to almost everything with the one object in view of making enough during vacation times to pay their board and tuition fees, as well as provide them with books and leave a little margin for pleasure.

"I travelled all over the province for a well known book firm," said a senior man of McGill University, "but in spite of all my persuasive powers, and they used to say in the Mock Parliament that I could talk for weeks I only came out a hundred dollars to the good. This won't last long in the present time of high cost of living, but the sister says I have got to get my degree so I am sure she will come to my assistance."

Another man, a Law student, who is proficient on the typewriter, boasts that he cleared a thousand dollars typing manuscript for professors, and people whom he learned were going to deliver lectures.

"I kept my eye on the papers," said this student, "and as soon as I saw the name of Mr. So and So published as going to give a lecture, I paid him an official visit. Being a fairly rapid shorthand writer and not asking too much for my labor I was in nearly every case successful. I found that when I mentioned I was working my way through McGill my hearers were always sympathetic and in many instances they introduced me to others who had work to do."

The favorite goods are, however, aluminum goods, and one budding Medico tells unblushingly of the far-fetched yarns that he told the country people of the wonderful nature and enduring character of the goods manufactured from this substance.

"I made money," said the student, "and I earned many a good solid meal by taking a turn with the farmers at their work."

Selling wallpaper, acting as waiters on boats, porters on the railroads, dining car conductors, checking at steamship sheds, and furnishing copy for some of the newspapers, are also means used by some of the students to raise the required money. A few also secured positions as teachers in the West, and quite a number of Science men got employment on survey work on the railways and in the mines.

Heaviness of Platinum

Platinum is the heaviest commercial metal known. Its specific gravity is 21.5, as compared with 19.26 for pure gold and 10.53 for silver. Briefly, platinum is 21½ times as heavy as water, more than twice the weight of silver and heavier, bulk for bulk, than pure gold. It is softer than iron, but somewhat harder than copper.

A free telephone office for the use of pilots and ships' officers has been opened on Platte Fougere, the wave-lashed lighthouse guarding the rocky approach to St. Peter Port, Guernsey. The instrument, which calls up Guernsey, is gained by climbing a forty-two rung ladder.

BOXER'S BIG SALARY

The Thrifty Frenchman Finds the Ring Stepping Stone to Fortune

Georges Carpentier, the French pugilistic champion, is very fond of stage life which his success enabled him to take up; also he is proud of his ability to make a huge income by his ring and theatrical engagements.

"It is very strange to be making so much money in such a pleasant way," said Carpentier. "When my manager discovered me I was 15½ years old, and I was earning only a franc a day in a coal mine. When he wished me to go in for training my parents were unwilling to lose even that amount of money, but he said he himself would pay the franc a day.

"In my first year I made $100, in the next $750, in the third $5,000, in the fourth $25,000, and now I am making about $50,000 a year. My parents, to whom I gave my first $5,000, rejoice very much in my success, and, indeed, I think there are few who at my age make as much money as I have been able to."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

AN ECCENTRIC PLAYER

Recruit Catcher Had Queer Ideas and Had Trouble With Trunk

Most ball players have peculiarities of one kind or another. But it remained for a player named Evans, a former Cub catcher recruit, to have a number of them. On a spring training trip several years ago he had the boys wondering what he would do next. Evans was a confirmed pipe smoker. It was seldom out of his mouth. When the other men would be rehearsing on the ball field Evans would be sitting on the bench pulling at his pipe. One day Frank Chance, becoming irritated, ordered him to get behind the plate during batting practice.

The recruit lazily donned his shinguards and chest-protector. Then, hanging his short black pipe between his teeth, he caught for nearly fifteen minutes, puffing away in a most contented manner.

At Vicksburg, Miss., one day some of the Cubs noticed Evans dig up a little dirt near the plate, place something carefully in the hole and cover it up with exceeding care. He repeated this trick at every stop. Finally they discovered it was a signet ring. He chose this method of protecting it against loss or injury.

He also carried an old trunk along on the trip, bearing a large sign. The motto was, "Handle with care." In this he had nearly five quarts of beef, iron and wine for the purpose of building up his system. He had nearly as much dope as Trainer Semmens had for the entire team. This extract he took religiously three times a day.

One trip his trunk was badly mauled by the baggagemen and several of the bottles broken. It was exceedingly annoying but Evans insisted on lugging the affair along until Secretary Charley Williams objected.

"The railroads absolutely refuse to accept that trunk," said Williams.

So Evans had to purchase another. On this he placed a new sign. It read, "Handle with care, you smashed my last one."

GOLF HAS MANY THRILLS

Making a Hole in One Stroke Enough to Make Any Player Excited

It has been said that golf is not lively or exciting; that it presents few opportunities for either individuals or outsiders to enthuse; that it is too quiet, etc. While there are those ardent devotees of driver and cleek willing to admit that their favorite diversion is not wildly exciting; that opportunities rarely occur for partisan crowds to display their feelings, it is also claimed that golf unquestionably has its thrills.

For those having once experienced the sensation of making a hole in 1 it is needless to attempt to describe the feeling of exhilaration experienced by the lucky player as he sees his ball disappear in the cup. Many holes have been made in a single stroke that have always been more or less doubtful. Players have played over rising ground to blind greens and after searching for a considerable length of time have at last found "a ball" in the hole. On such occasions there is always an element of uncertainty.

Furthermore, jokes have been played on unsuspecting golfers, probably the most cruel one being that at the expense of a fat man and woman at a match several years ago. As a passerby stood near one of the greens of the course in question he noticed two balls, one after the other, land on the green in front of him. They had evidently come from the tee, which could not be seen from the green. Scarcely had the balls come to rest ere a couple of boys dashed from behind a clump of bushes, picked up the balls, dropped them in the hole, and scampered away as quickly as they had come. In a few moments the pair unsuspectingly came to the green and began looking for the balls. Finally the man casually beckoned his companion to see what he saw.

"Great Scott!" he shouted. "We have both holed out in one. Did you ever see anything like that?" Then they proceeded to rush to the club house to tell the wonderful tale, which undoubtedly they are still relating.

Clean pots and pans with
GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

Gold Dust is sold in the 5c size and large packages. The large package means greater economy.

"Let the GOLD DUST TWINS do your work"

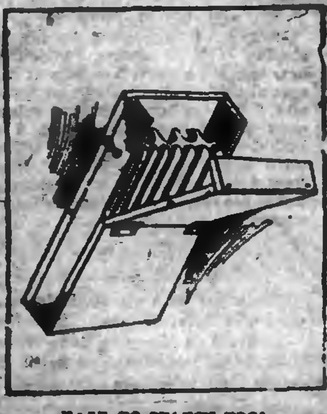
Made by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, LIMITED, Montreal.
Makers of Fairy Soap (the oval cake)

In memory of Samuel Langhorne Clemens, "Mark Twain," a monument has been erected at Hannibal, Mo. The monument is so situated that it overlooks the spot on the Mississippi river made famous by the humorous activities of "Huckleberry Finn" and "Tom Sawyer."

GOOD TOOL HOLDER

Grooves Keep Bits or Chisels of Various Sizes Apart

This convenient box for holding tools will keep separate a number of bits or chisels of different sizes, and each can be selected and removed in a twinkling. The box is a flat, rectangular affair, with a lid that consists of half of the top and one end, as the cut shows. The inside of the box is divided into two by a lengthwise partition, with different size grooves on both sides. This partition terminates within a few inches of the open end of the box so that when the lid is opened the ends of the tools project beyond it and make them easily accessible. With each tool separate, as in this receptacle, the nicking of points and edges, as happens when they are jumbled up together, is obviated.



EASY TO SELECT TOOL.

FROM ROD AND CHAIN TO PROUD POSITION

Lieutenant-Governor Hendrie of Ontario Started Busy Career With Surveyor's Gang

It was no surprise to those who have watched the career of the man when Lt.-Col. John Strathearn Hendrie, C.V.O., M.P.P., was elevated to the distinction of Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario. It was one of the essential steps in the crowning of a career which gave great promise ever since the youthful days when he started out upon the morning highway of life by carrying a rod and chain for an engineer's gang on railway construction.

Of the physical type which gives evidence of latent power, of the mental capacity which has enabled him to grasp great problems in the commercial world, of the mixing type which has permitted him to gain many tokens of the popular esteem of his fellow-citizens, of the political acumen which has won the utmost approval of his fellows, John Strathearn Hendrie is now reaping the harvest of his earlier industry.

Still in His Prime

Colonel Hendrie is still young in years for a man who has [illegible] many more years of [illegible].

There is Scotch blood in his veins, both parents having emigrated from Ayrshire, and he is also of [illegible] descent. His education was received at the Hamilton public and private schools and at Upper Canada College, after which [illegible] Works.

COL. THE HON. J. S. HENDRIE

Hamilton, being Col. Hendrie's home city, gave him all his honors, except the last. His business enterprises have been diversified, but it was not until he was chosen Mayor of Hamilton in 1901 that his worth as a citizen were recognized in tangible form.

Elected to the Legislature

The following year saw him in the Provincial Legislature as a follower of Sir James Whitney. [illegible] from the Ontario Government came in 1905 when he was selected a Commissioner for the Hydro-Electric, and the same year saw him admitted to the Cabinet as a Minister without portfolio.

In and about the chambers of Parliament Col. Hendrie is looked upon as a silent man, [illegible], and when upon the floor of the House [illegible] of verbosity. One who has watched the proceedings of Parliament for years [illegible] for the statement that in his last four sessions he did not make a speech in the House. One might see him sauntering into the chamber hours after the deliberations began, apparently paying little attention to the routine of Parliament, sinking back in his chair and watching with the attitude of one to whom all this was an old story. But while Col. Hendrie watched in silence, he also worked.

As a Soldier

In the military world his ardor was felt for years. His first activity came when he linked his interests with the 4th Battery of Canadian Field Artillery, in which company he had risen to the rank in 19[illegible]. It is interesting to note that Col. Hendrie has always been an advocate of compulsory military training. In private life a fondness for horses has been one of his features, and he has done much to promote [illegible] sport. He is a member of many clubs and also a past president of the Canadian Artillery Association, the decoration of C.V.O. coming during his command of the Canadian Artillery at Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee in 1897.

THE STRAIGHT EDGE

One of the most difficult problems in practical mechanics is to make a straight edge. How difficult it is may be judged from an incident that occurred in the shop of a celebrated astronomical instrument maker.

A patron asked what would be the price of "a perfect straight edge of glass thirty-six inches long."

"It cannot be made perfect," said the instrument maker; "but it could probably be made with a limit of error amounting to only a fraction of a wave length of light."

"How much would that cost?"

"About $40,000."

It turned out that the customer wanted the straight edge for a scraper, and that an error of one sixty-fourth of an inch would not bother him.

THE ICEBERG DANGER

New Devices for Warning Ship of Approaching Danger

Since the terrible Titanic disaster, scientists and engineers have devoted much time and attention to devising means by which ships may detect the vicinity of icebergs. The old method consisted of lowering a thermometer into the water when the iceberg zone was being approached, the distance of the icebergs being judged according to the temperature of the water in the vicinity.

Since the increase in the speed of big liners, however, this method has been found to be quite inadequate, [illegible]. One of the [illegible] for detecting icebergs [illegible] to that of Dr. [illegible] of the University of Leeds, who invented an apparatus which detects the presence of icebergs by giving readings of the saline contents of the water. The nearer an iceberg is to the ship the less is the amount of salt held in solution in the water. The Canadian Government assisted Dr. [illegible] in his investigations.

Another invention of which high hopes are entertained is what is known as the microthermometer, an instrument enabling very much closer readings of the temperature of the water to be obtained than is possible with an ordinary thermometer. It is also [illegible].

Submarine signalling, too, for the prevention of disasters in foggy weather, is also being closely studied by experts, for it is recognized that there is much [illegible] in the signalling apparatus used at the present time on board ship.

The modern system of submarine [illegible] consists of bells [illegible] feet of water, operated by [illegible] or pneumatic or hydraulic [illegible]. It is said that a submarine bell can be heard at a greater distance than any foghorn, siren, or any other generally used air signal or device, and it is recorded that one of these bells was heard at a distance of from ten to fifteen miles.

The [illegible] is very simple, consisting of [illegible] tanks, which are placed below the [illegible] on either side of the ship's bows and in contact with the plates of the ship. In each tank is a [illegible] which is connected by an electric [illegible]. There the [illegible] officer has [illegible] receivers and switches which enable him to listen on either side of the ship. If he alters the course of the ship on hearing the bell so that the intensity of the sound is equal on both sides of the ship then the bell lies straight in front, and according to the intensity of the various sounds he is able to avoid danger.

ROLL SAMPLE CASE

Samples Take up Little Room and do not [illegible]

An ingenious case for dress goods and other fabric samples has been designed. It rolls up closely and makes a compact bundle, yet the samples are not wrinkled or mussed in the process. A long piece of flexible material has a series of narrow straps removably attached at intervals along its inner surface. A number of clips form sample attaching elements, and these are removably fastened to the straps. The clips, for example, are run through a bunch of fabrics and hooked onto the straps. The bunches are mounted in the case in transverse rows, with room enough between them to permit of the free and smooth rolling of the strip without wrinkling or creasing the goods. If the salesman desires to remove any particular bunch of samples for closer inspection he can do it—and replace it—instantly.

The Canny Scot

Sir Thomas Lipton, having made his fortune out of tea, tells some good stories about the beverage. One of them, illustrating the "canniness" of the Scot, is as follows:

An old farmer of Dumfries-shire was the guest of a fine lady in that country. When the afternoon tea was served the hostess observed that the old man gulped down his before she could serve the other guests. Again and again the farmer passed his cup to be refilled. At the eighth cup the lady, becoming uneasy as to the supply on hand, ventured to ask:

"How many cups of tea do you take, John?"

"How many do ye gie?" asked John warily.

AN ENGLISHMAN SEES FOOTBALL IN CANADA

A writer in London Answers says: If an Association football secretary emigrating to Canada is lucky enough to get a similar appointment with one of the numerous clubs scattered throughout the Dominion, he will find that he is faced with difficulties which he has not been subject to in Great Britain. In the first place, as all clubs are as yet amateur clubs, he will receive no salary for his work unless he becomes secretary to one of the provincial football associations such as the Ontario Football Association or the Province of Quebec Football Association, and even then he will receive only one hundred dollars for the entire season.

In the second place, the Canadian employer of labor is adverse to closing his office on Saturday afternoon. The secretary, therefore, often will find, when he thinks he has got together a winning eleven, that his best men have been detained at business. Remonstrance with the employer is useless.

The ground question is another great difficulty. Canada is a land subdivided real estate, and it often happens that about half-way through the season a club finds that its ground is required for building purposes

City Clerk Gives His Advice.

City Clerk Armstrong has recommended the Public Utilities Commission as to how to spend their revenue. The recommendation is that the rental of the office be charged 65 per cent. to the Hydro-Electric Department and 35 per cent. to the Waterworks Department.

A Lady Will Act.

It now seems possible, in fact probable, that a lady in stead of a man will be appointed to distribute funds of the patriotic fund. Mayor Buller possibly justifiably thinks that this fund going as it does to the local poor will not be as offensive, under the broad term of "Charity" coming from a woman as it might from a man.

"No Alum"

must be the watchword when the housewife buys baking powder.

Alum is well known to be a powerful astringent, and should never be used in food.

Prof. Geo. F. Barker, M. D., of the University of Pennsylvania, says: "I consider the use of alum baking powder highly injurious to health."

Food economy now, more than ever, demands the purchase and use of those food articles of known high quality and absolute purity and healthfulness.

Sanitary Inspector Spence has been informed of this dereliction of duty. Do the garbage men think they are employed to pluck the feathers off butterfly wings?

A SIMPLE WAY TO REMOVE DANDRUFF

Prevent Falling Hair and End Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous and glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you value your hair, you should get rid of dandruff at once, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it.

A Day Too Late.

At yesterday's police court Harold Welsh was charged with having allowed liquor to be taken from a local hotel. Wm. Quibble,—with the accent on the "I," said he was arrested as having liquor in his possession whilst on the blacklist. He said he got a sealed 50 cent flask in the hotel. The flask was produced. His Worship asked "Did you pay fifty cents for a little drop of whisky like that?" The Chief replied "Your Worship the price of booze has gone up since the war began." Quibble could not recognize Welsh as the man who sold him the whisky. There were two men, including Welsh behind the bar on that occasion, but Welsh did not supply him. Mr. Widdifield remarked "You can't lay information in this case against anyone else." It has to be laid within thirty days from commission of the offence. The defendant was discharged.

WEDDING BELLS

McWATTERS—HUSKINS.

The wedding of Miss Violet Annie Huskins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Huskins, Durham street, east, and Mr. Percy Foster McWatters, son of Reeve McWatters, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away, while the wedding march was being played by Miss Annie Campbell, cousin of the bride.

Rev. J. S. McMullen, pastor of Queen Street Methodist Church, officiated.

The bride, who was assisted by her sister, Miss Daisy Huskins, as bridesmaid, was attired in a pretty dress of embroidered net over satin, and carried a beautiful bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was dressed in pale blue silk and shadow lace, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groom was ably assisted by Mr. Melville Thurston, of Peterborough.

During the signing of the register Miss Campbell, of Toronto, rendered a vocal selection.

After partaking of a sumptuous spread, Mr. and Mrs. McWatters left on the 6.20 Grand Trunk train for Toronto, the bride travelling in a neat suit of blue with hat to match, and wearing the gift of the groom, a handsome set of black fox furs.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. McWatters will reside on Queen Street.

MANY USES FOR EGGS

Some Recipes For Tasty Dishes of Which They Form the Basis

More hens' eggs are laid during the months of March, April, May and June than during the other eight months of the year. Therefore the greater number of eggs consumed during the winter months are not fresh laid.

Eggs are graded in storage according to size, color, weight and location from which they are obtained. The housewife must take a chance on obtaining the best.

Eggs are deficient in carbohydrates and therefore need to be eaten with starchy foods, bread, rice or potatoes. But they contain much nutriment in a concentrated form. They are strengthening to feeble persons and healthful for children. Invalids should be served with eggs not more than two days old if possible.

When putting eggs on to boil drop them into just enough water to cover them. If a great deal of water is used they crack.

Wash all eggs as soon as they are delivered to you. Do not put them in the refrigerator until wiped clean.

Use the white of an egg for a burn; use egg shells for settling coffee and clarifying soup.

For hoarseness, beat a fresh egg until thick with 2 tablespoons of sugar. Eat freely and the hoarseness will be relieved.

Many cooks do not know how to cook eggs. If soft cooked in the shell is desired, drop the egg into enough rapidly boiling water to cover them. Draw from the fire at once, cover tightly and allow to stand three minutes. The egg will be smooth and jelly-like when served.

Eggs for salad or for deviling should be boiled 30 to 40 minutes.

Rice and Eggs

This makes a fine luncheon dish. One-half cup of rice cooked 30 minutes in 3 quarts of boiling salted water. Boil rapidly. Drain and while hot add 1 tablespoon of butter. Put rice in shallow pudding dish, sprinkle with grated cheese and in little shallow wells made on top break as many eggs as you wish to serve. Sprinkle with grated cheese and dot with bits of butter. Bake in the oven until eggs are set. Then serve.

Eggs a la Newburg

Melt a tablespoon of butter in a chafing dish, or skillet. When it is hot, but not brown, stir into it 1 teaspoon of cornstarch. When smooth, add 1 cup of top milk and allow to cook slowly 5 minutes. Cut 6 hard boiled eggs into neat pieces. Simmer until eggs are thoroughly heated. Beat 1 egg—yolk and white—together until very light. Stir this into the cream and egg very slowly. Add third of a teaspoon and a tablespoon of sherry. Serve on toast or crackers.

GERMAN ARMY IS PRACICALLY BROKEN UP

The news from Petrograd today indicates a decisive win for the Russians in Poland, where the invading Germans have been driven back. Unofficial reports assert that German forces appears to have been practically broken in two, one section taking a southward line of retreat and the other withdrawing to the north-west. The official statement, however, makes no mention of a retreat to the north-west. It is confined to the announcement of a withdrawal along the line to the south-west. The defeat, however, appears to be most decisive and another great victory for Russian arms.

Meanwhile the Russian campaign to the north of Poland in East Prussia, and the campaign to the south in Galicia have continued, notwithstanding the pressure on the Russian centre, giving a striking object lesson as to the extent and strength of the Czar's forces.

London, Nov. 24.—An official communication given out in Petrograd according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch, announces a German retreat in Poland. The statement follows:

"Between the Vistula and the Warthe the Germans have retreated from the line running from Strykow to Zgierz, Szadek, Zdunska, Wola, and Wozniki."

The line from which the Germans have retreated, runs from the northeast of Lodz, down past that town, and to the south-west.

Szadek is twenty-five miles southwest of Lodz. Strykow is twenty miles to the south and west of Lowicz, and the remainder of the line then extends to the south-west.

A Decisive Phase of the War.

The correspondent at Petrograd of the Paris Matin says:

"The Russians, after having checked the German offensive, on the Plock-Lenczyca front, gained on that side a brilliant decisive victory. The enemy, who had heavy losses, is fleeing with all speed toward the German frontier. An entire German regiment surrendered to the victors. The Russians are energetically pursuing the enemy.

"The Russians are also vigorously attacking along the Czenstochowa-Cracow line. This day seems to mark one of the most important and perhaps decisive phases of the war."

German Army Broken Up.

The Times' Petrograd correspondent in a despatch supplementing one declaring that private advices received in the Russian capital had confirmed the reports of a Russian victory over the Germans in Poland, says:

"According to unofficial information reaching here, the German army of 400,000, which made an eruption between the Vistula and the Warthe Rivers has been broken up into several parts, one of which was compelled to divert its course southward and another northward. Apparently in each case the Russian forces succeeded in getting behind these dislocated corps, and inflicted upon them great losses.

"The Germans are believed to have suffered very heavy losses at Brzeziny and Tuszyn. It is impossible as yet to give even approximate figures."

THE ACTUAL EFFICIENCY OF THE GERMAN ARMY WHEN IN ACTIVE SERVICE

A General Impression of Teutonic War Operations, Above Criticism as a Machine, But Found Wanting in Individual Wit and Intelligence, in Natural Courage Also Germans Take Second Place to Allies

The special correspondent of the London Morning Post at Belgian Headquarters, has communicated to his paper some highly interesting and instructive information regarding the studious war preparations of the German Army, and the actual efficiency of that body in active service. The correspondent writes:

"A general impression of the German war tactics after some 17 weeks observation in the field leaves these two points outstanding: (1) the wonderful thoroughness of preparation on the part of the German nation for this war, and (2) the failure of the German nation to assert a superiority over, or even an equality with, its British, French, and Belgian antagonists in unforeseen contingencies calling for individual initiative.

In all that could be provided for by thought beforehand, in all the bookwork and routine of war, in the matters of discipline and of equipment, the German force was generally above criticism. In those other things which tell of the character of a race, of its native wit, and its natural courage the German has taken second place to the Belgian, the Frenchman, the Britishman. Constantly, therefore in considering the German at war — apart from the strategy of his campaign, which is outside the scope of this article — one is moved to contemplating alternations of efficiency and [illegible].

[illegible]

But perhaps there is an explanation which will do away with the astonishment — it was impossible that an [illegible] and individual people should devote their whole energies to the [illegible] of a plan of aggressive war without securing great results; but impossible also that this direction, to a single and inhuman end, should not have de-humanized the people, somewhat, lowered their general intelligence, injured their spirit of initiative. To train for the defence of one's own country is, I suppose, an almost necessary part of intelligent life. But to submit to a military domination for the sake of organizing a war of conquest over one's neighbours, must spoil the citizen somewhat in drilling the soldier. Germany has profited in the field by the scientific [illegible] of her slavishly drilled people. She had lost in the field by the failure of those people under circumstances when equipment failed and a "common-sense shift" was called for, when obedience was not sufficient and an individual life and judgment was called for.

[illegible] Equipment.

In regard to the equipment, the first stage of the campaign disclosed how perfected was the German war machine in this regard. The first German dead gave up many secrets. The German soldier was clothed in cloth of a colour which on the average of European days gives a greater degree of invisibility than khaki. This cloth was excellent woven to withstand the weather and strain. Each soldier carried in his pocket-knife a little equipment for mending his clothes (as also a little first-aid Red Cross bandage of adhesive plaster.) His boots were of wonderfully strong and supple leather, such boots as only civilians in good circumstances can buy. His valise of cowhide tanned, with the hair on, was most ingeniously furnished with straps and removable hooks of white metal for ease of carrying and ease of packing and unpacking. Its contents, disposed in various little cupboards, gave the maximum of food reserves and clothing comfort for the space and weight. Quite regardless of the value of the soldier's life at the critical moment of an action, the German plan at least equipped him perfectly at the outset, even with materials to facilitate the work of pillage and incendiarism which had been mapped out for him. The orderbooks of officers and non-commissioned officers showed the same meticulous devotion to detail. During the years of preparation the German mind evidently devoted itself with passionate industry to providing for every possible emergency of the soldier's life in the field.

Inferior Cavalry.

As the equipment was the zenith, the cavalry tactic was the Nadir of the German army. Whether against the Belgian, French or British cavalry the German cavalry was always inferior. The much-advertised Uhlans might appear from some episodes to have done good, daring work. But in real fact they were simply shot out from headquarters like stones from a catapult, recklessly, non-intelligently, to land somewhere, anywhere. With so many of them out they had to blunder on some success. In the aggregate their record was one of failure. Repeatedly they were trapped and almost exterminated by far inferior forces (I recall one instance of many near Ostend when six Belgian cyclists ambushed twenty-five Uhlans and killed thirteen of them without suffering any loss.)

On the march they had no idea of scouting. In the first phase of the war the German idea of cavalry on the march in hostile country was for a squadron of twenty-five to precede by five hundred yards the regiment without flank scouts or advance scouts. Taught by heavy losses they modified that a little. But never did they seem to learn the scouting side of cavalry work. Nor did their cavalry seem to know how to follow up a retreat. I have been in several retreats and never were they harassed by the German cavalry. To give another proof from personal experience, when the Germans after a victory were about to enter a town on three occasions I went forward on a cycle to get in touch with their advance cavalry, and make sure of the direction they were taking. Never was there any real ground for uneasiness in doing this, though some Press gentlemen once reported me as killed because they saw me cycling out, apparently into the arms of the Uhlans, at [illegible] after the battle of Tirlemont. The German cavalry, in short, had no eyes: its courage was of the blind sort and rapidly evaporated in a hot challenge.

Dixmude Once More Captured By Allies, According to Reports

London, Nov. 26.—The town of Dixmude has once more been captured by the allies, according to a despatch to the Daily Mail from Dunkirk, which declares the information was learned from a trustworthy source. To the French marines goes the honour of driving the Germans from this position, which has been the centre of violent attacks for weeks. It is stated that three times the Germans were driven from their trenches before the marines were finally able to hold them. Desperate fighting marked the encounter as the Germans [illegible] the trenches. The [illegible] of the [illegible] was made on Tuesday night or Wednesday [illegible] they occupied the town, and set up machine guns to hold their position. The losses of the marines are placed at 300 in dead and wounded.

Berlin, Nov. 26.—The Germans lost 170 killed, 625 wounded during the siege of Tsing-Tau by the Anglo-Japanese forces. An official statement today covering these operations stated that 4,200 were made prisoners by the Japanese; this number includes the 60 wounded who are being cared for in Japan. The statement says that they are well treated.

Paris, Nov. 26.—Following is the 3 p.m. communique in full:

"No important developments marked the day of November 25. In the north the cannonading diminished [illegible] and no infantry attack was directed against our lines, which made slight advances at certain points.

"In the region of Arras there was a continuation of the bombardment on the town and its environments.

"On the Aisne the enemy endeavored to deliver an attack on the village of Missy. The movement resulted in a complete failure, with considerable losses to the Germans.

"We have made some progress in the region to the west of Souain.

"In the Argonne, in the Woevre district, in Lorraine and in the Vosges, there is almost a complete calm along the entire front.

"There has been a heavy fall of snow, particularly in the higher portions of the Vosges Mountains."

Berlin, via wireless to London, Nov. 26.—Bad weather is interfering with the operations of the Turkish troops, official reports from Constantinople state to-day. "The Russians continue to hold the frontier positions but our troops advancing in the Tschoruk district, have again been victorious," the statement declares.

BRITISH BATTLESHIP BLOW UP THROUGH ACCIDENT IN MAGAZINE

London, Eng., Nov. 26.—It is officially admitted that the British battleship Bulwark has been sunk off Sheerness, England, and only twelve saved out of a crew of about eight hundred.

According to the explanations given by Winston Churchill in the Commons this afternoon, the Bulwark was blown up as a result of an explosion in her magazine. The accident took place in the River Medway, one of the estuaries of the Thames river, about thirty-six miles from London.

The Bulwark was in the Formidable class, built in 902. She was 411 feet long, and her armament included four twelve-inch, twelve six-inch and many other guns.

It is reported here that two German submarines have been hemmed in, in Sheerness basin close to where the Bulwark was blown up. The Bulwark was being equipped for war service when she was blown up.

According to the navy list Captain Guy Sclater was in command of H.M.S. Bulwark. In London today there are many rumors concerning German spies on British warships. To further questioning to-day in the Commons, Churchill said his best information was that an internal magazine had caused the disaster.

All London was shaken by the report that German submarines had been found near the Bulwark. Sheerness is but thirty-five miles from London and directly down the Thames.

Churchill announced that the Bulwark was blown up at 7.50 this morning. Vice-Admirals and Rear-Admirals were present at the time he said and reported they were convinced that the disaster was due to an internal explosion. "They reported" said Churchill "that the explosion rent the ship asunder. There was apparently no upheaval of water. When the smoke cleared away the Bulwark had entirely disappeared."

A special inquiry has been ordered to be instituted tomorrow.

IMPROVEMENTS ON C. P. R. SYSTEM

The record of improvements effected on the Dominion Atlantic Railway, which the Canadian Pacific Railway leased in 1911 for 99 years shows that new wharves have been built: 45 miles of new track have been ballasted; 30 miles of new 80 pound rails have been laid down; 120 cattle guards have been filled and replaced by surface guards, while dozens of bridges have been either improved or rebuilt. In round figures 4,000 feet of wooden bridges have been replaced, or will be replaced very shortly, by steel bridges, concrete arches, and rail top culverts. New brick stations have been built, a general renovation has taken place, costing many thousands of dollars. The new stations include those at Wolfville and Annapolis. Royal, Kentville, Paterson and Berwick. During the past two years 35 stations have been enlarged and painted, and [illegible] have been erected. A new line from Centreville to Weston, 14 miles in extent, has been built in the most substantial manner. Both permanent work and the lighter [illegible] which needed attention have been carried out, and today the old Dominion Atlantic looks spick and span as if it had taken on a new lease of life.

OLD MAN ROBBED OF WIFE TELLS HIS STORY TO POLICE

Lindsay, Nov. 26.—To be driven out of his home and robbed of his partner in life was the experience of an old man named Young, a former resident of Bobcaygeon, according to the story told Chief Short last night.

"Young, who is 78 years of age, went to the United States fourteen years ago to live with his daughter, who resided in a small town in New Mexico. While there his wife died, and a short time afterwards he fell in love with a young woman (a resident of Bobcaygeon). They resided happily together until three years ago when his health failed him and his wife, who is some forty years his junior, advised him to go back with his daughter where he would regain his health and strength. He had no money, however, but his wife loaned him $25 and also advised him to settle his affairs before leaving as he might never come back. He accordingly deeded the property to his wife and left for the U.S. In his absence another man (a well known resident of Bobcaygeon) went to live with his wife and usurped his (the old man's) rights. The wife of man No. 2 had left him and settled in Peterboro, so he took up with Young's wife. When Young returned to the village there was no welcome for him in his own home so he had to shift for himself. He secured work with a farmer who finally threw him off on the town of Lindsay."

Chief Short took the old man up to Mr. J. R. McNeillie, with a view to having him placed in the house of Refuge. He would like to get back to his daughter, but has no money to pay his way.

REFUSED TO SHAKE HANDS

At yesterday's police court G. B Fife charged a local barber with assaulting him at the latter's house on [illegible]. Fife, in the witness box, stated that he is engaged to the barber's sister. He was at the barber's house at 11.15 p.m. Defendant entered the sitting room where he (Fife) and his fiancee were seated and asked witness sarcastically: "Don't you think you had better stay all night?" The young lady said to her brother, "Now you beat it upstairs Walter. We don't want any row in the house to-night." The defendant said "————" (not printable). Defendant seized witness by the throat, and said: "Are you going to get — — out of this?" The barber then tightened his grip on complainant's throat so that the latter could not speak. Defendant threw him to the floor and kicked him. Defendant again grabbed complainant by the throat as he was putting on his coat. The young lady then got between the two. The barber tried to kick him again, but he was down the steps before the kick landed. He had been keeping company with the young lady for a year. Witness asked that defendant be bound over to keep the peace. The young lady testified to the truth of the last witness' testimony. Her mother had objected to complainant sitting with her after 10.30 p.m. Mr. Gordon, for the defence, said all he wanted was that the barber leave Fife alone as the sister had her trunk packed to leave. The barber was fined $10 and bound over in $200 bond to keep the peace. The fine was imposed after Fife had agreed to shake hands with the defendant and the latter had refused.

PETERBORO'S OLDEST BILL

The oldest advertising bill to be seen on a wall in this city is one on the South Wall of the store on George St recently vacated by Mr. J.W. Butcher the 10 cent store man. The store is being remodelled. When the shelving and plaster was pulled away on the bricks was seen a poster dated Sept 25th, 1860. The bill advertised an auction sale as follows

The south half of lot No. 2, 10th concession of the township of North Monaghan containing 100 acres of land of which 85 acres are cleared. The property includes a log house and log barn. In the same placard is mentioned, as offered for sale, an "Extensive Mill Property" adjoining the town of Peterboro, comprising the 2, 3, 4 and 5 on a plan of the Auburn Estate in the township of Douro. The late Alex. McNeil is mentioned as the owner. Mr. R.W. Jones is contractor for the improvements now under way in the store referred to. He is putting in hardwood floors and a new modern front.

HOME GUARD TURN OUT

Last night the "Home Guard" led by the Salvation Army Band, turned out many hundreds strong. Judging by the look of determination depicted on the face of every man in line, we can only say "God help the fool American-German who might think of invading Canada. George Street was lined with sightseers, who watched the volunteers, for Peterborough, Canada and the Empire march past as though they, the onlookers, were a lot of [illegible] dummies. This city is patriotic! The people have simply got into a Rube habit of not recognizing or showing marked appreciation of those who [illegible] life for country or honor the town otherwise. Let us shake off this Rube system and, when, and where, praise and applause is due, give it! This city has outgrown its Rube existence!

CANADA'S SECOND CONTINGENT TO BE EQUAL OF BRITAINS BEST

Army of Khaki-Clad Men to Leave Dominion After New Year's Will be Complete in Every Detail and Ready for Active Service—First Contingent at Salisbury Till all Raw Edges are Planed Away

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—With the return of Major General Hughes, who will be back in Ottawa to-morrow, details of the allotment and mobilization of the fifty thousand men whom the Government decided to recruit and to keep in constant training will be announced. The militia headquarters staff has been working on the details and it is understood that they are now ready. They will have to be approved by Major General Hughes.

Where New Corps are to be Raised.

Recruiting for the second contingent and the thirty thousand, the Government first decided to raise, is still in progress, so that the divisional commanders will only keep up their work.

It is understood that by the plan which has been arranged, Ontario will be assigned five more regiments, four of infantry and one mounted. Quebec will be allotted two regiments, one infantry and one mounted. The Maritime Provinces will be asked to raise two additional infantry regiments. The remaining regiments will be assigned to Western Canada. It is probable that the Manitoba division will raise six new regiments, Alberta two mounted regiments, and British Columbia two [illegible].

Auxiliary Corps Nearly Complete

Recruiting for all the various units of the next contingent such as army medical corps, engineering, army service corps, is now nearly complete. The second contingent like the first will go to the front equipped to the last detail with the transport, automobiles, hospital units, ambulances, and everything necessary to have an army take the field.

The committee in charge of the transportation work which is headed by Senator George Taylor completed its report yesterday, and it is now in the hands of the Prime Minister. It is the intention to purchase all automobiles and army trucks, direct from manufacturers. No middle men need apply.

Ready to Leave at New Years.

It is expected that the second contingent will be ready to leave for England January 1st. fully equipped including the latest artillery weapons which are under order at the present time. Whether the British War Office will be ready to receive them is another question. The second contingent is certain not to leave for England until the present army at Salisbury Plains departs for France.

When the next contingent leaves the Canadian force in Canada will at once be recruited up to fifty thousand men so that there will be continually fifty thousand men under arms in the Dominion.

THE DISCOVERY OF POISON STARTLES THE MILITARY CAMP

London, Ont., Nov. 26.— Discovery of bottles labelled poison in the camp of the 18th (second contingent) battalion here, and further arrests by the military police are sensational developments that followed today as the sequel to the arrest of a German, calling himself a commercial traveller, in the city last night by military police.

Col. E.S. Wigle, commanding officer of the Eighteenth, absolutely refused to say a word today concerning either the arrests or the poison.

He called it a matter of "gravest importance" today and made the declaration that a public statement would be issued as soon as an investigation was completed.

How many arrests have been made, on whom the bottles were found and how their presence became known is being kept a military secret. It is known however, that their owners declared them to contain pepsin.

Men of the permanent Canadian army medical corps tested the contents of the bottles in milk to-day and proved that it was not pepsin. The bottles were then sent to the institute of public health here for analysis. Late this afternoon the statement was given out there that the tests had not been completed.

RUSSIAN STRATEGY SUPREME; FOE MARCHES BOLDLY INTO NET

Petrograd, Nov. 26.—Via London.—Semi-official advices received from Poland show that the German defeat at Lodz, culminating in the capture of a German army corps, was the result of a Russian manoeuvre by which the Germans were led into an inextricable trap.

The Russian left wing, resting on the River Warta, and the Russian right wing, on the Vistula, both lying along the Warsaw-Kalisz Railroad, moved forward in unison in the last two days.

Simultaneously the Russian centre gave ground and the Germans followed, apparently relying on a German column from Wielun to repulse the Russian left wing and to form a juncture with the main German forces.

The German plan failed as a result of the battle on November 24 when the German force from Wielun was repulsed. Thereafter the Russian wings advanced and closed the gap through which the German centre had passed.

In the meantime Russian reserves had come up and they surrounded the Germans, thousands of whom surrendered, others fought their way north in an effort to join the German left in the vicinity of Lowicz, a town 44 miles southwest of Warsaw.

Church for Women

Women in Liverpool, including many suffragettes, have inaugurated the novel plan of a church to be run by women. It will be called "The Church of the New Ideal." The preachers will be women. Men will be admitted to some of the services, but not all of them by any means.

SPORT SACRIFICED

Money the Only Consideration in Professional Baseball

Organized baseball seems to be on the verge of losing its last vestige of sport for sport's sake, according to W. J. Macbeth, a New York sporting writer. The commercial end of the enterprise overshadows all else. The magnates are out for the money and make no bones of the fact. The lust for gold is as deeply rooted in the minor leagues as in the major organizations.

The two big circuits depend upon patronage for financial gain. Because of this it is necessary for them to secure the very best talent to display before the public. Thousands upon thousands of dollars are expended every season by each club in the National and American Leagues for the sole purpose of fortifying for the future. Every club owner has several highly paid scouts beating all around the country in search of likely looking "bush" timber. Some have as many as six sleuths under salary. Besides these, there is a grand army of amateur sharps who do business on a commission basis. This policy of near extravagance is all well enough for first division aggregations; the end more than justifies the means. But it is a fatigue drain upon the pocketbook of the unfortunate holders of second division franchises.

Because of their weaknesses, second division clubs in the major leagues call for the greatest expenditures. This makes their lot all the more severe. The money is put up on a mere gamble, because a club away down in the race is lucky to make interest on investment. The leading teams which might well afford to speculate in talent, have not the same crying need to do so. But these leaders usually string along in a sort of "dog in the manger" fashion and often corral good promising talent which they cannot possibly use, just to keep it away from some lowly rival that might utilize it to the disadvantage of the strong.

GEORGE SISLER

Phenomenal young pitcher of Michigan University. Joe Sugden, the Detroit scout, says of him: "He has the best curve of any left-hander I ever looked at." Few college players know how to run bases and not many slide properly. Sisler is an aggressive runner and has the hook slide down to perfection. His one fault seems to be over-anxiety to hit. He is almost as brilliant as an outfielder as in the pitcher's box where his specialty is the spit-ball.

OLD RACING TERMS

Fine Distinction Between Stake and Purse Often Overlooked

The old and well defined term "stake" receives some rough handling on the trotting turf when races are reported by art critics, golf experts, baseball writers or any person who happens to be available when the trotters come to town. Some of the trade papers of the trotting turf and even track officials themselves seem at times unable to recognize the plain distinction between a purse and a stake.

From the earliest period of racing the term stake, or sweepstake, has always been used to designate a race for which the prize is the total amount of money contributed by the nominators, all of which belongs to the winners. This is the definition incorporated in the rules of the National Trotting Association, and the same meaning is given to the term sweepstakes in the New York Jockey Club's rules of racing. A race is still a stake when money or other prizes are added to the entrance fees or subscriptions, but is never a stake if the prize is less than the total amount paid by the nominators. In a "stake" the association promoting the race merely holds the entrance money in trust for the nominators.

A purse is a fixed sum offered by the promotor of the race, to which the nominators do not contribute. All entrance fees in such a race belong to the association, and if they amount to more than the purse, as often happens on the trotting turf, the association profits to that extent, and the purse remains the same as if there were only two or three entries.

Ever since instalment purses came into vogue on the trotting turf, there has been a tendency to call all early closing races stakes. As a matter of fact there are few—very few—stake races on the trotting turf, most of the promoters preferring to offer purses so that they need not pay out all the entrance money in case this exceeds the face of the purse. Even the futurities in harness racing are nearly all purses instead of stakes, and for the reason just mentioned.

Articles to the value of nearly $1,000,000 are pawned in London every week.

VARIOUS METHODS OF PRESERVING EGGS

They Must be Fresh in the First Place and Should be Scrupulously Clean

There is no better method of preserving eggs than in water-glass, or soluble silicate of soda, which is not an expensive material to buy, as a pound, which only costs a very few cents, dissolved in the correct proportion of water, will preserve a large number. The amount of water to be added depends upon the sample, but as full directions are usually sent with each tin, it is difficult to go wrong. The eggs are placed in a glazed vessel, and covered with the liquid, care being taken that all the eggs are submerged. When they are wanted for use, they should be gently lifted out of the liquid, wiped dry, and used as speedily as possible.

The oldest, but still a very excellent method of preserving is by means of salt, lime and water. Four gallons of lime, one of salt, and twenty of water, should be mixed together, and when the water has taken into solution as much lime and salt as it is capable of doing, it should be allowed to settle, the clear liquid being used to pour over the eggs, which have previously been placed in a suitable vessel. This method has the disadvantage of making the shells rough and extremely brittle—so much so, in fact, that, as a rule, eggs that have been preserved in lime cannot be boiled, the shells cracking with the least touch. When eggs are to be preserved for only a very short time—for two or three months—dry salt answers admirably, but this is an unsuitable method for a longer period.

If a new-laid egg be dipped into boiling water, it slightly coagulates the white, and so prevents the air getting to the contents. For home use this method is suitable, but it does not answer when the eggs are for market. Smearing with vaseline or butter keeps the contents fresh for a week or two, but is not recommended for more than a month.

Only perfectly fresh eggs should be preserved, and it is largely a waste of labor and money to attempt keeping eggs that are more than two or three days old when placed in the preservative. They should be allowed to settle twelve hours after being laid, but the sooner after this time they can be treated the better will they be when they are wanted for use. Dirty eggs do not preserve at all well, and if there is any dirt on the shells they should be washed. A dirty egg has an injurious effect not only on its own contents, but on all those that come into contact therewith. As infertile eggs preserve better than those containing a germ, it is advisable when producing eggs with this end in view to keep the hens apart from the male birds.

OUR PUBLIC SPIRIT

Scotchman Says Unpleasant Things About Canadians

A young Scotchman, after three years in the Canadian West, wrote a letter to the London Everyman describing in unvarnished terms some of the Canadian characteristics, says The Ottawa Citizen. They can hardly be said on the whole to be complimentary, which doubtless makes their expression all the more valuable from the Canadian standpoint. It's always well to "see oursels as ithers see us," and a touch of Scotch opinion may in this case help to improve the spirit of Canada. One of his criticisms regarding the latter is as follows:

"Nor does the public spirit of the Dominion strike a stranger as abundant. It does not find its expression in the Territorial forces, at any rate, which are manned, out of all proportion, by home-born Britons. Certain Canadians suffer from the gratifying belief that the Dominion saved the effete Empire in 1901, and are indignant when told that of the Canadian Contingent sent to South Africa eighty per cent. were home countrymen. Nor does public spirit find much expression in local government, where the 'best people' are conspicuously absent—too busy making money to bother with such matters."

Without discussing the incident of 1901, The Citizen says by way of comment, the truth of the rest of the criticism must be confessed. Canadians have been so busy with the multifarious tasks of a new country that they have not had much time to devote to the interests of the country at large. But surely Canada has now advanced in development to such an extent that more attention can be given to the public interest. Unless such attention is given, no greatness of future can be safely predicted. That public spirit that makes a citizen think and feel and act for Canada, as for his larger self, is without doubt the great need of Canada to-day. Others recognise the fact, and Canadians cannot too soon follow their example, and profit by it.

Newly-laid Eggs

Bacteriologists tell us that in an egg evaporation and the action of bacteria are evident by the third or fourth day. There are some who believe that from that time on the egg is not perfectly "fresh," or "new laid," nor any other name that should mean the best. It is edible for some time after that if kept properly, but it is not of first quality, and all the statements to that effect cannot make it so. If the farmer has to have longer time than three days to get his eggs to the consumer, he should have to classify them other than the highest, and he cannot expect to compete with the poultryman who delivers his product 72 hours old.

Beets For Cattle

If beets are fed to cows in the barn in large quantities the place should be well cleaned up and aired before each feeding, else the effect on the atmosphere will be so bad it will taint the milk.

Constancy

The constant drop of water wears away the hardest stone,
The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the toughest bone,
The constant cooing lover carries off the blushing maid,
And the Constant Advertiser is the one who gets the Trade.

Why Bother About Age? Mentality Is the Point

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

STATE Superintendent of Schools Edward A. Hyatt of California has told the teachers of his state that they needn't tell how old they are—not to anybody—not at any time—except when they come to apply for a pension.

Hurrah for Supt. Hyatt of California! He's a man of my own heart.

Why should Teacher tell her age any more than the car conductor—or the woman who comes to help wash the dishes after the party? Who cares how old Teacher is so long as she can teach? And who cares how young she is, if she isn't a goose?

Nobody pays any attention to age nowadays. Nobody who is anybody, I mean. Of course, all the little persons who never do anything but get born, get married and get buried are very much excited over everybody's age—but their own.

It makes a whole lot of difference whether a man is young or old—mentally. For it is all a matter of mentality—after all.

A ditch digger is old at thirty—a statesman is too young to be given any really important office till he is over fifty.

The girl at twenty doesn't know that any one is alive but herself. Poor little thing, she'll find out soon enough.

The man at thirty hasn't begun to know anything about anybody—even himself. When he begins to find out he begins to be worth while.

How Old Was She?

Why should a woman tell her age—if she doesn't want to? Whose business is it how old she is? People of intelligence don't care and never even think. Why should she satisfy the idle curiosity of persons who are not intelligent?

The minute any one says to me, "How old is she?" I know all I want to know about the person who asks.

I once spent a delightful morning with a delightful woman. A woman who had charmed and enchanted an entire generation. A woman who had had every kind of man on earth in love with her—princes, dukes, statesmen, artists, musicians, writers, kings of finance, butchers, bakers and candlestick-makers.

She was living in her own enchanting home in an enchanting village in an enchanting country. Her house was crammed with fascinating things—she cut the latest magazine with a pearl-handled dagger given her by the Sultan of Turkey. Our tea was served on a Dresden tray—a present from a deposed Empress. The candlesticks on the table had once belonged to a great Italian man of the people. The very shawl she wore came from India and had belonged to the favorite of the harem.

That woman [illegible] that day and she talked. Stories, anecdotes, memoirs—it would have been worth a fortune to any publisher to get her to write down the things she told us and give him permission to publish them.

She talked about kings, and heroes, a baker with a smutch of flour upon his unpowdered cheek, the greatest actor of his time, a prince in exile, a murderer condemned to be hanged—she had letters from all of them, and love letters at that. And she showed them to us and laughed and cried and mimicked and related.

Of a sudden, when her maid came to dress her to dine with a great personage, she caught her breath and gasped: "Heavens, what have I been saying!"

Age Is Time's Affair.

And we said [illegible] our arms full of roses in a garden famous from one end of Europe to the other—and went away.

When we got outside the gate, the poor nonentity I had been stupid enough to take with me clutched me by the arm. She could scarcely breathe in her hurry to speak:

"How old do you suppose she is?" she stammered in her excitement.

And that was all the poor nonentity ever had to say about that day of wonder [illegible]. How old is she?—that's all she thought.

"When she was reading up the [illegible] letter—she looked so young I wouldn't have taken her for a day over twenty-five. But when she read that letter from the [illegible] she looked a day. I kept trying to add up all the [illegible] different dates—didn't you?"

And when I told her that I didn't care whether the woman was twenty-five or fifty she stared—and didn't believe a word I said. How could she? She didn't speak the language.

Keep your age to yourself, Teacher, as long as you want to. It's nobody's affair but your own—and, if you're the right sort of woman, it isn't even your affair.

It's Time's—and Time will take care of it.

CAN "PERSONALITY" BE TAUGHT?

Jose Collins, Prima Donna of the Winter Garden, New York.

Dainty Jose Collins Propounds a Puzzling Question

By ELEANOR AMES

WHAT is personality? I asked Miss Collins while she was making up. "Everybody says that you possess it to a wonderful degree, and I feel it when you are on the stage, but I don't know how to describe it in words."

She laughed, turning from the mirror to ask:

"Why, personality is what gets over the footlights; it's the something that makes you adore some artists and [illegible] others. It really is indescribable in cold words. It acts without words. It is the boundary that separates the performer from the artist. It is that mysterious something that fills the theatre when its possessor steps out silently on the stage—it demands attention and commands admiration."

"Then it is something born in one, and cannot be learned?" I asked.

"Can't it?" she flashed back with a cryptic smile. "Sometimes I know it cannot be learned, but sometimes I wonder if it is not often unconsciously taught.

"I mean that great producers and wonderful artists have taken performers, who were not only unknown but really without even good stage presence, and have worked miracles with them. Did they breathe the breath of living personality into these clay figures? I wonder.

"I once heard Sarah Bernhardt say that the secret of personality lies in continual movement. Though every part of the body be motionless, the play of thought upon the face holds the audience's attention and fills the theatre with vibrant life."

"Then personality can be learned?" I insisted.

"I cannot say that definitely," Miss Collins evaded. "I can only ask the question. 'Can personality be taught?' and leave it for some wiser person to answer."

Holiday Quarrels.

LEONA DALRYMPLE.

THIS Christmas [illegible] of which I have [illegible] ushered in a [illegible] of general misery [illegible] Mary ran [illegible] the street to tell her mother that I had given her a dressing gown, instead of the year's art instruction upon which her heart was set. When she returned she was in decidedly bad spirits.

"Mother's [illegible]," she said.

"Again?" I asked. Mrs. [illegible] runs to [illegible] attacks of depression that can't always be explained. The weather frequently gets her. I'm told it affects a great many susceptible women who are too luxuriate in melancholy. Mrs. [illegible] once told me, with a sigh, that very bright, still sunlight made her feel [illegible] Another time [illegible] of falling leaves and [illegible] having a similar effect. A day of cloud and rain or a day of snow is bad, and spring days always have an adverse effect. Looking back I doubt if there is any example of weather that doesn't make her blue. I suppose it's temperament. I don't know.

I do know that men as a class are a more cheerful race of beings than women. Once in a while you find a man who talks nerves, [illegible], depression and death all the time, but not very often, and, usually, I discover that if he is so afflicted, he's lived too much with women. His nerves and his temperament are feminized.

"What has made your mother blue today, for heaven's sake?" I demanded.

"Well," said Mary, "she says Christmas makes her think of when I was a little girl and I was so pretty and happy, and she wishes those days were back again."

That, by the way, is another characteristic of my mother-in-law. I've heard so many precarious tales of Mary's babyhood that I shudder when my mother-in-law begins "Mary was so much of [illegible] Mary was a baby. Dear little thing," and then comes the chapter of [illegible] reminiscence. Mind you, I am not decrying a wholesome pride in one's children. I do think it's time to halt, however, when you bore people to death with post-mortem tales of childhood exploits.

"And mother's worried, too, because I have to do my own work," went on Mary.

"Great," said I. "Tell me some more. Does she want you to have a [illegible] and a maid?"

We quarrelled immediately. And that was the first of the series of mishaps. Mary burned the turkey because she ran over to her mother's once too often. [illegible] my going over with her to spend the afternoon at the Penfields. Which I did, and Mr. Penfield and I smoked and talked of the expense of Christmas. I suspected that the yellow back he had been stampeded into giving Mrs. Penfield was, as usual, more than he could afford.

"She wanted a diamond ring," he offered apologetically, "one of those big cluster things full of little diamonds, but I simply couldn't afford it."

I looked at Mrs. Penfield's fat fingers and felt an insane inclination to laugh. Why do fat women want to load their fingers down with flashy rings? Such a ring as Mr. Penfield described would have been horribly grotesque on my mother-in-law's fat hand.

We left the Penfields about 5, and then I asked Mary to go to mother and Dad's for the old-fashioned supper they always have Christmas night. She said she was tired and didn't want to go. We quarrelled again.

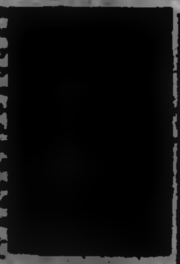
"Mary," I said, "if you don't go this time, after Dad sending me that money for Christmas, I'll go by myself, and I'll tell them the truth—that for some reason you always want me to visit your mother, but you don't care to go to my home with me."

And we quarrelled again, but Mary went. I was to learn on the way there why Mary was so tired and disgruntled.

Masterpieces of the Cuisine

Menu Inventions of M. Lattard

Maitre d'Hotel of the Hotel Plaza, New York.



M. LATTARD

MONSIEUR LATTARD [illegible] a culinary Edison. Not only does he compose the daily menus and [illegible] his guests and direct his army of chefs and waiters, but, in [illegible] private kitchen, he spends much of his spare time inventing novelties to delight epicurean palates. Recipes for a few of these rare novelties he offers to the readers of this paper.

OYSTERS REMICK.

TAKE the desired number of medium-sized oysters, steam until they open. Take the flat shell off and lay aside in a warm place. In the meanwhile fry some bacon; when almost done, cut in inch squares. Place one of these squares over each oyster, cover with sauce Remick, sprinkle with bread crumbs and grated cheese and brown slightly.

To make sauce Remick for 24 oysters: Take one-half a pint of good stiff mayonnaise, add six tablespoonfuls of chili sauce, three tablespoonfuls of an oyster sauce, salt, pepper, one-fourth teaspoonful of curry powder, one-half teaspoonful of powdered English mustard and celery salt. Stir the whole thing thoroughly every time you use it.

BASKET CERISONEL.

CUT with a Parisian cutter the desired quantity of good cantaloupe, put about an equal quantity of fresh cherries, place the cherries in a pan, adding a little sweet maple syrup over them, place on the fire and let come to a boil. When done, throw in the cantaloupe and lay aside to cool. Serve on a basket of pistachio ice cream, arranging half cantaloupe and half cherries and sauce as you would a peach Melba.

CANAPE STICKNEY.

TAKE an artichoke bottom, fry it in butter and let it cool off. Take equal parts of crab meat, herring in white wine and bananas, the whole chopped very fine. Season to taste with salt, pepper, celery salt, paprika, English mustard and curry powder. Mix thoroughly, and place in the ice box.

Take now enough whites of egg, according to the number of canapes you want to make, and beat it well until it comes to a froth. When ready to serve, take your artichoke bottom, place over it a good spoonful of the salad above mentioned, surround it with filet of Bismarck herring, cover it with some of the whites of egg, spread a little grated Parmesan cheese over it, pass under the salamander or gas grill, brown a little, and serve.

The Good Night Story

The Princess's Riddle—By VERNON BERRY

THREE boys went travelling in a far country to take part in the great guessing contest of the capital. Any one who guessed the Princess's riddle was to have her in marriage. So the three young men tried their very best.

"I have two different sorts of hair on my head," said the Princess; "what color are they?"

"Pepper and salt," cried one of the boys, "like old folks have."

"Wrong," said the Princess, frowning.

"Gold and red, like a tiger lily," guessed the other boy.

"No!" cried the Princess, smiling.

The littlest boy stepped forward and said: "You have a silver and a golden hair on your head, and they, of course, are of different colors."

"[illegible]," replied the Princess, for she did not want him to marry her. "But [illegible] would spend the night with the bear in the stable. If you [illegible] morning, I will marry you."

"[illegible]," cried the littlest boy, and off to the stable he ran.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

How Bicycle Riding Improves Your Figure

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

LIFE is a circle. Even inert, non-living bodies move in circular, or curving, spheres.

A cat curls up before the fireplace in a circle. The planets revolve around the sun in near-circles; worlds spin in space in circles. Drops of fluid, dew, rain and water all form circles or globules. The human race is doubling up like a jackknife into a circle. Round shoulders, the shuffle walk, the bow legs and knock knees, these and various other deformities, such as curvature of the spine, humpback, paralyzed arms and legs, all tend to curves.

Electrons, atoms and molecules all move in circles, as do the wireless waves of the atmosphere. All of these strange tendencies of mineral and living things teach us, [illegible] the physiological fact that physical culture and muscular exercises which involve circular curve movements, aid the human drift and proclivity toward stable health.

Bicycle riding, dancing, rowing, swimming, boxing, tennis playing and baseball playing are all superior, therefore, to walking, massage, golf playing, horseback riding and indoor gymnastics.

Bicycle riding is, par excellence, one of the ideal forms of outdoor action. The word cycle means circle, and bi-cycle is a double circle.

Unique, indeed, is the motorcycle and automobile as far as muscular development and a reduction of weight is concerned. Wheeling, nevertheless, with the circular motion of your pedal extremities, surpasses walking and riding, and equals dancing and swimming as an outdoor sport.

Muscular growth usually means decrease in redundant fat. It is a thing of compact solidity and wholeness. There is no loss in strength, but a great gain in force, efficiency and power.

Women should, if sound in body, take up bicycle riding in preference to all present fashions in physical exertion. Indeed, every automobile should be equipped with bicycles, just as large water craft and steamers are fitted with small boats and life preservers.

These would enable the automobile owner occasionally to leave the motor car and take a little physical jaunt beside the [illegible]. Thus all danger of being stalled in the road would also be obviated.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am 18 years of age. My mother objects seriously to my keeping company. She thinks it is all right to walk down the street with a fellow, or, perhaps, go to the "show," or church, but I must not bring him into the house afterward.

"PATIENCE."

WELL, Patience, you're living with your mother, aren't you, and she's taking care of you, I suppose, isn't she?

So long as she supports you, you certainly owe her obedience, no matter [illegible] what she wants you to do is [illegible] you want to do or not. And then [illegible] probably knows a good deal more about what you should do than you. What do you suppose her object is in trying to have you be circumspect? She's always around to be fond of you, hasn't she? Why do you think she is trying to spite you now?

Mother knows best, little girl, and if you're sensible you'll listen to what mother says, and listen to some good purpose.

Why should you bring a man into the house with you after you've been to the theatre with him? You know perfectly well why your mother doesn't want any man in the house with you alone after she has gone to bed, and she knows that you know she knows it. And the young man knows. What's the use of making any mystery about it? You are no different from any other girl, and your young man is probably just an ordinary young man, and you ought to be thankful to have a mother who cares enough, and who cares enough to look after you properly. If the man really cares for you he'll think all the more of you for following your mother's advice.

Be good now, and be sensible and be sweet, and then you shall some chance of being happy.

Annie Laurie

Thaw Case to be Argued

Early next month a motion is to be argued before the United States supreme court to set aside the decision of District Judge Aldrich refusing the extradition of Harry K. Thaw from New Hampshire to New York. A final ruling by the court of last resort possibly may terminate an affair which has seemed almost interminable, although the Thaw fortune may discover ways for further opposing the detention of the murderer of Stanford White. A brief prepared in and forwarded from the office of the New York attorney general contains statements which can be fairly believed to represent the sentiment prevailing among the people of the State, who have been wearied and disgusted with the incessant scandals and defeats of justice incidental to the Thaw proceedings. These are expressive paragraphs:

"The custody of the body of Harry K. Thaw is of no importance, per se, to the state of New York. It would be only too glad to be freed from the recurring scandals in which his control of wealth involves the administration of the law.

"It cares nothing that Thaw should be out of Mattawan and without its territorial limits. It cares much for its own dignity and that the orderly administration of the laws should not be perverted or obstructed by criminal means or the corrupt use of money."

These are declarations closely in line with New York public opinion. The people think that in justice the miserable rich man should be returned to the institution to which he was committed as a dangerous lunatic, the establishment of his insanity to the satisfaction of a jury having saved him from capital punishment. But they would as willingly see him go elsewhere and be free as to have a continual exhibition of the law's impotency against money's power.

The Albanians in Egypt

Great deeds are to be done by the Khedive with a mighty Ottoman army and innumerable Arab bands, when he invades the country of which he is nominally the sovereign. This we learn from Turkish sources. The occupant of the Egyptian throne is going to conquer Egypt by means of alien forces, defeating the armies of Egypt and the Soudan or winning them to his side, taking even the Suez canal from the British and driving them into the Mediterranean and the Indian ocean. It may be permissible, however, to doubt his capacity for this undertaking. The would be hero was a very harmless person till Enver Pasha and Talaat Bey cornered him in Constantinople and induced him to throw in his lot with the Turkish government for war. He has a wearisome, waterless road to travel before he can strike a blow, and he and his hopes may wither away in the desert.

Still, the story is a pretty one, and it has a peculiarly picturesque feature in the task assigned to Essad Pasha. The gallant defender of Scutari, we are told, is only waiting for the Mussulmans in Egypt to rise that he may put himself at their head and march against the British. This may seem improbable, but it instantly calls to mind the romantic adventures of another Albanian chief in Egypt. Of what descent but Albanian is the Khedive and his family? The year 1805 is memorable in Egypt for the accession of an Albanian soldier, Mohammed Ali, to the pashalik of that country. He it was who soon afterward exterminated the turbulent Mamelukes. His military successes in Arabia, Nubia, the Soudan, Crete and the Morea were brilliant. In Syria he completely routed the Turkish armies, after which the Porte was glad to cede that territory to him, on condition of tribute. His victory of Nisib in 1839 might have raised him to the throne of the Ottoman empire had not the action of the European powers, with the fall of St. Jean d'Acre, compelled his evacuation of Syria and the confinement of his ambition to Egypt.

Ismail, the grandson of this famous warrior, by means of a firman bought from the Sultan, acquired in 1866 the hereditary title of Khedive, and the same firman made the succession to the throne of Egypt direct from father to son, instead of passing, in conformity with Turkish law, to the eldest male of the family. Thus it comes about that Abbas Hilmi, a descendant of the Albanian chief, Mohammed Ali, is now the Khedive of Egypt. And so it appears that Essad Pasha would be but true to his kin were he to fight for the supremacy of the Albanian dynasty in the land of the Pharaohs. But if he is to wait for a rising of the contented fellaheen or a mutiny of Kitchener's Egyptian army, he may never have the opportunity.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1912 with six pairs of foxes, at [illegible]. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs — all young foxes — good for at least 20 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island ranch foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the homestead of Sir William Macdonald, and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur V. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 25 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes.

The promoters of this Company are retaining [illegible] worth of stock for themselves, [illegible] worth has already been disposed of, leaving [illegible] to be offered to investors at $25.00 per share, with a guarantee that a dividend of 50 per cent. will be paid in cash in 1915, or whatever more it may be.

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but were able to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders [illegible] will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Now Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at [illegible] and make us pay [illegible] dividends on it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after these will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Pelts, shipped from Prince Edward Island ranches to London, England, and sold there in March, 1910.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the free ranching of foxes means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four pups this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per pair it would figure out at [illegible]. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay [illegible] for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about [illegible] per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranches, Grades of Foxes, etc. The [illegible] thing that every investor should keep before him is the dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain figures what we can do for you and now that you have our proposition, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business—and judge for yourself. The PEARL of the ROCKIES

Lake Louise

Path from the Chateau around the Lake

Mount Temple

NAMED in honor of Princess Louise, daughter of Queen Victoria, and wife of a Governor-General of Canada, Lake Louise, the pearl of the Canadian Rockies, has for over twenty years been the despair of poets and artists who have vainly endeavored to transfer to paper or canvas an image which might convey to those who have not seen it the charm of this lovely spot. The lake lies 5,645 feet above the sea and is held as it were in a chalice of shimmering glaciers and snow-clad peaks. The green and blue and rose madder of its surface gleam like melted jade and sapphire and amethyst. "This is Fairyland," say those who see it and with difficulty tear themselves away. To the more prosaic C.P.R. it means thirty thousand passengers a year, tourists who have come from all over the world to see for themselves an incomparable gift from Nature.

THE FOUR SIGNALS

Some Practical Knowledge Simply Stated For the Emergency Nurse

Pulse, heart, temperature, and breathing: these are the four signals, and if you were asked, in a press of work, to take charge of a wounded or sick person until a trained nurse could arrive you would be anxious about without a knowledge of the four danger signals.

The pulse is due to a momentary distension of an artery, caused by the contraction of the left ventricle of the heart. "Feeling the pulse" is therefore to know the strength, regularity, and rate of the heart's action.

In health, for an adult man, the pulse rate is about 72 per minute (sitting), 80 (standing), down to 66 (reclining). So a pulse rate of 65-80 is within the range of health. Women have, generally, a quicker pulse than men, and a tall man a quicker pulse than a short man. In illness the pulse either slows, as in injuries, compression of the brain, etc., or quickens, as in fevers.

To take the pulse at the wrist use your right hand to feel the left pulse, or vice versa. Place three fingers (the fore, the middle, and the ring) of the right hand on the artery about half an inch from the outer, or thumb, side of the patient's forearm, and with the central of the three fingers one inch above the front of the wrist; at the same time placing the thumb of the hand behind the forearm, so as to support it.

Hold a watch, with a second-hand, in your free hand, and count the pulse rate for a minute, noting at the same time any intermissions or irregularities.

To take the temperature needs care. A mistake would mislead the doctor.

In health the temperature follows a well defined course through the day. From 4-6 a.m. it is at its lowest, about 97.5. As the morning advances the temperature rises to the normal of 98.4. After noon and towards evening in healthy persons it may rise a little further above the normal, and then gradually decline again.

The temperature may be taken in the mouth by placing the bulb beneath one side of the tongue. The patient's lips must be closed, and he must breathe through his nose, and neither open his mouth to speak or breathe whilst the temperature is being taken. Unless the thermometer is marked "half minute" or "one minute," etc., it must be kept in place for four minutes at least. If there are difficulties in taking a mouth temper-

WHITE STAR OIL ★ COMPANY, LIMITED

Non Personal Liability

Oil Stock is a speculative investment which gives the largest return on the amount invested that it is possible to obtain. This Statement is verified by the fact that the largest fortunes in the United States were made from speculation in oil.

The WHITE STAR OIL COMPANY, Ltd have taken every precaution to eliminate the hazardous features which usually accompany this kind of investment, viz

Each one of our different properties were approved before their purchase by an expert geologist with a great deal of experience in selecting well sites in this field.

Our holdings comprise 1000 acres which are located in the three proven districts of the Alberta Oil Field, namely The Monarch, Okotoks and Sweet Grass districts where scores of wells are now being drilled.

The Directorate of our Company is composed of substantial business men whose success in other lines of business is sufficient to warrant the stock holders a sound administration to the company's affairs.

Our Stock is now selling at 10c per share, par value $1.00. All prospective investors may obtain further information from our representative at 246 Antrim Street. Our advice is to buy while you can get in on the ground floor before the first issue is exhausted.

EARLY C[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Builder of First [illegible]

Although to-day it is the desire of everyone to prevent shipwreck so far as possible, this was by no means the case in the time of our grandfathers. Dwellers on some coasts in those "good old days" used to look upon shipwrecks as a regular business, and the people of Cornwall even went so far as to have a special collect, to which they prayed in hard times for the [illegible] of a wreck and its accompanying loot!

The earlier method of lighting dangerous parts of the coast was by means of beacons, fired high up on a cliff. These beacons were often placed on the top of a building, and would act as a fairly good warning of the rocks beneath. The wind, too, helped to keep the fire well alight.

A further step in the development of coast warnings was a lightship with lamps suspended from the extremes of the yardarm. These vessels were first built about 1730, but they were not entirely satisfactory at that time, as they had a habit of breaking loose from their moorings and drifting away.

Yet another form of coast warning consisted of a bell-buoy, which was fixed in the immediate vicinity of dangerous rocks. The force of a storm tossed the bell to and fro, and above the howl of the tempest the warning boom of the bell could be heard by hard-pressed mariners.

In the year 1696 Winstanley's first Eddystone Lighthouse was started. The constructor had many difficulties to face, apart from the actual building of the lighthouse. One of his annoyances was the fact that the pressgang insisted on taking his workmen away for service in the Navy. But an appeal to the Admiralty at last ended this, and each workman was given a silver medal by producing which he could escape being kidnapped.

Even more serious were the attentions of the French privateers; and one day, during a fog, Winstanley was captured by the French, and taken across the Channel, while his men were stripped naked and set adrift in an open boat.

In the course of three years, however, he succeeded in rearing the [illegible]. It looked more like a church than a lighthouse. The walls were wonderfully decorated, and adorned with texts; there were all sorts of fancy devices for the comfort of the occupants, and in most particulars the building was unfitted for its purpose.

NATIONALITY REVEALED

Shape of Head Varies in Different Races

Among many interesting facts that are revealed by a study of heads is the one that the left side of a head is almost always larger than the right due, it is supposed, to the universal practice of using the right hand more than the left.

Another curious fact pointed out by a writer in [illegible] is that nationality considerably affects the shape of the head. It would surely be an interesting subject for a biologist to explain why it is that the darker the [illegible] the rounder their heads become. No one needs reminding of the round, bullet shaped skull of the negro, but the hatter will assure us that a Frenchman's head is rounder than an Englishman's and similarly an Englishman's rounder than a Scotchman's.

The average Scot's head tapers considerably towards the front, narrows at the temples and becomes square and prominent at the forehead. German heads, on the average, are rounder than English, and broader at the back. Irish heads, in general, are long, like the Scotch, but scarcely as narrow. The Slavonic head is narrow in front and very broad at the back.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

JOCKEYS HORSES HATE

When Race Horses Go Mad at Post They Would Make Meal of Riders

Trouble in the paddock and at the post before a big race is frequently caused by a horse which has taken a sudden and violent dislike to his jockey, and there are numerous cases of well known jockeys being nearly chewed to death by their mounts.

One of the worst cases of "savaging" occurred to Otto Madden, the famous jockey, at Brighton races a few years ago. He was riding down to the starting post for the Worthing Plate, when a horse called Marigold IV. overtook him, dragged him out of the saddle by the shoulder, and, seizing him by the throat, shook him as a terrier shakes a rat.

The jockey of Marigold IV., who had himself been unseated, used his whip freely on the brute's head to make him release Madden, and other jockeys coming to his assistance, Marigold IV. was eventually beaten off—but not before Madden had been severely wounded.

Diamond Jubilee, the horse which won King Edward his first Derby, took a violent dislike to his jockey, Mornington Cannon. If Cannon ever went near his loose box, or the horse saw him in the stableyard or paddock, he would make frantic efforts to "go for him," and Cannon had several very close shaves from being badly mauled.

Fred Archer once had a bad tussle with a horse which tried to "savage" him, but the famous jockey succeeded in getting the better of the animal and won the race. The horse was Peter, and the race was the Hunt Cup.

Peter threw Archer in the paddock before the race, and, seizing him by the arm, nearly bit it in two. Archer succeeded in beating him off, where upon he threw himself down on the ground and screamed, lashing out at [illegible]. Archer, however, was not to be daunted, and he eventually succeeded in mastering the brute.

Lord Charles Cunninghame, a well known sportsman who used to race on a large scale in India, had a very valuable racing pony which took a violent dislike to the "syces," or native grooms.

He absolutely refused to allow them to come into his stable, and on one occasion when two of the "syces" came in together to try to groom him he bit off one man's arm completely at the elbow, while the other only escaped with a badly lacerated ear. After that, white stable boys from England had to be specially imported to look after him.

Vedas, who became "savage" through ill-health some time before he died, wore a muzzle, and the stable boy was paid extra to look after him.

Ladas, Lord Rosebery's famous race horse, was perfectly quiet under ordinary circumstances, but for some unknown reason he had a great dislike for ladies, and would "go for them" if any members of the fair sex approached his paddock.—Pearson's Weekly.

BUILDING CUP CHASERS

Some of the Rules Yacht Designers Must Bear in Mind

The conditions governing the America Cup yacht races give designers lots of latitude. According to the measurement rule, length is measured, but this length is taken in such a way as to limit overhangs and should that length be greater than the rule allows the excess is penalized. Draught is limited to 16 per cent. of the load water line plus 1.75 so that the limit of draught for a yacht 75 feet on the water line is 13.75 feet. Any excess is added to length. Then to find the rating after the length has been determined length is multiplied by the square foot of the sail area and this product is divided by the cube root of the displacement. The larger the displacement, consequently, the larger the sail area that can be carried and the designer decides just how big a yacht he wants to build, making its form as easy as possible and then figures out the driving power. It has been figured that the average defender measures about 163 feet over all, 14 feet draft, and spreads 7,400 square feet of canvas.

Clean pots and pans with
GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and absolutely safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

Gold Dust is sold in 5c size and larger packages. The large package means greater economy.

FUN IN PARLIAMENT

M.P. Who Raked up an Act of Henry VIII. Was Bitten by It

An incident which highly diverted the House of Commons occurred recently when Mr. Rupert Gwynne announced with a [illegible] that under an Act of Henry VIII. which he had discovered, all members absent from the House were liable to a penalty.

The Act which Mr. Gwynne disinterred ordains that no member shall absent himself from attendance without the license of the Speaker and the Commons, the license to be entered on record in the book of the clerk, and the member's wages to be stopped. Mr. Gwynne suggested to Mr. Asquith that the Act should be enforced now that members are once more paid, or that it should be repealed.

Mr. Asquith was calm. "The matter does not appear to be one in which the Government are called upon to take any action," he answered.

Meanwhile, Mr. Joseph King had been so curious as to look up Mr. Gwynne's record. "The hon. member himself has been absent from 446 divisions," he announced solemnly, and the House laughed so loud and so long that Mr. Gwynne, gesticulating with explanations, was quite unable to make himself heard in response.

Sharing a Stream

As the centre of a stream is the boundary between the farms of the Rev. W. J. M'Keough, a Catholic clergyman, and Mr. John Butler, of Cloone, Harold's Cross, Ireland, a difference arose between the parties as to the taking of cattle at the stream, and an action arising out of it was argued in the Chancery Division at Dublin, the settlement being that successive portions of the stream should be parcelled out in equal shares to the plaintiff and to the defendant.

Child Poisoned by Pills

Cecelia Elizabeth Stable, aged two, of Dunfermline, Scotland, died under peculiar circumstances. She had been left in charge of an older sister in the absence of their mother. Pinhole Photography

For pinhole photography, any rectangular box that is absolutely light tight will answer. In one end insert a very thin plate of metal, in which a minute hole has been made with the point of a needle, and at the other end place the sensitive plate. If you possess an ordinary camera you may remove the lens and replace it with the pinhole. A prolonged exposure is required, about twenty or thirty times the ordinary one for any given subject. No focussing is required, as the image is always fairly sharp, no matter what distance the plate is from the hole. The larger the plate the wider the angle, and the greater the distance between pinhole and plate the larger the image. Pleasingly soft effects of landscape subjects in particular may be obtained by means of the pinhole.

SALMON INDUSTRY

Quebec Man Started First Packing House on Pacific Coast

Notwithstanding the fact that the first salmon cannery on the Pacific Coast was erected in United States territory—on the Sacramento river—it is interesting to note that it was the creation of one who had learned the canning business in Eastern Canada. This man, Hapgood, had worked in a lobster factory in the Baie des Chaleurs, Que. A school mate named Hume, from Augusta, Maine, who had been to California and returned home, had told Hapgood of the abundance of salmon on the Pacific coast, and Hapgood saw no reason why salmon should not be canned as well as lobster, and entering into partnership with Hume, erected the first Pacific Coast cannery in 1864. A year or two later witnessed the establishment of the industry in British Columbia.

In 1876 the total pack of the province was but 10,000 cases of 48 pounds to a case, while now the production of the canneries is around a million cases per year. Many changes are observable in the industry. With the increasing demand for salmon, other kinds than Sockeye, have been increasingly canned, and now a considerable proportion of the pack consists of hitherto neglected kinds of salmon. Then again the Indians and white fishermen are being gradually displaced by Japanese.

Perhaps the most remarkable development is that of the Dog Salmon industry. These fish were until recently regarded with contempt, but so great is the demand from the Japanese market, that more than 1,000 tons, dry salted, have been exported in a single year from British Columbia. Just as the turkey is the universal Christmas dish with us, so a salted dog salmon is the chief item at New Year's feasts in Japan. The average price of a seven pound dog salmon in Japan is said to be fifty cents.

ORIENTAL MENACE

Presbyterians on Coast See a Real Asiatic Peril

The Westminster Presbytery, representing that denomination in Vancouver and all the lower mainland, passed a long resolution as to their policy on Oriental immigration. They view with alarm the ever-increasing arrival of Orientals, whose influence is felt in social, economic and even moral conditions. They add:

"The situation is already exceedingly serious. One in every nine of our population is an Oriental, and, as a large proportion of their members are men, it means that one man out of every five in British Columbia is an Oriental.

"This Presbytery would therefore urge that an understanding be arrived at between our Government and the various governments interested to exclude Oriental labourers until the proportion of Orientals to Occidentals is one to thirty of the population of British Columbia. In case of Hindus already residing here, we urge they be allowed to bring in their wives, providing that no other members of this race will be permitted to enter Canada until the above condition is reached, when the question may be re-opened."

NEW ICE CUTTER

Saw Carried in Frame That Is Mounted on Pair of Wheels

The old style way of cutting ice was by the use of a long hand-saw, sometimes operated by two men. A western man has designed a machine for the purpose and it is said that with this machine one man can cut ice quicker than two men could with the hand-saw. A frame with spaced side bars, is mounted on a pair of wheels. Between the bars, at their lower end, a saw is mounted and this saw is driven up and down by a chain gear that is operated by the turning of a handle at the top. Adjustable gage shoes are pivoted at one end to one of the side bars and these shoes keep the saw running straight, so that the cut it makes is at all times the same distance from the former cut that it must parallel. The saw in this machine, instead of being of the regulation stiff blade type, is in the form of a chain.

INFANTRY WEAPONS

Infantry arms consist of the rifle, bayonet and machine gun. The "pom-pom," which figured so much in South Africa, has been withdrawn.

The service machine gun is the .303 Maxim, which will fire a continuous leaden stream of bullets at the rate of 600 a minute, or 10 bullets every second, at ranges of from 900 to 1,300 yards.

The maxim weighs 60 pounds, and its lightness enables it to be carried anywhere the troops can go. It can be taken along roads on wheels, across country on pack animals, or, if needs be, shouldered by a single soldier right up into the firing line.

The weak point of the maxim is that its mechanism is liable to jam and render it useless. In the hands of trained gunners, its destructive power is greater than band [illegible] shooting shrapnel, cavalry charges, bayonet charges, or any variety of rifle fire.

FORCIBLE FEEDING

"Not Used as a Deterrent, But It Does Deter," Says Premier

The Rev. R. J. Campbell, Dr. R. F. Horton, and other ministers addressed a letter to Mr. Asquith protesting against forcible feeding of suffragist prisoners.

Replying through his private secretary, the Prime Minister stated that Mr. M'Kenna repudiated the statement which had appeared in the memorial that he had defended forcible feeding in the House, not only as a means of detaining people in prison but also as a deterrent.

"It is true," the Premier's letter ran, "that forcible feeding in some cases actually deters prisoners from adopting the hunger strike, as they realise that the strike will not secure their release, but it has never been used as a deterrent or for any purpose except to preserve the life and health of a prisoner, and it has never been defended on any but this ground."

Amazing Story of a "Cure."

Kitty O'Brien, a pretty Irish girl of seventeen, hailing from Cwmbran, Monmouthshire, is alleged to have been cured at St. Winefride's Well in an amazing manner. The girl states that for the past five years she had suffered from tuberculosis in the knee, and for about two years had had her left knee in plaster of paris and walked with crutches. She was recommended by Father Quigley to visit Holywell. The effect was remarkable, she said. A spasm of pain shot up her leg and side. The next instant the spasm returned and darted downwards to the foot and ceased. She knew then that a cure had been effected. The plaster of paris bandage and the crutches were discarded and left in the crypt, and, it is said, Miss O'Brien walked out of the well free from pain and lameness.

CHAMPION NEEDS YOUTH

Fighting Game Only For Boys Without Business Cares

Ad Wolgast has slipped irredeemably from the upper class set, critics of the Coast claim but his decline is not entirely due to that attack of appendicitis that laid him up a year or two ago. Wolgast affixes the blame to passing years. He is not a boy any more and you've got to be a boy, Ad says, to remain at the top pugilistic place.

"A fellow goes stepping along into manhood," declares Wolgast, "and while he is making the trip his ideas change. As a boy I was a fighter and a hard hitter. I beat Nelson and won the lightweight title and although after that I had my share of bad luck, I was pretty successful and saved quite a bit of money. As the dollars came rolling in I grew lax in my training and began to look upon the fighting game—my profession—as a sort of a side line.

"I let my boy friends paddle along for themselves and took up with business men and men well along in life. They interested me and I found many things outside of ring matters that appealed to me. It wasn't long before I was forgetting altogether about boxing, except when it was brought to my mind, and I went in for business—dabbled in various investments and the like.

"Then when I'd get a fight and would be training hard out at a training camp, business people would come out to see me, and when they would leave I would be so lonesome and discontented I would find myself unable to sleep.

"Yes, sir, a boxer has got to be a boy to remain champion. Advancing age doesn't hurt him physically, but it takes his mental spirit away from him and leaves it lukewarm."

AN INAUSPICIOUS START

Hugh Jennings' First Professional Games Netted Him no Cash

It will not be long before Hughie Jennings can look back on a quarter of a century of ball playing. The Detroit leader started playing professional ball on June 14, 1890, as a member of the Allentown Club of the Eastern Interstate League, the diamond on which he made his debut being located in Altoona, Pa.

He was signed by the manager of the Allentown Club as a catcher, but it was as a right fielder that he broke into the profession. He got one hit in four times at bat in the first game [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and fielded [illegible], possibly because he was offered no chances at the defence. The next day the Allentown manager, who was Charley Mason, tried Hughie at short field, where he cared for seven chances out of eight.

It was on June 19 that Hughie was permitted to go behind the bat, the reason the Allentown manager delayed using him in that capacity being due to the fact that it took him two days to break Jennings of the habit of giving signals to his pitcher with his thumb on his right knee and thus letting the batter as well as the pitcher know what was coming. He caught six games in a row for the Pennsylvanians, acquitting himself favorably, if one is to take the word of the box scores, which show that he accepted 36 out of 38 chances.

Sighing for new worlds to conquer, Jennings essayed to pitch for the Allentown Club against Altoona on July 1 and his club was beaten, 6 to 3. Hughie, after this experience, went back to his old duties of backstopping [illegible] [illegible] July 1 and 5, and on the evening of July 6 he tried to catch up with his [illegible] salary, which was supposed to be going on at the rate of $45 per month. There was no money in the treasuries of any of the clubs of the Eastern Interstate League, which that night gave up the ghost after a career of less than three months.

In the year that Jennings came to break into the game, George Stallings was catching in the Atlantic Association, John McGraw was in New York and Pennsylvania League, Connie Mack was with the Brotherhood, and Bill Dahlen was with the Cobleskill Club of the New York League.

The Smallest Dynamo

The smallest electric dynamo in the world was exhibited before the French Academy of Science. The instrument is a perfect miniature of a large machine and is a practical model in every respect. It works with a hum that sounds like the buzz of a mosquito. It weighs only one-fifth of an ounce, and is six-tenths of an inch thick. The little dynamo can be used not only as a generator, but as a motor. A small pocket battery will operate it.

SMOTHERING OF ASTHMA STOPS QUICK
THOUSANDS CURED BY "CATARRHOZONE"

Count Ten—Then Relief Comes From Chronic Asthma.

Nothing yet discovered can compare with Catarrhozone in bad, ugly cases of Asthma.

Catarrhozone is the one remedy that can be sent quickly and direct to all parts of the breathing apparatus.

The effect from Catarrhozone is a quick one—you feel better in no time—keep up the good work, use Catarrhozone as directed and you get well.

If your case is curable, if anything on earth can rid you permanently of Asthma, it will be Catarrhozone. It contains that strangely soothing and powerful antiseptic found in the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, and this is fortified by other germ-killing properties which, when so scientifically combined, make Catarrhozone a veritable specific for Asthma, Catarrh and Bronchitis.

Even though many other remedies have failed—even though you are discouraged and blue—cheer up and try Catarrhozone to-day. What it repeatedly has done for others it will surely not fail to accomplish for you.

Catarrhozone is not expensive. One dollar will buy complete outfit from any Druggist. The money will be well spent because your immediate improvement in health will surpass our fondest expectations. Don't wait—to-day is the day to use Catarrhozone.

Major-General Sam in Danger

London, Ont., Nov. 26.—That the arrest of three Turks at a Wellington st. house last Thursday night by Detectives Robinson and Bown frustrated an attempted assassination of Major-General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, is the allegation made to-day by police authorities. Letters found in the possession of the prisoners and interpreted by a Government secret service man, are claimed to be a direct indication that an attempt was to have been made on the life of Major-General Hughes when he was in the city to-morrow.

A Lucky Find for the C. P. R.

A discovery which may mean much to the Province of Ontario has been made at Caledonia Springs, namely, that the waters of one of the four springs is strongly radio-active. A recent visitor, who had hitherto gone for his cure to the Austrian resort at Joachimsthal was prevented this year by the war and tried the Canadian Springs. He was struck by the similarity of the waters which on test was found to be due to the presence of radium. The ,not official, analysis was made in 1903 before the ramifications of radium were fully recognized, but Professor Rutten of McGill has been commissioned to make a new complete anglysis. The value of a genuine radium spring in Europe is calculated to average from two to three million dollars, owing to the number of invalids who are attracted to such a spring.

LOCAL BREVITIES

An inquest is being held in Port Hope on the body of Robt. McMahon.

Port Hope has had a real exciting experience. A few days ago a team of horses ran away on Walton street.

Letters to our Peterboro soldiers at the front should certainly go postage free.

Lindsay's Fire Brigade will be represented at Belleville next July when the Eastern Ontario Firemen meet.

Captain R. Bruce, of The Salvation Army, who was in charge of the local corps three years ago, was in town attending the kitchen shower to Miss McBurney.—Port Hope Guide.

A brand new edition of the Stars and Stripes floated yesterday in front of the American Consular Agency on Water street.

A meeting of the Protestant Benevolent Federation is called for tonight 8 o'clock in the Sons of England Hall.

It would seem, according to the proprietor of a Water Street Employment Agency, that there are a lot of men looking for work and praying to God that they won't find it.

The Fire Department are to hold their annual Christmas dinner this year the same as the other years. The City Council and their respective wives or wives to be, will be guests.

The Patriotic Bridge and Tea will be held in the Odd Fellows Hall today at 2.30. Ladies who have tables will receive their table tickets when they reach the hall.

The next meeting of the Peterboro Business Girls' to provide Christmas presents for the local soldiers will be held at the Bank [illegible] Wednesday evening.

Some of our local "Rags" may be [illegible] the treatment accorded to German prisoners. Still, the local "Weary Willies" should remember that the daily regime for German prisoners in England includes a bath.

THE MILITARY ATTACHES ARE ENTHUSIASTIC

With the French army at the Front via Paris, Nov. 26 (delayed).—French trenches on the battle-front are, real works of art. I entered and inspected the details of newly completed works today while the soldiers were still digging.

The trenches are deep, well drained, and sanitary. At the beginning of the war French soldiers scorned to entrench more than a few inches. ... the war quickly switched to trench fighting, and France's fighting men changed their tactics accordingly. The trenches I saw were provided with spacious rest rooms and toilet, and covered bomb-proof observation chambers. Some were provided with kitchens with a system for carrying off the smoke, and even with baths and hot and cold showers.

The French are so well protected the officers in charge of the wounded told me that in the past less than 400 cases had been sent to the rear, despite the violent German attacks. On the contrary, I understand the German losses during their offensive movements continue to be enormous.

The military attaches of the foreign countries, on the present tour concluded their study of the battlefields leading up to the present lines today. They are now entering the second phase of the program, inspecting the actual operations. They naturally refuse to discuss the manoeuvres, but are enthusiastic over all they have seen of the French army, its organization and fighting qualities. I personally covered the same ground and was surprised to see such a big change in the French soldiers. They are much better now than at the start of the war, proving the French the most adaptable soldier in the world.

ROUMANIAN QUEEN WIELDS GREAT POWER

Though Born in England She is Russian in Sentiment—Granddaughter of Queen Victoria

The strongest power in Roumania to-day is said to be the brilliant wife of the young King Ferdinand, Queen Marie, who is a granddaughter of Queen Victoria on one side and of Czar Alexander of Russia on the other, and who has all the partiality to Great Britain and Russia that her ancestry indicates. As a matter of fact, the Queen of Roumania is a Russian at heart. Not only is she powerful with her husband, but as a woman of strong intellect is influential with his advisers, and is with one exception the most popular personage in Roumania. The exception is the Crown Prince Carol.

Queen Marie was born in England, her father being the Duke of Edinburgh, and late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. Her mother was the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia. She has always been more than half Russian, for her mother, despite the fact that she was the wife of an Englishman who held also a German title, remained true to her early faith and never forsook the Greek Orthodox Church. Her anti-German sentiments were probably acquired in the years she spent in Germany, for the Kaiser as the over-lord of her father is said to have frequently interfered in a very high-handed manner with the affairs of the Duchy. Queen Marie adhered to the religious faith of her mother, and is a Protestant, although her husband is a Roman Catholic. This explains why the people of Roumania were so ready to take her to their affections when she became the wife of the Crown Prince, now King Ferdinand.

The marriage was one of State, for the Crown Prince was said to be still suffering from an affair of the heart over a very beautiful maid of honor when it was arranged. His wife, who is ten years younger than he, set out to win his affections by the rather hazardous means of pretending interest in others. This roused the jealousy, and finally the love, of her husband, for she was quite as beautiful as the charmer whom she had supplanted, and quite as clever. The result was that in short order he had completely capitulated, and it is said that ever since then she has exerted a remarkable influence over him. She quickly identified herself with the aspirations of her people, fostered their national industries and upon every occasion appealed to their patriotism. She distinguished herself a couple of years ago in entering the hospitals and nursing many of her obscure subjects through the plague of cholera.

GREAT SWIMMER FROM PACIFIC ISLES

Brown Skinned Duke Kahanamoku Like an Eel in the Water—Has Method of His Own

To see the great Duke Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian champion, in action, is to see the exemplification of perfection in the art of swimming. He is the master of the liquid element. Speed, grace, power and absolute confidence are all his, making in the aggregate the world's most wonderful swimmer.

When under way his grace and form seem to mark him as almost too perfect to be human. It is very apparent that the great swimmer loves the water. It is his own element, and he acts as if he had been born upon the breast of the heaving Pacific. Any man who can swim 50 yards in 23 4-5 seconds after a slow start, smashing all records with the appearance of only half trying, must be a wonder.

It would probably take a booklet to discuss Kahanamoku's style and form, but there are a few features that stand out above all others.

Speed From Leg Stroke

In the first place, it looks as though his great speed and power comes from the unique use of his legs. He does not use the scissors or the regular crawl kick. He works his pedal extremities straight up and down, but in pigeon-toed manner. This makes his feet take the form of propeller blades, as is shown by the action of the water in his wake while he is in motion. The water bubbles up after him in exactly the same way as it does in the trail of a motor boat or a torpedo.

This method is not unknown, but few swimmers can use it well owing to the fact that, with the toes turned in, cramps are apt to follow and those who can use it at all never can keep up the style, but the duke swims in no other way.

For some reason the duke is very slow starting. This is the only feature of the duke's work that could be improved upon. After he once leaves the side of the tank, his dive is a beautiful thing. He gets the full power and distance of his jump, and picks up his stroke at the exact end of the force of the jump, unlike so many sprinters, who begin to splash the minute they hit the water.

He does not seem to jump into his racing speed until he has gone 25 yards but this may be due to the fact that there is nobody alongside him at the finish.

Swims Very Smoothly

After leaving the twenty-five-yard mark, his wonderful footwork comes into play, and like a high-powered motor boat he begins to draw away from the field. There is not a jerk or a jump to his progression through the water, every stroke is timed to pick up the work of the one just finished, so he forges ahead like a speedy cruiser on an even keel.

When he reaches the turn, another exhibition of the principal of maximum efficiency is given. He does not vary his pace or slacken his speed, but comes right up to the turn, then like a great eel his glistening body twirls for a moment, making a swirling eddy, he drops out of sight, but the next second comes shooting to the surface like a rocket.

He takes the turn coolly, placing his feet squarely on the back of the tank, then with a mighty heave, he starts on the back stretch. It is a superb demonstration of perfect muscular control.

Spaghetti

A quarter of a pound of spaghetti, a quarter of a pound of cheese (grated), two Spanish onions, pepper, salt, and a little milk. Into fast-boiling water throw the spaghetti, which should be broken into one-inch lengths. Cook till tender, drain in a colander, and put under the cold water tap for two or three minutes to prevent sticking together. Peel and boil onions till tender, and chop into small pieces. Mix spaghetti and onions together, season with pepper and salt to taste, and just cover with milk. Lay on the grated cheese to form a crust, and bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown—about thirty-five minutes in oven. This is a tasty and nourishing dish.

BRITISH FLEET CURBS GERMAN AMBITIONS

Paris, Nov. 26.—The official statement given out by the French war office this afternoon says:

"From the North Sea to Ypres there have been no infantry attacks.

"Between Langemarck and Zonnebeke we have gained territory.

"In the vicinity of La Bassee, the Indian troops recaptured from the enemy certain trenches which had been taken from them the evening before.

"From La Bassee to Soissons there has been almost a complete calm.

"We have made slight progress near Berry-au-Bac, and in the Argonne.

"At Bethincourt, northwest of Verdun, a German attack has been repulsed, and a suspension of hostilities requested by the enemy has been refused.

"Nothing has happened in the Vosges."

London, Nov. 25.—The allied fleet is battering down the German line established along the Belgian coast. Reports today tell of the German troops being caught between the fire of the warships and the land batteries in the vicinity of Nieuport. The bombardment of Zeebrugge, which has resulted in the partial destruction of the town and the fighting at Westende, all clearly indicate the determination with which the British fleet has set to the task of curbing the ambitions which the Germans may have of establishing a base for a raid on England. Reports from Holland declare that Zeebrugge was partially destroyed by the Germans that their guns might have a clear sweep for the duel with the warships. The inhabitants of the city are in flight. Serious damage has been done by the warships.

Middelkerke, Knocke and other towns of the western Belgian district have felt the main force of the British attack. Should it develop that the docks have been destroyed and Zeebrugge otherwise disabled as a naval base, a severe blow will have been struck at the German plan of operations from the Belgian coast.

Berlin Realizes That Germany is in a Tight Corner—Expert Thinks That Falling of Lyddite Shell Destroyed the Big Battleship Bulwark

BOTH BRITISH AND FRENCH ARTILLERY HAVE OUTCLASSED THAT OF GERMANY

German Artillery, However, are Extraordinarily Good in Tactics—They Place Much Importance Upon the Moral Effect of Artillery Upon Infantry—Germans Rely Considerably on Use of Spies for Getting Artillery Range

Whether the German cavalry was able to shine in any charges such as used to be rehearsed so carefully at Potsdam I do not know, says a special correspondent to the London Morning Post, at Belgian headquarters, not having seen any charges or encountered an officer who has.

The Methodical Artillery

Competent observers tell me that both the British and the French artillery have outclassed the German in the heroic combats of Northern France. It is a very high award for them, since the German artillery, from the heaviest to the lightest, is without a doubt extraordinarily good in tactics. The way in which it operates with its infantry seems to me specially good. Step by step it follows the infantry advance with patient care, and I have never noticed it either much up its own men or leave them at a pinch without the moral support of the guns. In return the infantry sticks well to its guns and I have never noticed or have heard recorded an instance where the infantry cleared out regardless of the fate of the guns.

In artillery ranging the Germans evidently relied upon:

(1) An excellent system of maps. The areas of operations was very minutely set out in [illegible] and on one battery [illegible] the fire of [illegible] on a certain [illegible] of that system [illegible] other batteries [illegible] and their fire-[illegible] could be instantaneously directed on to the required spot. This system of ranging with the aid of squared maps is not peculiar to the German artillery, but it seems to have worked with them a high degree of perfection.

(2) By aeroplanes and captive balloons. The captive balloons usually operated in couples on two flanks and, I conclude, took cross-observations from two angles of view.

(3) By the use of spies within the lines of their opponents. This was probably their most effective means of ranging. Spies, posing for peasants and wandering about the fields of operations, would give signals as to the position of batteries, trenches and Staff-Offices. The signals were noticeable of ranging by "brackets" (i.e., finding a distance by trial firings first at, say, 2000 and 3000 yards, then at 2500, and 2800 and finding the range at 2600). This system of ranging seems almost absolute with German batteries.

Moral Effect of Artillery.

The moral effect of artillery fire is thoroughly understood by the Germans. Against infantry in trenches after finding that shrapnel does not cause a [illegible] they try high explosive [illegible] more terrifying. On a wide battlefield a proportion of their guns will fire seemingly without known aim—at points all over the place. This is evidently not only with the hope of finding a chance mark, but of spreading terrors over the whole field, making troops in reserve feel that they are, too, under fire. It is an expensive way of causing fright but against unseasoned troops can be useful.

The German big guns were in d[illegible] fectiv. It was always possible to see what they were aimed at and to recognize that the aim was good. In the bombardment of Antwerp in particular I noticed this. The guns clearly had exactly the right elevation and exactly the right direction. Whether it was intended or not—I think it was—the last stage of their bombardment showed perfection in big gun pointing. Six shells in quick succession came within a few yards of the Hotel de Ville. I imagined that the idea was to hurry up the burgomaster to come out and surrender. (He had left on that mission at 6.30 just before this bouquet of shells arrived.)

There was no notable horse artillery work on the part of the Germans, so far as I could see or hear. The artillery worked perfectly "by the book" but without dash or any spirit of adventure. Certainly it was never pushed forward to punish a retreat.

The Infantry's Mass Attacks

The German infantry has to be credited with a very stubborn courage, but it was, so far as can be judged, chiefly "officers' courage." Left to themselves, the German infantrymen were prone to surrender, though the same men under their officers would suffer the most severe punishment without flinching. The virtues and defects alike of the German military system concentrated in the infantry. Educated, partly by ardent precept, partly by brutality, into believing that the military officer is a being apart, worthy of worship, the German rank and file follow their officers or are driven forward by their officers, in positions which seem almost desperate. On the other hand, the German rank and file left deprived of their officers, are more helpless than French or British soldiers in the same circumstances. In entrenching himself the German soldier is as good as the best (hard work and methodical practice.) In taking advantage of natural cover he is far inferior to the British (absence of initiative). The virtues and defects alike of his training send him to the charge in close platoons. Thus he's easier to kill but more terrible if he arrives. His marksmanship is inferior to that of the British soldier, but his volley firing—helped by the flat trajectory of his rifle—can be very effective. He is not fond of the bayonet as a weapon.

Not at all sparing of this infantry when the order to advance is given, the German tactics is nevertheless careful of its infantry in that it practises a very thorough artillery preparation and, as I have noted before, the artillery follows the infantry step by step.

ERNIE MARKS CO. IN FOR HOME AND HONOR

The Ernie Marks Stock Co. presented the sensational society drama "For Home and Honor," to a large and appreciative audience at the Grand Opera House last night. The story is quite emotional, with a sprinkling of comedy, and was charmingly told by this clever repertoire company. Kitty Marks won well-earned and frequent applause in her pathetic leading role of the wronged woman. Clara Bell Pree's presentation of the French maid, Suzette, [illegible] displayed marked histrionic ability. The piece throughout was [illegible] [illegible], while the specialties between acts were [illegible] and entertaining.

This afternoon a matinee will be given, the play will be "Two Jolly Tramps." To-night the company terminates their engagement with "Jesse James."

Berlin Anxious About Fate Of Her Armies in the East

Toronto, Nov. 27.—That Berlin is extremely anxious regarding the situation on the Eastern battlefront is indicated by the following, Berlin via The Hague Nov. 27: Although there is a growing desire for more definite news from official statements covering the operations in the east, every confidence is held here that a victory will ultimately be reported for the German troops. The Russian forces are being heavily reinforced it is stated, but fighting has not yet reached a decisive stage. Practically all interest is now centred in the fighting in Poland. The situation in the West is declared to be unchanged and the operations are now in the nature of a siege.

Paris, Nov. 27.—The official communique issued this Friday afternoon states: "The slackening of the artillery fire of the enemy was noted all along the line during the day of Nov. 26. Two infantry attacks directed against the heads of bridges which had been thrown down on the right bank of the Yser, to the south of Dixmude, were easily repulsed.

"Along the heights of the Meuse and in the Vosges there is nothing to report.

The Hague, Nov. 27.—Kaiser Wilhelm spent several days at Kiel last week. It is believed this foreshadows pronounced activity on the part of the fleet. The Germans will soon be relieved of the necessity of watching the Russians in the Baltic. This sea will soon be ice-bound, and the Russian operations rendered impossible.

London, Nov. 27.—The Allied States owe England about five billions, Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today. Describing the financial breakdown caused by the war, the Chancellor declared: "For the moment we can neither buy nor sell, although the whole world owes us money." The war loan of three-quarter billions for which bonds were issued, has been over subscribed. Lloyd George said it is the largest loan ever raised. He stated that there were over a hundred thousand applicants to subscribe.

CLEAN SCORE GERMANY'S AIM AGAINST THE "BEATEN" NATIONS

Berlin, Nov. 27, (via The Hague and London).—The Cologne Gazette, commenting to-day on a newspaper despatch dealing with the renewed peace talk, says:

"It is premature to talk about peace and it strikes us as frivolous. No German diplomat and no German soldier thinks of concluding an illusory peace with the powers which we have beaten and confidently hope to continue beating.

FALLING AND BUSTING OF LYDDITE SHELL MAY HAVE SUNK BULWARK

Sheerless, via London, Nov. 27.—It is believed here that the explosion on the Bulwark was caused by the fall and bursting of a 12-inch lyddite shell in her magazine.

London, Nov. 27.—An investigation started today into the blowing up of the battleship Bulwark off Sheerness yesterday, when 700 officers and men were lost. Naval experts are utterly unable to explain the destruction of the Bulwark upon the theory that the explosion was accidental unless it was [illegible] by [illegible] [illegible]. That such could be the case, however, is considered most unlikely because of the frequent tests made aboard ship and the fact that the Bulwark's magazines were protected by all the latest devices. The spies and submarine terrors ran rampant in London today. The contention of the Admiralty that the explosion was certainly internal has by no means satisfied the public. Some of the papers criticize the authorities for lack of vigilance about the government docks, as all London has been wild upon the subject of spies for months. It is insisted that German agents would have little trouble in operating in some of the ship yards. It is believed that the destruction of the Bulwark will go down in history as great a mystery as the blowing up of the battleship Maine in Havana harbour.

TO WARD OFF WINTER COMPLEXION ILLS

* * *

To keep the face smooth, white and beautiful all winter, there's nothing quite so good as ordinary mercolized wax. Rough, chapped or discolored skin, inevitable in this weather, is gently absorbed by the wax, the lifeless [illegible] particles being [illegible] off mornings. Creams, powders and rouges, on the other hand, are apt to appear conspicuous at this season, because of alternating expansion and contraction of the skin, due to changing temperatures. I advise you to try this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store and use like cold cream. This will help any skin at once, and in a week or so the complexion will look remarkably youthful and healthy.

Winds and flying dust often cause squinting and other contortions which make wrinkles. You can quickly get rid of every wrinkle, however produced, by using a harmless face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel.

SECOND CONTINGENT RECRUITS AT HAND MORE MEN THAN NEEDED HAVE OFFERED

Mr. C. B. Gordon, of Montreal, and Other Gentlemen to Equip Corps That Will Go With Second Contingent—Major Holland, V. C., at its Head—Sir Robert Borden Major-General Hughes and Headquarters Staff Confer on Army Details

Ottawa, Nov. 27.—Major General Hughes announced to-day that Mr. C.B. Gordon and other Montreal men had offered to equip an automobile machine gun battery. This offer has been accepted and the battery will be attached to the second contingent. Mr. Gordon was in Toronto yesterday to select the motor trucks.

It is understood that this battery will be similar to that equipped by Hon. Clifford Sifton and others for the first contingent. Mr. J. C. Eaton, of Toronto, is also equipping another battery at the present time, the trucks for which have been ordered.

A machine gun battery includes some half dozen machine guns mounted on armoured automobiles with other machine guns that can be taken off and mounted on tripods. Some twenty trucks altogether are used for ammunition, supplies, ambulance and the red cross equipment.

It is understood Major Edward Holland, of Ottawa, who won his Victoria Cross in South Africa, will be in command of the battery.

Major Holland was with the machine gun battery in South Africa when the famous "Gat" Howard lost his life.

It will be several days before the details of organization and mobilization of the additional twenty thousand men (to make up the fifty thousand which it has been decided to recruit) will be announced. The military headquarters staff have been working on plans which were laid before Major-General Hughes this morning. He at once had a conference with Sir Robert Borden and the plans will likely be approved by the Cabinet today or tomorrow. However, as already announced, it is expected that Ontario will be asked for five regiments, Quebec two, Maritime Provinces two and the West ten.

In the meantime recruits are being received at all divisional headquarters so that there is no delay in enlisting. While no official reports at headquarters have been received, unofficial advices are that not only is the full 17,000 needed for the second contingent already recruited but the 30,000 which it was first decided to ask for has now enlisted. Little difficulty is expected in securing the additional men to bring Canada's army up to the full fifty thousand to be kept in training this winter.

General Hughes expressed delight today with the Toronto Home Guard, who he reviewed last night. He said that they were a splendid body of men and made an exceptionally good appearance despite the fact that they were in mufti. He emphasized the fact that they were nearly all business men with property who had undertaken this service from a keen sense of duty. They were very serious in their work. The question of giving the Home Guard official recognition and of organizing it into a new Toronto regiment will be taken in the course of the next few days.

"NO DECISIVE ENGAGEMENT" ASSERTS BERLIN WAR OFFICE

Berlin, (via London), Nov. 27.—An official announcement given out in Berlin today says:

"English ships did not attack the coast of Flanders again yesterday. There have been no actual changes along the battlefront in the western area. To the north of Langemarck, we have taken a group of houses and also made a number of prisoners.

"Our attack in the Argonne region has made further progress. French attacks in the neighborhood of Apremont and to the east of St. Mihiel were repulsed.

"In the eastern arena there were no decisive engagements yesterday."

PROCLAMATION SIGNED

Warsaw, Russia, Nov. 27.—Organization of a Polish National Council is announced in a proclamation published today in Polish newspapers. The proclamation, signed by the most prominent Polish politicians, states that the object of the council will be to prepare the people for changes in their national life in the event of the fulfillment of Russia's promise, made in the name of Grand Duke Nicholas, that the dismembered parts of Poland should be re-united.

[illegible] Regatta

June 23 was the date of the first British regatta, held between Westminster Bridge and Ranelagh in 1775, to which Dr. Johnson appears to have taken Mrs. Thrale. It was suggested by Lady Montague's description of a regatta she had witnessed in Venice. The only rowing contest was "a race of wager-boats," after which a procession of boats manned by red, white, and blue oarsmen rowed from Westminster to Ranelagh, where various festivities followed in a "Temple of Neptune." Some of the 200,000 who attended seem, says the "Westminster Gazette," to have tippled "not wisely but too well," for on the return journey "many accidents occurred," and seven persons were drowned.

SLIDING TO FIRST QUITE LEGITIMATE

Big League Magnates Disagree With Ruling That Player Must Stay on His Feet

May a player slide into first base, instead of running past it. He does, if he accidently can't, President Chivington, of the American Association says yes. He calls it an unwritten rule of baseball. The ruling by Chivington came as a result of an informal protest by Manager Friel, of St. Paul, against a ruling made by Umpire O'Brien, who called out Dixie [illegible] for sliding head first to the initial sack.

"There is no time gained by sliding, and in the case of first base, where the base-runner does not have to [illegible] a touch, the only reason for the slide is to raise a dust that will hide the play from the umpire," said Mr. Chivington.

Herrmann Disagrees

Commenting on the ruling, the Louisville Courier-Journal said:

"The statement given out by August Herrmann upholds the declaration made by this paper that a man who slides into first and beats the ball is no more out than the man who hits the ball to the fence. It is merely an unjust assumption of power by the officials. President Chivington's contention that the umpires are right in calling out the player who slides into first base is ridiculous. Anybody who has run or played baseball knows that a leap when going at full speed will gain time, and that the player who slides has a better chance to beat the ball. If Mr. Chivington is consistent, why not call the player safe when the first baseman slides into the bag in order to make a play? The baseball undoubtedly takes no [illegible] saying aside the question of whether the slide is advantageous, the rules are clear upon the point. Herrmann made the case plainly: 'A player is entitled to reach any base by running, [illegible] or in any other manner so long as [illegible] remains within the [illegible].' This is laid down in the rules of the game, and no umpire, president of a league or magnate has any right to change this rule."

Mack Upholds Slide.

Connie Mack of the Athletics also had something to say about the ruling.

"There is a lot to be said on both sides of the slide-to-first proposition," Mack declared. "The biggest thing in its favor is the fact that it undoubtedly prevents many collisions between the first baseman and the runner. A baseman may be drawn back upon the bag by a high throw or a bounce, and unless the runner, coming full speed down the path, slides into the bag, a headon collision is inevitable. I have seen a slide prevent smashes that might have had serious results innumerable times."

Asked whether or not he thought the slide to first saved time, Mack said he thought it did, possibly a fraction of a second, which in so many cases decided the result of a game. "As to the danger of spiking," he continued, "some players try to spike the baseman every time they slide into a bag, but clean players won't spike a man jumping into first base often enough to warrant a change in the rules. The danger of colliding with both players on their feet is the [illegible] one, it seems to me," said he, and he ought to know.

ETON "ALPINE" FEAT

Boy Fixes Hat on Lightning Conductor Above Buildings

High above the street, pierced by the lightning conductor on top of the Eton memorial buildings, Windsor, England, was visible a soft grey hat, a challenge and a defiance to the powers that be.

It was placed there by a boy who had first to attack the top of the massive dome, then to surmount a number of pillars and ornamental work, and finally at a dizzy height above the street to "slip up" the lightning conductor.

How the climb—which to the ordinary man looks an utterly impossible one—was accomplished remains a mystery.

A local builder was called in to remove the hat. He engaged the services of an expert climber, who with the aid of ladders and other appliances succeeded in getting it down amid the cheers of the boys—but the dare-devil boy who fixed it had no ladder for his 100 feet climb.

THE MODERN WONDER

It is surprising what a single cent's worth of electricity will do. Taking 10 cents a kilowatt hour as a basis, it will do any one of the following things:

Bring two quarts of water to a boil.

Run an electric broiler for six minutes.

Operate a twelve-inch electric fan for eight minutes.

Heat a luminous radiator eight minutes.

Make a Welsh rabbit in an electric chafing dish.

Operate a sewing machine motor for three hours.

Keep a four-inch disk stove hot for fifteen minutes.

Operate a seven-inch frying pan for twelve minutes.

Make four cups of coffee in an electric percolator.

Keep a foot warmer hot for a quarter of an hour.

Keep an electric flatiron hot for fifteen minutes.

Heat an electric curling iron once a day for two weeks.

Raise 200 gallons of water 100 feet.

Keep a dentist's electric hammer and drill running for one hour and a half.

THE RUNNER SCORED BUT STILL WAS OUT

The Comedian of the Washington Team Tells of the Funniest Play He Ever Saw

I have heard many a funny baseball story, said Herman "Germany" Schaefer, "the funniest man in baseball," to a sporting writer who brought up the subject, but the funniest ever came directly under my own observation. The game was played in my busher days, and it is just as well to leave out names and places.

The play that caused the mob scene happened in the 13th inning. We went to bat in the first half of the thirteenth, hoping to end the game, as darkness was approaching and it was evident that only one more inning could be played. Our first man up reached first, was sacrificed to second and took third on a passed ball. With only one out, it looked like a run.

The batter was a clever bunter and the manager signalled for a squeeze play. The pitcher had plenty of speed and threw a fast one over. Naturally the runner on third was off with the ball, the batter connected, and while the ball was in the air the runner slid over the plate. The batter hit the ball too hard and almost made a single over short.

The third baseman had raced in for a bunt, and, of course, was out of the play. It was evident, however, that the shortstop could make the catch.

As the runner who had crossed the plate got on his feet his teammates yelled to him to get back to third to prevent a double play. He started for third as if mad. The shortstop muffed the ball when the runner was about half way back. Seeing the error, the runner dashed for the plate again, but the throw retired him.

At this stage the mob scene was put on. No one seemed to know what had happened. Every player rushed at the umpire. The umpire kept his head and ruled that when the man on third touched the plate a run had been tallied and that everything that happened afterward was void. The decision being in our favor, we gracefully retired, but not so the home team.

They kicked long and loud, and the bleacherites, believing the umpire had made a terrible decision, rushed on the field. So did a few policemen. The umpire stood his ground and finally forfeited the game to us.

The play created all sorts of comment and the ruling of the umpire was upheld by the league president.

I know of no other case in baseball

"GERMANY" in characteristic pose

where a man actually scored, tried to go back to third and then tried to score again, only to be retired, the run being allowed.

BASEBALL IS CLEAN

Billy Sunday, the Evangelist, Has Fond Recollections of it

Everywhere I go I am asked: "Are you still interested in baseball?"

You might as well ask an old ex-fire horse, "Do you remember the sound of the gong," said Billy Sunday, once a famous player, but of latter years a zealous and somewhat sensational evangelist.

Baseball is and always will be loved as long as it is kept clean and free from gamblers and crooks and from the taint of suspicion that it's not on the square. It is on the square, although some unprincipled men have tried to cast a cloud over the game.

I don't believe the game is any faster today than twenty years ago. I do not believe the players are any speedier than in the past. They have some new names for the same old stunts we pulled off in the days of Cap Anson, Mike Kelley, Buck Ewing, and others.

There are some fine pitchers in the game, but I will put old John Clarkson, Amos Rusie, or Charlie Radbourne up with any of the fast ones of to-day. You will always find me boosting the grand old game that gave me my start in this world and I would not take a cold million for my experience on the diamond.

Marquard's Hoodoo

"I never could pitch winning ball after having my picture taken the same day," said Rube Marquard, the Giant's eccentric southpaw. Marquard is reported to have thrown a baseball at a camera man who was about to take his picture on the sly. He is quite superstitious on the point.

The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the toughest bone,
The constant cooing lover carries off the blushing maid,
And the Constant Advertiser is the one who gets the Trade.

Beauty of Little Value Unless Backed by Brains

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1914, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Winifred Black

THERE was a very pleasant story in the paper this morning. It was an interview with a woman, a clever, brilliant woman of great attainments in many lines. A beautiful woman, well born and gently nurtured. A good woman and one known for works of kindness in her own land.

She teaches little orphan children how to read and how to sew; she establishes nurseries for motherless babies. She takes a great interest in sailor lads and does what she can to help those who are trying to help them in foreign parts away from home. And she has made a great name for herself in a great profession—the new profession for women—landscape gardening. And being new come to America, the papers have interviewed her early and often.

What does she think of the American garden? What would she do with an American garden if she had one, and why would she do it? Did she believe in flower masses, or in separating the colors? How did she happen to take up the work?

Oh, it was all very interesting—but one sentence in this particular interview, in this particular paper, caught my eye and held it—like the glitter of a jewel in the dust of a country road—or like the glint of a tin can in a forest where picknickers have been. It was this:

"She was so intelligent and so deeply in earnest that one forgot what a really handsome and attractive woman she really was."

Why Beauty Doesn't Count.

I can't get over that sentence—it haunts me. Who wrote it—a man or a woman?

A man without the shadow of a doubt. What woman would think such a thing—much less say it? Does it, then, make a woman less handsome and less attractive to be intelligent and deeply in earnest? I wonder why?

Fancy a woman going to interview a man of great attainments and saying that he was so intelligent, and so deeply in earnest, that she kept forgetting what a really handsome and attractive man he really was.

The more intelligent and the more deeply in earnest, and the more successful a man is, the more he is admired by women. Benjamin Disraeli was so ugly that it makes the face ache even to look at his photograph—and yet he was called by women the most fascinating man in England. I wonder if it was because they thought he was neither intelligent nor deeply in earnest?

I knew a woman who knew Abraham Lincoln. I've heard her talk about him a great deal—I don't believe she ever said a word as to whether he was ugly or handsome, and I don't believe it ever occurred to her to think of such a thing for one instant.

The next time I go to interview the President of the United States—or the Sultan of [illegible], or the latest Potato King, or Garlic Prince—I am going to say something about his looks, and whether he is really handsome and attractive, from a feminine point of view, or not. And the editor will blue pencil the remark—and show his good sense when he does it.

Who cares whether a man is "attractive to women" or not—if he does a man's work in the world? Why should a man care so desperately whether a woman is so "attractive to men" that he can't keep it out of a newspaper interview?

The "Clinging Vine" Pose.

Poor man—who interviewed the Lovely Lady and who forgot, for one illuminating moment, what a really "handsome and attractive woman" she was—to forget, for one instant, such a thing as that. And to forget it because the woman was intelligent and deeply in earnest.

What a bewildering [illegible] must intelligence be—alack the day! The world is a hard place these days for gentlemen of that turn of mind.

All the pretty girls I know—the sort an irreverent young man of my acquaintance calls "the peaches from the top of the basket"—are [illegible] of something like it. Only the [illegible] and the ugly and the unattractive [illegible] to be "clinging vines" nowadays.

Have a care, young [illegible], while you are going about your business laughing and singing, as is the right of your age and quality—wishing and [illegible], as is the desire of your heart—loving and giving, as is the need of your nature. Have a care—[illegible] be watching you—and you may become so intelligent and so deeply in earnest that you forget for one awful moment what a really handsome and attractive woman you really might be—if you were a fool.

Was it a jewel of a great truth [illegible] ignored that shone like a star through the [illegible] of that interview with the [illegible] woman—or was it the glint of the tin can in the unaccustomed forest?

Which do you think?

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

HALF the people one meets seem to have [illegible] meat during the hot weather. Going to luncheon, I met my old friend the Colonel. If there is a man on earth who knows good food, appreciates it and [illegible] has it served on his table, that man is Col. [illegible]. We spoke of the heat.

"Never eat it [illegible] summer," he declared. [illegible] about the first of June, and won't have another bit on the table until October. Feel ten years younger. Better try it."

At the end of the block I met the Dietitian. He was smiling and enthusiastic. "Meat? Why, to tell the truth, I haven't noticed it this year. I think I have evolved the ideal hot weather diet. I have eliminated all animal foods, starches, sweets. I never felt so well. Unless we have a lot of heavy work to do, we don't really need such a lot of food in summer."

After all, it may be, as the [illegible], that too many persons have the meat-habit. They eat meat just because they have always been in the habit of eating meat. They would be just as well without it. At the same time, before you [illegible] [illegible] make a study of foods and find out [illegible] and what [illegible] will furnish you with the necessary elements for a well regulated diet.

People [illegible] in the thing to be [illegible] for [illegible]. There is more [illegible] in beans, peas and lentils than in any other vegetables, and [illegible] there is in plenty, but they must be properly prepared if one is to get the good of them.

Too many cooks lack knowledge of how to cook so as to get the best values from their foods. Especially is this true of vegetables.

Beans and peas want to be cooked slowly. It is for this reason that old-time cooks make them especially delicious and digestible. Green peas, properly cooked, are very nourishing.

Wheat is important. While wheat contains more nourishment than the finer flour, spaghetti and macaroni are classed with wheat products. I am glad to see that the unpolished, brown rice is coming into favor and is to be found at many of the stores where attention is paid to high grade foods.

The majority of those who blue-pencil meat on the summer menu make great use of eggs, milk and cheese. Nuts and fruits, butter and olive oil are all used plentifully.

Soups from vegetables and milk are more nourishing than any made from beef. For example, try this:

Boil four potatoes and two onions very slowly in two quarts of water, strain and rub through a colander, and add a pint of milk and two tablespoonfuls of pearl tapioca. [illegible] the mixture. Season with salt and pepper and a piece of butter the size of an egg, and let it simmer for fifteen minutes, stirring it [illegible].

[illegible] is one of the most helpful vegetables to the cook who does not [illegible] meat. [illegible] [illegible] may be made by [illegible] a pint of green [illegible], adding two beaten eggs, salt and pepper, and enough flour to make the mixture hold its shape when made into the form of cakes or croquettes. Fry slowly in butter in a frying pan until both sides are well browned, and serve immediately, for [illegible] is one of the dishes that [illegible] the better it is.

THE GIRL HE LEFT BEHIND—By Michelson

WHEN you sail away from New York the last figure you see is that of Miss Liberty. And she is the first figure you see when you come back. But there is an image in every harbor—one that lingers most vividly, one that you carry with you on your journeys, one that thrusts itself into your dreams wherever you may roam. Coming HOME means seeing that image again.

The figure may take the form of a bronze statue as a matter of hard fact, but for you it simply symbolizes the ONE who is the GOLDEN girl of your life. The face of bronze softens to your rapt gaze as you watch the shores recede, just as HER face softens to a God-speed radiance at the good-by time. When you come back, and you find her face once more, what that face may say to you is the one most important circumstance in the whole game. Long before your journey has fairly begun you know that the happiest moment of all will be meeting again the girl you left behind.

Peter's Adventures in Matrimony

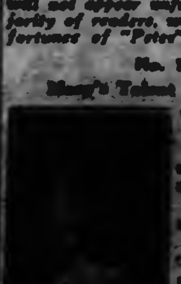
By LEONA DALRYMPLE

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 1[illegible]

Mary's Talent Appreciated.



LEONA DALRYMPLE

"WHAT are you so glum about?" I asked, as we turned out of the street.

"Just tired," said Mary.

"It's a bully Christmas night," I said, trying to cheer her. "The air's wonderfully crisp, and I like to see the snow sparkle on the snow, don't you?"

"Sometimes," said Mary.

"Why not tonight?" I insisted, pretty sure by now that there was something definite wrong.

"Well, I don't think," said Mary, "that it's been a particularly pleasant Christmas, do you?"

"Well," I admitted, "the turkey did burn a bit, of course, and a few things went wrong, but this was our first [illegible] and we couldn't expect to swing the thing without a hitch."

"N-o-o-o-o, of course not," said Mary. "Everything has been a sort of disappointment."

It flashed over me that Mary was brooding over the fact that I had given her a [illegible] gown instead of the coveted year of art instruction that she craved. I asked her point blank.

"Well, no," she said, flushing; "it—it isn't exactly that, Peter. But—but I told mother I hadn't got it, and she was so [illegible], for she thinks I really have wonderful talent."

"She doesn't have to pay the bill," I flung out fiercely. "You can admire anybody's talent when you don't have to put up for its development."

"That's the trouble," said Mary, biting her lips, "she does."

"Does what?"

"Have to put up for it."

"The dickens!"

Mary turned on me defiantly.

"I mean," she said, "that mother says I must have that art instruction in any case—and that she's going to give it to me for Christmas. I—I simply hate to take it from her, but she insists. I—I wish you could have afforded it."

"Well I couldn't," I said, hotly resentful at Mrs. Pendleton's officious offer, for I know very well the general outline of talk she had embellished it with, "and what's more, Mary, I forbid you to accept it."

Mary flashed fire.

"Peter," she said, "I think you're horribly selfish. You won't give me a thing yourself, and then, when mother does, you won't let me take it. You—you're unsympathetic and—and one of those men who haven't any faith in a woman's ability to do anything."

"Who said that," I demanded, "your mother?" For Mary is very often a conversational parrot, and I can trace back the source of many of her platitudes.

Mary didn't answer.

"I have every confidence in the world in any woman's ability," I said, "when she delivers the goods. But I certainly do not think that the few little water-color sketches you've made justify us in [illegible] money on your art instruction when we're [illegible] going behind as it is.

"We're spending more money than I make—how [illegible] say that? And we've [illegible] in debt. [illegible] is a veritable life-saver. If you can find a training school that will teach you the value of a dollar I'll put up for it cheerfully, and I imagine your father will see that your mother takes a course, too."

When we arrived at Dad's we were not speaking.

Secrets of Health and Happiness

Why Night Air Is Purer Than That of the Day

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).

DR. HIRSHBERG

AMONG the legion of discredited, nonsensical [illegible], [illegible] and superstitions, table turnings and voodooism, none survive with greater doggedness and persistence than the absurd beliefs about the dangers of night air.

Air is a [illegible] which bloweth where it listeth. It may be warm and it may be cold, it may blow shrewdly and it may be a nipping and an eager air. Yet, if it be fresh, it matters little whether it is night air or day air.

Aches may be charmed with air and agony with words, but the night can in no manner interfere with either. At night there's a husbandry in heaven; their candles are all out. But it is utterly absurd to believe that this very witching time breathes out contagion to the world. Night air is really the cleanest kind. There is less dust and dirt and fewer germs and bacteria than by day.

In daylight, despite the purifying qualities of the sun, the diligence of trades and noiseful gain, rack and torment the harassed victim of sickness. At night, with the stirred-up dust and [illegible] are laid asleep.

In night's silent reign few if any germs of disease invade nature. True enough, the sun is sunk, his ultra-violet rays are gone, and the cheerful brightness is no more. But the mere absence of light does not make for physical disorder. Therefore, something else is necessary if night air is to be really noxious.

The atmosphere is in no way inimical to health as long as the proper quantity of oxygen is present. This, you may be sure, does not depend upon darkness or light. It is not a question of color or beauty.

Night air is fresh, pure and sweet. It is much to be desired. It is the Sabbath of mankind, to rest the body and the mind. Any one loath to take advantage of the double shade, the starlit air, the sable period, because of the surviving fallacy that "night air" causes colds, coughs, corns and [illegible] merely deprives himself of the dewy freshness, the serenity of yonder moon divine, the ebony sweetness of nocturnal health and strength.

Advice to Girls

By ANNIE LAURIE

Dear Annie Laurie:

I am a girl [illegible] years old, and have a young man who is very bashful. When he comes to my home he doesn't care to talk much, but sits all by himself in a corner.

He seems to think every one nice but me. I am very much in love with him, and would like to know how I can cure him of such a queer disposition. He also stays out late with other girls, takes them to plays, etc.; he is a very nice dancer, musical and attractive in all his ways. What shall I do about it?

BACHELOR GIRL.

DEAR Bachelor Girl: I'm afraid you're going to stay a bachelor girl, if there's any truth in signs, for a while yet.

How can you be in love with a man who shows you in everything he does and says, and in all the things he does not do and does not say, that he doesn't care one penny for you, or anything about you?

Queer disposition—there's nothing queer about it, as far as I can see. The man doesn't care for you, that's all—you bore him into stupidity—let him alone and put your mind on some one else. You're not in love with him really—you only think you are.

Why shouldn't he stay out with other girls, and take them to plays, and do the tango with them, and make love to them if he wants to—and the other girls can stand it? What is it to you?

Do be sensible and stop making yourself believe all sorts of [illegible] about this [illegible] chap, who probably doesn't know you're alive except when you [illegible] him to talk to you.

There are lots of other men who will like you, and make themselves agreeable to you, too—don't make a goose of yourself for this one person. It doesn't pay.

Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper, and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Three Minute Journeys

Where Elephants Are Trapped in Pits

By TEMPLE MANNING

IN Travancore, India, the natives have an interesting method of capturing wild elephants—they trap them in pits dug in the ground.

These pits are seldom more than nine feet deep, because elephants able to climb out of a nine-foot pit are too old to be easily trained, and, consequently, are not wanted. The pits are filled three-quarters full of brush wood to break the elephant's fall, and the mass of branches and leaves laid upon the top to conceal the pits is sufficiently strong to permit any animal but the elephant to cross safely.

It was once my good fortune to be in the vicinity of one of these pits when an elephant was caught, and my native guide quickly led me where the hunting party was releasing it. He was a comparatively small beast, trying to scramble out of the pit, with his small, red eyes glaring at us and his waving trunk throwing dust all around, trumpeting with fear and rage. But he soon discovered how futile it was to attempt escape, and accepted the water one of the mahouts turned down his trunk, slobbering it down his throat and upon his huge body. And then the hunters got about getting the elephant out of the pit and into a cage.

One of the mahouts got a small line under the swaying neck, after [illegible], and a heavy cable was attached and doubled under, then thrown over the neck and drawn tight, and the other end was tied to a tree. It was then easy to get ropes about the elephant's hind legs, and the animal was ready to be released from the pit. The men threw logs and brushwood into the pit, and the elephant, spreading these under feet, soon was elevated high enough to climb out of the pit.

Trying to Climb Out.

An old tame she elephant, especially [illegible] to this work, was led up, seized the head rope and, under her mahout's direction, led the captive away to its cage. At the door of the cage the elephant balked and would not enter. But the [illegible] relative got behind him, and with one shove of her great head [illegible] him inside.

England Getting Ready to Fight

The demand that the war is making on the resources of Great Britain are stupendous, but the wealth of the Empire, which has been accumulating for centuries, is equal to any demand that is likely to be made upon it. The other day when Premier Asquith asked Parliament for a grant of $1,125,000,000 in addition to the original war grant of $500,000,000, he explained that $50,000,000 had been sent to Belgium, $4,000,000 to Servia, and that loans had been made to the Colonies, but the House of Commons voted the war fund unanimously and with enthusiasm.

The British were unprepared for the great conflict but they are now pulling themselves together and organizing armies with a rapidity that bodes ill for their enemies. More than 700,000 men have already enlisted in their regular army and 500,000 territorials have also joined the colors. It is estimated that there are 1,400,000 British soldiers in the field and training camps, though the greater part is in training. The House of Commons also authorized an additional levy of 1,000,000 men to be ready for service not later than March 1. This will make an army of 2,500,000 with which to assist the French and Belgians in driving the Germans back into Germany.

Such an enormous addition to the armies on the Western German front ought to be sufficient to compel the Germans to do their fighting on their own soil and convince them of the frutility of attempting to overcome the combined resources of three great powers. The Germans, however, may be expected to fight with the courage of desperation in the next few weeks in an effort to gain as much ground as possible before the new levies of troops confront them backed by almost inexhaustible financial resources.

Knee Joint Stiff Three Years

CURED BY NERVILINE.

Anyone would marvel at my recovery, writes Mr. Leonard [illegible], a young man well known about Chatham. I had inherited a rheumatic tendency through my mother's family, and in my early days suffered frightfully. About three years ago the pain and stiffness settled in my left knee joint. I was lame and walked with a very distinct limp. Nerviline was brought to my notice and I rubbed it into the sore joint four or five times a day. It dispelled every vestige of pain, reduced the swelling, took out the stiffness, and gave me the full use of my limb again. I don't believe there is a pain-relieving remedy, not a single liniment, that can compare with Nerviline. I hope every person with pains, with sore back, with lameness, with lumbago, with neuralgia—I do hope they will try out Nerviline which I am convinced will quickly and permanently cure them."

If Nerviline wasn't a wonderful pain-relieving remedy, if Nerviline didn't quickly relieve, if Nerviline wasn't known to be a grand cure for all rheumatic conditions, it wouldn't have been so largely used as a family remedy for the past forty years. No better, stronger, or more soothing liniment made. Get the large 50c. family size bottle; small trial size 25c.; sold by any dealer, anywhere.

INCONSPICUOUS CLOTHING

Dark Blue and Green Can be Seen the Farthest

Some curious and rather unexpected results have followed experiments in Europe for the purpose of determining what color in a soldier's uniform is the least conspicuous to an enemy. Of ten men, two were dressed in light grey uniforms, two in dark grey, two in green, two in dark blue, and two in scarlet. All were then ordered to march off, while a group of officers remained watching them. The first to disappear in the landscape was the light grey, and next, surprising as it may seem, the scarlet. Then followed the dark grey, while the dark blue and the green remained visible long after all the others had disappeared. Experiments in firing at blue and red targets, according to some experimenters, showed that blue could be more easily [illegible] at a distance than red.

It may be that khaki, which is the fashionable color now for army uniforms, will have to give way to grey, for in these days of long-range weapons inconspicuous clothing is vitally necessary for soldiers.

LORD MAYOR'S FIRST GOLF

London's Lord Mayor, Sir Thomas Vansittart Bowater, opened a new golf course at Shirley Park and suddenly found himself under the necessity of making his first essay at golf before a critical crowd.

Sir Thomas had never used a club in his life, and when Tom Crapp, the professional, put one in his hand and told him how to strike the innocent-looking ball the Lord Mayor looked with perplexity at the flag on the green 400 yards away. However, he buttoned up his coat and said he would do it.

Then he struck wildly at the little ball, actually hit it, and it drove hard into an unhappy spectator.

The ball rebounded into the rough and was not found for a few minutes. Then it was handed to the perspiring Lord Mayor in a silver frame as a souvenir.

WOMAN MORALLY [illegible]

[illegible] For Her by the Gold Than Man, Says Winnipeg Minister

Is a man morally weaker than a woman? was one of the questions asked by Rev. Dr. J. L. Gordon of Winnipeg during a course of lectures.

"I will answer that," he said, "by saying that a woman is morally stronger than a man. Man is the incarnation of passion and force. Woman is the incarnation of sentiment." He continued that womanhood formed the anchor that holds the race to moral and Christian living.

In answer to the question as to whether the association of men and women in commercial life tends to lower the moral life, he said that it opens the door to temptation, but he considered the Anglo-Saxon womanhood morally the best in the world, and better now than it was 100 years ago. The meeting of men and women in the business life brought temptations, but that is the test of character and developed better manhood and nobler womanhood, than where the women were prevented from associating with men.

Little Things Worth Knowing

To make pies brown and crisp-looking, brush top crust with milk.

Plunge tomatoes in very hot water, then into cold. The skin will come off easily, and they will remain firm.

Windows and bureau drawers that open stiffly should be rubbed with dry soap.

Save oil papers that come around bread or cracker boxes to clean sad irons.

Rub sad irons over a layer of salt if rough or sticky.

If a lemon is warmed before squeezing nearly double the quantity of juice will be obtained.

Home Cold Storage

The more quickly an article of food is cooled the longer it will keep.

Never place food directly on the ice.

All left-overs containing onions, parsley, turnips or cabbage must be covered tightly or the entire box will be full of their odors.

Fish and cheese impart their flavor readily to milk and butter and often render them unfit for use. Keep fish and cheese out of the refrigerator.

Keep pieces of charcoal in an old refrigerator. This will relieve the close, musty odor. Renew every two or three days.

Banishing Kerosene Odor

To remove the odor from bottles or jugs which have been used for kerosene, wash in thin milk or lime. This forms an emulsion with the oil and removes every trace; by washing a second time with milk of lime and a little chloride of lime all odor will disappear.

Expose scorch stains to bright hot sun.

A New Odometer

An odometer to show distances traversed by automobiles has been invented to be attached directly to the hub of a wheel without any extensive gearing.

Don't waste your time wishing you were like others. If you're like them they would then be so much like you that you would no longer like them.

OBJECTIVE OF ENEMY

License For Explosives Factory Opposed by Admiralty and Refused

Nobel's Explosives Company, Ltd., failed at Sittingbourne, England, to get an explosives factory at Harty Isle. Evidence in support of the application was given by Sir Frederick Nathan, formerly of the Army, and Brigadier-General Stone.

On the other side, Major-General Maxwell, General Officer Commanding the East Coast Defences, on behalf of the Admiralty, said if an explosives factory were established on the proposed site it would form an objective for an enemy, who, if successful in procuring a landing there, would be able to take the defences of Sheerness in the rear.

Captain Schwann, assistant director of the Air Department of the Admiralty, said an explosives factory there would hamper the operations of the instructional flying school at Eastchurch.

The chairman of the Bench announced, after a private consultation, that they could not disregard the evidence of General Maxwell. The objection of the Admiralty must be upheld, and the license refused.

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1912 with six pairs of foxes, at $60,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of [illegible] Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs—all young foxes—good for at least 10 years. This Company has bought some of this year's [illegible] with a guarantee that they are [illegible] of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the [illegible] of Sir William [illegible], and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality, sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in breeding foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to [illegible]

[illegible]

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 85 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what [illegible].

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Pelts shipped from Prince Edward Island, to London, England, and sold there in March, [illegible].

SHARES

Shares are selling at $25.00 each: 25 per cent. with application and the balance on or before September 1st, 1914.

Simply fill out the application form and mail to Major C. McKinnon, Secretary-Treasurer, Glenaladale, P. E. I.

All cheques must be made payable to "The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Ltd."

A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the fox ranching business means to the investor, we will figure it out for you.

We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produces a litter of only four [illegible] this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 25 per cent. of the balance for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $50,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent. we give you this large [illegible]. While we guarantee 50 per cent. and should each pair in our ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about [illegible] per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

WILL BE READY TO LEAVE HOME AT NEW YEARS

Ottawa, Nov. 28—With the return of Major General Hughes, who will be back in Ottawa to-morrow, details of the allotment and mobilization of the fifty thousand men whom the Government decided to recruit and to keep in constant training will be announced. The militia headquarters staff has been working on the details and it is understood that they are now ready. They will have to be approved by Major General Hughes.

Where New Corps are to be Raised.

Recruiting for the second contingent and the thirty thousand, the Government first decided to raise, is still in progress, so that the divisional commanders will only keep up their work.

It is understood that by the plan which has been arranged, Ontario will be assigned five more regiments, four of infantry and one mounted. Quebec will be allotted two regiments, one infantry and one mounted. The Maritime Provinces will be asked to raise two additional infantry regiments. The remaining regiments will be assigned to Western Canada. It is probable that the Manitoba division will raise six new regiments, Alberta two mounted regiments, and British Columbia two regiments.

Auxiliary Corps Nearly Complete

Recruiting for all the various units of the next contingent such as army medical corps, engineering, army service corps, is now nearly complete. The second contingent like the first will go to the front equipped to the last detail with the transports, automobiles, hospital units, ambulances, and everything necessary to have an army take the field.

The committee in charge of the transportation work which is headed by Senator George Taylor completed its report yesterday, and it is now in the hands of the Prime Minister. It is the intention to purchase all automobiles and army trucks direct from manufacturers. No middle men need apply.

Ready to Leave at New Years.

It is expected that the second contingent will be ready to leave for England January 1st, fully equipped including the latest artillery weapons which are under order at the present time. Whether the British War Office will be ready to receive them is another question. The second contingent is certain not to leave for England until the present army at Salisbury Plains departs for France.

When the next contingent leaves the Canadian force in Canada will at once be recruited up to fifty thousand men so that there will be continually fifty thousand men under arms in the Dominion.

BIG FRAZER RIVER BRIDGE OPERATES ON NEW PLAN

The counter-balance lift portion of the big Grand Trunk Pacific bridge at Prince George, B.C., was raised for the first time this week to permit of steamers passing up the Fraser River. Although operated on a new principle of bridge opening the movable portion of the new structure climbed skyward with the ease and precision of a modern passenger elevator.

The lift span is 100 feet long and instead of swinging like most bridges it lifts straight in the air. This is accomplished by electrically run machinery, assisted by counter-balance weights of concrete. The arrangement is such that one man simply touches a button and automatically the machinery is placed in motion which opens the safety lock, closes the six protection gates on the bridge and lifts the 100 foot section to a height of about 20 feet above the level of the floor of the bridge. The bridge over the Fraser River is also one of the longest steel bridges in the Dominion being 26 4 feet from bank to bank of the river. There are twelve steel spans and the lift, and fourteen concrete piers were necessary to sustain the weight of this mass of concrete and steel. The railway right-of-way section of the bridge is 19 feet wide, and on each side is a 12 foot roadway for vehicular traffic.

An Appeal to the Intelligent Investor !

Does a logical presentation of a good investment interest you? Do you believe there is oil in commercial quantities in Alberta? If you are alive to the situation you do. Then it will pay you to investigate our proposition and our holdings.

Please Read Carefully and Note!

THAT Oil authorities are agreed the Alberta Oil Field is of an anticlinal formation. It has been fairly accurately ascertained in what general direction these anticlines run. Geologist D. W. Dunn chose wisely in the selection of the now famous Monarch well. WINDSOR OILFIELDS, LIMITED, has holdings located close to the Monarch.

THAT Cunningham Craig, one of the world's most eminent geologists, selected the site of the Mowbray-Berkeley well. Stock in that company is not offered at any price. We possess acreage adjoining the Mowbray-Berkeley (Section 12, Township 23, Range 5, West of 5th). If a strike is made at the Mowbray-Berkeley what will shares in our company be worth?

Our holdings consist of 1300 acres, carefully selected and judiciously spread over the entire oil field.

SUN'S RAYS WARM MERE SKIN OF EARTH

It Takes Six Months For Midsummer Heat to Penetrate to Its Full Extent

How far does the heat of the summer's sun penetrate into the ground? Probably not one person in ten will give a answer that is even approximately correct. Their replies generally vary from one inch to many hundreds of feet, says London Tit-Bits. Actually the distance is about 3 feet. Beyond this depth the temperature of the soil does not vary appreciably from hour to hour, let the midday be never so hot and the midnight never so cold. At this depth the mean temperature in the summer is about 55 degrees Fahrenheit, and in the winter about 34 degrees.

And the annual difference? That is to say, the depth at which there is some difference between the summer temperature and that of the winter? Well, at a depth of 60 feet it is impossible to measure any change due to the changing seasons overhead. Go down only 40 feet, and it is minute—barely measurable. But at 25 feet to 30 feet it is quite a definite amount.

The surface heat takes a long while to penetrate downwards. In fact, curiously enough, the change in temperature of the ground takes just over six months to reach the end of its 25 feet-journey. Thus we are faced with the phenomenon of midsummer upon the surface occurring at the same time as midwinter 25 feet to 30 feet down, and vice versa.

Farmers talk about "cold" soils and "warm" soils. This, although it sounds improbable to those who have never had anything to do with the land, is an actual fact.

Everybody knows that black clothes are better to wear when a hot summer's sun is shining than white ones. The reason for this is that black and other dark colors absorb heat, while white and the lighter shades reflect it. And this applies to soils equally with cloths.

Those soils which by their ingredients are a darker color are literally warmer than their lighter neighbors. Peaty soils, some of which are nearly black, others a rich, dark brown, are the warmest; light-colored clays and chalk the coldest. There may be as much as 15 degrees or 16 degrees between the temperatures of two soils lying beside each other and upon the same day.

BIG PACIFIC DRY DOCK

Biggest Vessels to be Handled at Prince Rupert When Work Done

Good progress is being made with the construction of the big Grand Trunk Pacific Dry Dock at Prince Rupert. This dock, costing $2,000,000, will have an important national value, as it will be able to handle the largest vessels, either naval or mercantile, afloat on the Pacific Ocean.

The dock will have in all twelve pontoons and the first of these to be put in position is 130 feet long and exclusive of other fittings has 300,000 feet of timber in its construction. The capacity displacement of the series of pontoons will be 2,000,000 tons and each pontoon will have two powerful centrifugal pumping equipment, when the ship [illegible] the water can be rapidly pumped and repair work begun. The dock is so arranged that it can be used in three separate units or any combination that is desired.

About the Cross

Although the cross is the symbol of Christianity, and it was used as a religious emblem long before the Christian era, it was not always an object of veneration, nor the insignia of religion.

The ancients used the cross as an instrument of capital punishment and centuries before Calvary death on the cross was considered so ignominious that only the lowest malefactors were crucified.

The Egyptian obelisks bear impressions of the cross, and the Babylonians and the Assyrians used the cross. The coins of the early Phoenicians were stamped with the [illegible]

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency) on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months' residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties — must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

BUTTERMILK CHEESE

Dairy Byproduct Utilized at Agricultural College

In the Dairy Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, Miss Belle Millar, in charge of the Home Dairy Work, made some experiments in the utilization of dairy by-products. Cheese was made from skim milk and buttermilk. The making of cheese from skim milk is comparatively simple, but the buttermilk requires a little more of a process, which is described as follows:

Heat the buttermilk to 80 degrees F., as rapidly as possible, stirring enough to ensure even heating. Leave it undisturbed for an hour.

Heat to 130 degrees rapidly, and with just enough stirring to ensure even heating. Cover it to retain the heat, and leave undisturbed for about an hour.

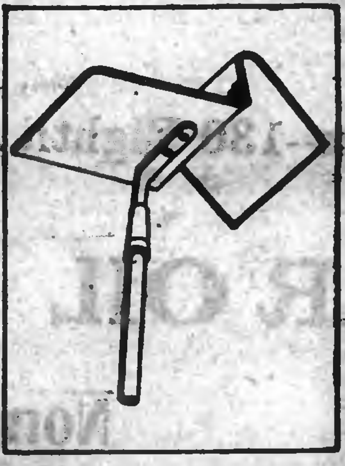
Without further stirring drain the curd by hanging it up in a cheesecloth bag, or by placing a piece of cheesecloth over a rack or strainer. As the portions of the curd next the cloth will drain more quickly, lift the cloth and allow the curd to roll over, thus securing more even and more rapid drainage.

As soon as the curd is properly drained it is salted and packed. The amount of salt to use will depend on the consumer. 1 ounce of salt to 5 pounds of cheese is recommended, but many prefer 1 ounce of salt to 3 pounds of cheese.

LAWN EDGER

Effective Tool for Trimming Turf Along Paths, etc.

To give a lawn that neatly kept appearance that is admirable, the edges of the turf along walks and flower beds must be trimmed cleanly. For this purpose a new edging tool has been patented. On the end of a long handle is a single sheet of metal with a straight, flat section, adapted to fit on top of the grass and a V-shaped cutting section bent down from it, with sharp edges on both ends. By pressing this tool along the edge of the turf the overhanging grass is trimmed neatly and a smooth little trench is cut between the grass and the edge of the walk, or whatever the border is. This is a great improvement over the usual straggly borders that mar the appearance of otherwise attractive suburban places.



CUTS IN EITHER DIRECTION.

MISSED COBALT'S RICHES

Old French Voyageurs Knew of One Mine 150 Years Ago

That the old French voyageurs and missionaries knew of the existence of at least one mine old maps show beyond disputation. If they had extended their researches for minerals beyond the waterways and had happened upon the silver mines at Cobalt what a difference it would have made to the probable destiny of the Dominion?

The discovery of Cobalt a century and a half ago was quite within the realms of possibility, says The Cobalt Nugget. There was an old Indian trail within a few feet of Long, now Cobalt Lake, and where the Indian was wont to go, there too, the French voyageur could and did follow him. There would have been no difficulty in mining the ore. It was right on the surface and could easily have been mined and taken down in boats to Quebec. Then would the world have been astounded with the glamour of a silver Eldorado in the heart of Canada. The French king would have taken more pains to conserve the country which his predecessor had valued as so many arpents of snow and the destiny of the Dominion might have fallen along quite other lines.

Problems of the Large Employer

In the small factory, frequently managed by a resident owner, the continuance of a system of direct contact between employer and worker has gradually operated to maintain and perpetuate harmonious relations. The problem before the large corporation-owned plant is to provide [illegible] touch which, by emphasizing the essential community of interest, establishes a sense of unity and fellowship. It can be done only by making this oneness of aim and interest a reality, and not merely the occasion for pleasant speech-making. It cannot be done by reducing wages, [illegible] be done by dividing profits. [illegible] depends principally on an unfailing insight into the needs and problems of the body of employes, and that insight can only be obtained by sharing the problems of management with the men. The degree to which employers are prepared to go in this direction is a sound indication of their earnestness in seeking the removal of the prevailing point of discontent.—Engineering Magazine.

Clean pots and pans with
GOLD DUST

Germs of decay accumulate on oft-used pots and pans, and ordinary soap and water only clean off the surface.

Gold Dust does the work—and does it right. It digs deep after germs, cleans like a new whistle and leaves your pots and pans as new, as bright as the day they were new—and sanitarily safe.

Gold Dust does this work in just half the time required by soap or any other cleanser. Does it better, too.

Gold Dust cleans everything like magic.

TWO PESTS OF CATTLE

How to Prevent and Control Lice and Ringworm

These two pests of bovine cattle trouble most in dark, damp, dirty, badly-ventilated stables. Remedial measures fail if only the animals are treated. So long as calves and adult cattle remain on pasture they are not bothered with vermin or skin disease; but when they go into winter quarters the trouble starts. The reason is that eggs ("nits") of lice remain in the stable from season to season, while the vegetable parasite of ringworm lives on damp walls, partitions, boards and other woodwork as well as on the skin of animals. Both pests, therefore, are acquired in the stable. If animals are to be made comfortable by keeping them free of lice and ringworm the stable should be specially prepared for their reception. Each animal should be allowed four square feet of window-glass and five hundred to eight hundred cubic feet of air-space in the stable.

Good ventilation, too, is absolutely necessary, and by preference should be of the King system. In this method of ventilation the fresh air enters at the ceiling, drives the hot air downward upon the backs of the cattle and is sucked out through wall vents near the ground-level and connecting with pipes discharging through a high chimney in the roof. The cleansing process consists in removing all loose trash, litter and soiled feed, scrubbing walls, mangers, partitions, floors and ceiling with a 1-50 solution of coal-tar disinfectant or crude carbolic acid or solution of four ounces of formaldehyde or sulphate of copper to a gallon of water. Fresh-made lime-wash is then applied with a spraying pump, which forces the wash into every crack, cranny and crevice. An addition of one pound of chloride of lime to three gallons of lime-wash makes it more effective.

To rid animals of lice a 1-100 solution of coal-tar dip may be sprayed on and brushed in, when the weather is not too cold, or an even more effective solution may be made by steeping four ounces of stavesacre seeds in a gallon of boiling water and using when cold. Frequent applications are necessary, as new broods of lice hatch out from "nits." In cold weather dust the infested part of the skin freely with flowers of sulphur, or Persian or pyrethrum insect-powder. Mercurial ointment (blue ointment) is effective when applied to the poll of the head and along the backbone; but treated animals must be separated to prevent licking of the ointment, which is poisonous. Ringworm is indicated by bare, white, scaly, crusty spots upon the face, around the eyes and on the neck or other parts of young cattle. Treat by scraping and scrubbing each spot clean, and then rubbing in iodine ointment every other day until well. "Barn itch," or ringworm, may also affect adult cattle, causing itching scaly spots on the body and especially about the tail-head. Treat by scrubbing clean and wetting with a solution of two pounds of sulphate of copper to a gallon of water applied hot.

RULES FOR HUSBANDS

L. C. Dillman, a Seattle millionaire, as the result of eighteen years of marital bliss promulgated the following rules for husbands:

"Keep all promises made before and at the time of marriage. Keep a joint bank account. Go to your club no oftener than one night a week. Have no dogs or pets of any kind. Call her up on the telephone at least three times a day. When away from home write or telegraph every day. Take her with you on business and pleasure trips. Be more polite to her than to any other woman you meet. Remember that she likes flowers, candy and books. Make it a business to be comfortable whenever she is happy. Do not criticize her dress. Be a gentleman to all women, but a husband to one only. If you have only a dollar you are not wasting it by spending it on her. When she is dissatisfied get a divorce. Life is too short to waste any of it in trying to please an abnormal woman."

NON-DRINKING SHEEP

Apparently Thrive Without Water Except Dew and Plant Juice

Sheep on the Nebo National forest range, Utah, go four and a half months without water except for such moisture as they get from the dew and the juices of forage plants.

Grazing sheep on a range entirely destitute of water is a recent innovation due to the increasing demand for forage and the efforts of the forestry officers to find a place on the forest ranges for all the stock that can safely be admitted. The area on the Nebo which has proved usable by sheep is high and rocky, a portion of it being above timber line, and it has neither springs nor streams of sufficient size or accessibility to be used for stock watering purposes. The grazing season lasts from June 15 to October 31, and during this period of four and a half months the animals do not get a drink.

Under such conditions, however, the sheep do extremely well, and the lambs from this range have an average weight at the close of the season of 68 pounds on the Chicago market, which is rather above the normal weight from that vicinity.

In [illegible] forest in Idaho sheep get water only twice during the four-months' summer grazing season. There is no water on the range, but the sheep are driven to a nearby stream lower down the mountain side.

SUCCESSFUL DAIRYING

Depends to Large Extent Upon Knowing Individual Worth of Cows

There are such excellent concrete examples now and again outcropping of men who prove that it pays to take up cow testing, that their records of success make stimulating reading for dairy farmers all over the Dominion.

Here is a good example of what one man at Cedar Hall, Quebec, in the Gaspe Peninsula, accomplished by carefully watching his fairly good cows and feeding them better. The first year his eight cows gave him 33,017 pounds of milk, an average of 4,128 pounds, at a feed cost of $[illegible], netting a total profit of $76.82, an average of $9.60 profit per cow. Two of the best cows in the herd the first year were lost accidentally, two heifers made up the herd to eight again; a pure bred sire is kept.

The next year his eight cows gave him 41,408 pounds of milk, an average of 5,176 pounds, or 1,048 pounds of an increase per cow. The feed cost $4.12 more per cow, but the total profit was $177.39, or an increase of 130 per cent. in the profit. It pays to give additional feed if the cows kept are of the type to make use of it profitably.

The forcible realities are these: The gross income from milk increased by $122.43 from the same number of cows, the profit far more than doubled, and the owner has received every encouragement to try for still better results. That is where a trial cow testing trip generally lands the herd owner.

Shooting Oil Wells

Keen interest is being taken in the development of the Manitoulin oil fields by Senator Poirer and representatives from all the chief centres on the island assembled at Green Bay to witness the shooting of some of the wells. E. A. Stokes, of [illegible], was on hand, and a fuse was lighted, and a sharp shock was felt and the earth trembled, from the mouth of the pipe a [illegible] liquid shot into the air to a height of about eighty feet and fell [illegible] to the ground. This was followed immediately by a second gush of a watery liquid which ascended to a height of about a hundred feet. About fifteen quarts of nitroglycerine were used in shooting the well.

SPLENDID SPORT IN FLYING BOATS

All the Thrills of the Automobile, Aeroplane and the Motorboat But Not Nearly So Much Danger

Year by year, almost day by day, flying is becoming to be regarded more as a sport than what was once called "the art." Although flying is yet in its infancy, it is not too much to predict that the flying machine will become a strong competitor of the automobile and likewise, if not more so, the flying boat, to any other kind of sail pleasure craft. The landings from the aeroplane have not always been successful, but to alight with a flying boat after a flight is as easy as to guide a motor car to a standstill.

In the first recorded race of these craft, held on Long Island, the sight of three machines jockeying for position was inspiring, while the close finish of the return trip from the outer buoy would stir the blood of any sportsman.

Water flying is safe mainly because there is always a good place to alight. It is not necessary to guide the machine along a narrow course for starting or to pick one's ground in landing. The surface is smooth and level, and one may land in any direction with safety. Winds over the water are invariably much steadier than over land, and if, through carelessness or inexperience, the operator does make a bad landing, or plunges the boat at too steep an angle into the water, or strikes a wing too hard, the accident cannot be grave. The machine is not seriously damaged and the operator is none the worse, except for the "ducking."

The first development in water flying, the hydro-aeroplane, has three advantages, but the later flying boat with its large surplus of buoyancy has all the advantages of a motor boat and a flying machine combined. It is as seaworthy as any motor boat of its size, and flies as well as any aeroplane of equal proportions.

Now that we have a safe system of flying, the development of aviation is sure and unlimited. For racing nothing can compare with the flying boat. There is the same chance to struggle for position as in yacht racing, and every opportunity for the pilot to exhibit his skill in rounding the buoys and making his starts and landings. No prettier or more impressive sight can be seen than a fleet of flying boats rising from the water at the start of a race, or coming down the course "neck and neck" at the finish.

On the water, the flying boat is handled like an ordinary motor boat, although the controls resemble those of an automobile. The rudder is operated by a steering wheel, which also operates the device for elevating.

TAX ON RACING BETS

German Government Proposes to Legalize Making of Books

The "bookmaker question" is one which has long agitated German sporting circles. For the last thirty years bookmaking, according to the strict letter of the law, has been "verboten," like so many things in the Fatherland. Yet the profession has contrived to run its business and prosper to a fair extent.

Now the whole position is about to be changed. The Government has been considering the matter, and a bill has been drafted which will have the effect of giving State recognition to the bookmaker.

In Germany, as in France, the parimutuel system is in vogue, and the Government taxes all the transactions of that machine to the extent of 16 2-3 per cent., and realizes about $7,000,000 annually therefrom.

Now it is proposed to reduce that tax to 12 per cent. Of that the State takes one-half, the other 6 per cent. going to the various Rennvereine, or racing associations, for the purposes of horse-breeding. The Government hopes that it will lose no revenue by the decrease, as the bookmaker tax will preserve, and very possibly increase, the amount the State receives. As to the bookmaker, the bill provides for the recognition of a certain number in each large town, the figure to be fixed according to the population. He must pay a tax of 6 per cent. of his takings to the Government, and the Rennvereine will receive a small percentage of the winnings from the person betting. Small wins will be free from tax, which will afterwards rise as high as 10 per cent.

SUPERSTITIOUS CRICKETERS

Why cricketers should be superstitious is hard to say, but that the majority of them are very much so is a well known fact. Probably the most common belief in the cricketer's creed of superstition is that a bat which has made a good score can, if given a fair chance, repeat the performance. Hundreds of cricketers would give very large sums to possess themselves of a bat with which some famous batsman has knocked up a big score, and high prices have been offered for the bats of the leading cracks by amateurs who believed in the superstition.

Very frequently a batsman who discovers that he is unable to score with his own bat will borrow one with which some other man has made a big score. Another popular belief is that if a batsman places his pads on before the preceding batsman is out the bowler will almost invariably beat him before he reaches double figures, and he will often ignore his captain's orders to be ready in that he refuses to put on his pads before he sees the retiring batsman well on his way to the pavilion.

ACTORS RISK LIVES BEFORE THE CAMERA

Hair-raising Tricks Performed to Make Moving Pictures Really Sensational

Each big film-producing company includes amongst its artists a number of nerve-hardened players who are specially engaged to take huge risks in carrying out sensational exploits which add realism to spectacular moving pictures.

These men are mostly retired acrobats and circus riders. One of the most risky and consequently best paid occupations in the "movie" world is that pursued by a number of men who specialize in falling off galloping horses in spectacular Indian or war films. These artistes attempt feats that even the most hardened rough-rider would hesitate to perform.

Throwing themselves from the saddle when galloping in the midst of a horde of riders, they will lay perfectly motionless on the ground, although running a terrible risk of being trampled on by the hoofs of the other charging animals. Another well-known actor, who, in addition to possessing nerve and athletic skill, has his powers of timing well developed, earns a good deal of money through a sensational drop from an express train.

He utilizes this performance in several ways. Sometimes he poses as an escaped convict who endeavors to escape the clutches of the law by a daring jump from an express. On other occasions he indulges in a struggle with another actor on the roof of a moving car, eventually being flung off the train into space.

The manner in which this player accomplishes with safety this daring leap is to fall into a lake that runs at the side of the railway track, for the train on which he does this trick always travels over the same piece of line.

A favorite sensational incident in connection with dramatic films is the falling of a vehicle—generally a motor-car—over a precipice. Many believe that a dummy figure sits at the wheel of the car when it plunges into space. This is not the case, however, for a real actor usually does remain in the vehicle when it leaves terra firma. Quite a number of daring actors are capable of performing this feat without serious injury to themselves. They actually fall over a fairly steep cliff in a car, but just before it crashes to the ground they leap clear into a patch of sand to safety. The motor-car is invariably smashed up.

One film-producing company employs an artiste solely for his ability to leap extraordinary distances sideways from a horse's back.

When traveling on horseback over a narrow bridge, he gives a violent sideward spring, which carries him over the parapet of the bridge down to the stream below. This plucky actor has few rivals in the portrayal of this hair-raising deed, for should his spring not be well-judged he could easily sustain some serious injury by crashing up against the masonry of the bridge. This is a favorite trick of J. P. McGowan, who, by the way, used to be a dispatch rider for Lord Kitchener in South Africa.

OUR BODIES AND HEAT

We Drink Liquid That Would Scald Our Hands

The human body can stand far greater heat if it be dry than if it be wet, and, strangely enough, it can stand far hotter liquids inside than out. For example, the average tea-drinker sips tea at a temperature of about 140 degrees—sometimes as high as 145 degrees. But he cannot bear his hand in water at 130 degrees, or his feet in water higher than 112 degrees. Few people can stand a bath in water at 105 degrees.

In parts of Central Australia men live in an average temperature of 115 degrees in the shade and 140 degrees in the sun, while 151 degrees has been registered. In the Persian Gulf the thermometers on ships vary between 128 degrees and 140. An explorer in the Himalayas reports that he found in December, and at more than 14,000 feet altitude, a temperature of 131 degrees.

Drs. Bleyden and Chantrey, two English scientists, desiring to ascertain how high a temperature the human body could stand, shut themselves in an oven, of which the heat was gradually raised, and they were able to bear it until the thermometer registered 212 degrees, the boiling point of water.

FISH STORIES

Lightning Killed a Bass Weighing Eleven Pounds

From the Eastern Townships of Quebec there came a story of an eleven-pound black bass killed by lightning. That was pretty good. Nobody had ever seen an eleven-pound black bass before in the world, and nobody had ever seen a fish killed by lightning. The story was a double-edged stroke of genius. Next from the New England States there came a story of a lad who rammed his fist into the gills of a fish in diving and landed another big one. And this was followed up by a story from Baltimore, where an old tar tells of having it's ship lifted out of the water on the back of an enormous whale.

"CATARRHOZONE" PREVENTS BAD COLDS STRENGTHENS WEAK IRRITABLE THROATS

Employs Nature's own Methods and is Invariably Successful.

Few will escape a cold this winter, but alas! many colds run into Catarrh.

Neglected Catarrh is the straight gateway to consumption.

Catarrhozone is a germ-killer—destroys microbes that cause Catarrh.

It heals and soothes, relieves the cough, gives throat and lungs a chance, cleanses the nostrils, clears out the phlegm.

You feel better in an hour.

In a day you're greatly relieved, and so goes the curing of Catarrhozone till you're well.

No treatment so direct. Catarrhozone goes right to the spot—acts quickly, cures thoroughly catarrh, bronchitis and all throat affections.

"Nothing could kill a cold so fast as Catarrhozone," writes Amey E. Snelling, from St. Johns. "Last month I had a frightful cold in my head, suffered from [illegible] nose, running eyes and torturing headache. Ten minutes with 'Catarrhozone' inhaler gave relief and in one hour I was well of my cold. Catarrhozone I consider a marvel."

Carry "Catarrhozone" inhaler in your pocket or purse—take it to church—to the theatre—to work—use it in bed. It prevents and cures all manner of nose and throat troubles. Complete outfit, guaranteed $1.00; small size 50c.; sample size 25c.; at dealers everywhere.

AN EASY WAY TO STOP HEAD NOISES

Good Advice For Those Who Fear Deafness

Men and women who are growing hard of hearing and who experience a stuffy feeling of pressure against their ear drums, accompanied by buzzing, rumbling sounds in their head like water falling or steam escaping should take prompt and effective measures to stop this trouble. Headnoises are almost invariably the forerunners of complete or partial deafness and most deaf people suffer from them constantly. Sometimes these head noises become so distressing and nerve racking with their never ceasing "hum" they drive the sufferer almost frantic and complete nervous breakdown and even violent insanity have been known to result.

Thanks to a remarkable scientific discovery made recently in England it is now possible to almost instantly lessen the severity of these headnoises and in a very short time to completely and permanently overcome them. With the disappearing of the head noises, the hearing also greatly improves and very frequently can be restored to normal. This English treatment is known as Parmint and can be easily and safely self administered at home. Leading druggists in Peterborough and vicinity now have it in stock. Get from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength) and mix it at home with ¼ pint of hot water and 4 oz. of granulated sugar. Stir until dissolved and then take one tablespoonful four times a day until the noises disappear and hearing improves. Parmint is used double strength in this way not only to reduce, by tonic action, the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian tube and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear and the results it gives are both remarkably quick and effective.

IMPORTANT.—In ordering Parmint always specify that you want double strength; your druggist has it or he can get it for you; if not, send 75c to the International Laboratories, 74 St. Antoine st., Montreal, P. Q. who make a specialty of it.

DEFEAT OF GERMANS IN POLAND A GREAT DISASTER

London, Ont., Nov. 26.— Discovery of bottles labelled poison in the camp of the 18th (second contingent) battalion here, and further arrests by the military police are sensational developments that followed today as the sequel to the arrest of a German, calling himself a commercial traveller, in the city last night by military police.

Col. E.S. Wigle, commanding officer of the Eighteenth, absolutely refused to say a word today concerning either the arrests or the poison.

He called it a matter of "gravest importance" today and made the declaration that a public statement would be issued as soon as an investigation was completed.

How many arrests have been made, on whom the bottles were found and how their presence became known is being kept a military secret. It is known however, that their owners declared them to contain pepsin.

Men of the permanent Canadian army medical corps tested the contents of the bottles in milk to-day and proved that it was not pepsin. The bottles were then sent to the Institute of public health here for analysis. Late this afternoon the statement was given out there that the tests had not been completed.

London's Beauty Writers

Weekly Selections from Noted Beauty Experts Writing for the English Press. Simple and Effective Methods.

By Olga Arnhem, Special Correspondent, London, Eng.

Each week in this department I will endeavor, by careful clipping from the London papers, to keep my Colonial readers informed on the latest and best advice of the London beauty experts. Owing to the persistent demand most London newspapers and periodicals are now devoting much space to the serious consideration of beauty culture. Many of them now employ high salaried experts to advise and instruct in methods most efficient for enhancing or restoring beauty of face and figure. I append herewith a few clippings from leading English publications. Any of the ingredients mentioned could be obtained from Canadian chemists or druggists, so I am told. Look out for more hints next week. I shall endeavor to keep right up to date.

Shampoo and Hair Beautifier

You complain of brittle, faded hair. You will find that keeping the scalp clean and healthy is the most effective way to restore the natural beauty and softness, but in selecting your shampoo avoid soaps or mixtures containing free alkali. By dissolving a teaspoonful of stallax in a cup of hot water you will have a mild, soothing, cleansing mixture that makes the head feel fine and removes all dust, dandruff and excess of oil, leaving the scalp clean and pliant, and ensuring a beautiful growth of long, lustrous, fluffy hair.

Don't Shave Off Superfluous Hair

Hair on face, neck or arms should never be shaved or clipped off, as that encourages its growth. The most effective method, which at the same time is perfectly harmless, is to mix a little powdered phenminol into a paste with water and apply directly to the affected surface. When this is removed in two or three minutes the hair will have vanished completely, leaving the skin quite smooth and clear. Since the virtues of powdered phenminol as a hair remover have become generally known, most druggists now supply this in convenient one-ounce jars.

For Falling Hair

How often one hears the lament, "I have tried everything on the market, and my hair comes out in handfuls." Not so surprising, either, when you come to think it over. Hair tonics to be effective need be fresh, and there is no earthly reason why every woman should not make her own lotion at home. The finest vegetable tonic I know of is made by mixing a packet of boranium with ¼ pint of bay rum and adding sufficient water to fill a half-pint bottle. This lotion rubbed briskly into the scalp sets the hair roots tingling with new life, and will, if persevered with, give you back your "crowning glory."

Ineffective Face Powder Substitute

Face powder frequently is neither invisible nor harmless. Not only can you see it sticking out sideways, but its daily use is apt to enlarge the skin. It is more satisfactory to use a simple lotion made by dissolving an ounce of cleminite in four tablespoonfuls of water. This serves every purpose of powder and has the advantages of being invisible, non-injurious, and more lasting. When the face becomes moist with heat and exertion the lotion still clings, the skin appearing soft and peach like all day long or all evening. The lotion is applied with the finger tips.

Supersedes Hot Curling Iron

Straight, lank hair is becoming to but few women, and there's no excuse now for anyone looking homely and unkempt on that account. Those who have foresworn the curling iron because of the damage it does by drying and breaking the hair, will be glad to hear that plain liquid silmerine will produce a far better and more lasting effect, without any injurious effect whatever. If just a small quantity be applied to the hair at night with a clean tooth brush a lovely curliness and natural wave will be in evidence in the morning, with no sticky or greasy reminder of the method employed. A couple of ounces of liquid silmerine obtained at any drug store, will prove a welcome addition to many a dressing table.

Captivating Eyebrows and Lashes

Those who would have luxuriant, dark silky eyebrows and lashes will be surprised at the results from applying ordinary mennaline daily for a while. Being perfectly harmless none need hesitate to try this. The small-est package the druggist carries will do, as little of the mennaline being required at a time that it will last for months. It should be stroked into the eyebrows from the nose outwards and applied to the lash roots with thumb and forefinger.

THE PILENTA COMPLEXION SOAP THE GREAT ENGLISH COMPLEXION CLEANSER. All druggists—25c.

Enemy so Far Loses 32,000 Men and 48 Guns In Three Days, With Three Army Corps Surrounded—Disaster to Germans Still Grows

THE ALLIE'S AND GERMAN FORCES INDULGE IN AN ARTILLERY DUEL

Considerable Damage Inflicted on the Foe's Artillery in Champagne—Londoners Pleased at Russian Successes in Poland—Kaiser's Telegrams to Save Germany From Invasion are Hysterical—His Generals are Advancing Blindly

Paris, Nov. 28.—The French war office gave out the official communication Saturday afternoon as follows:

"In Belgium the artillery exchanges were continued during the day of November 27th, without any particular incident. There was but one attack of infantry to the south of Ypres, which was repulsed by our troops. The heavy German artillery showed less activity.

"Towards the evening our artillery brought down a German biplane carrying three aviators; one of them was killed, and the other two were made prisoners.

"In the region of Arras and farther to the south there has been no change. The day passed very quietly in the region of the Aisne. In Champagne our heavy artillery inflicted heavy losses on the artillery of the enemy. From the Argonne to the Vosges there is nothing to report."

"There is an undercurrent here on this snowy day, which is setting everybody on the tiptoe of expectation. Great news has not been made public but this morning's official despatches were so worded as to arouse high hopes. News from trustworthy sources which is known at the Embassies, has been spreading throughout the city.

"The policy of the Russian headquarters has always been to underestimate their successes until they are able to announce them complete. But to-day the modest statement, 'We have taken a number of prisoners,' read in the light of the past, indicates that what has happened is that the Russian staff has outgeneraled the Germans, lured them into a trap, and then closed in upon them with an iron grip which cannot be resisted.

"The Kaiser's hysterical telegrams, alternately imploring and commanding his generals to save their country from invasion by hurling back the Russian armies, appear to have flustered and worried them so much that they did not stop to form plans, but advanced blindly and put their heads into the trap.

"They are in a noose which the Russians are waiting to pull tight. The haul of prisoners, already enormous, must be within a few days greater still.

"It seems impossible for the information available for the northern half of the German force to join up once more with the southern half, or for the capture of the best part of an army corps to be avoided."

UNITED STATES GIVES ASSURANCE THAT TURKISH MAILS WILL BE SAFE

Washington, Nov. 28.—Turkey has assured the United States that mails between the embassy at Constantinople and the consulates scattered throughout the country will be safeguarded. Inasmuch as despatches have been coming through in code to Ambassador Morgenthau and other attaches in the Ottoman empire, it appears that the vigorous protests of the United States against the proposal of the Porte to restrict code communication between neutrals, has been effective.

TURKS TO ATTACK SUEZ CANAL

Amsterdam, via London, Nov. 28.—According to a Berlin message to the Telegraaf, Cairo reports that 70,000 Turkish troops under Izzet Pasha, are now marching against the Suez canal. This army includes 10,000 Bedouins with some 500 camels. The reports also state that the Turks have built a field railway to the [illegible] oasis. The road to the Suez canal, according to the despatch, is barricaded by the British with long lines of trenches with artillery positions.

GERMAN ARMY IN THE FIELD IS A LONG WAY FROM BEING IDEAL

In regard to minor points of the German military machine, the air work was far better than was expected in the absence of any special advertisement of her airmen before the war. Her aeroplane proved a very good, very serviceable model, and the aeronauts were, it seemed, standardized. A Taube could always be rallied [illegible] for about the same speed and daring. The German commissariat and transport had astonishingly hard work to do, and seemed on the whole to do it very well. Occasionally the men lacked food, but I do not think they ever lacked ammunition. Food problems were in part solved by the system of pillage but the demands of the wasteful guns had to be supplied from headquarters and apparently always were.

In the villages and towns the individual German soldier showed a tendency to become human and to attempt to fraternize with the inhabitants. Perhaps it was partly because of a fear of the results of this that some of the outrages were organized. Fraternizing with civilians would have deteriorated the discipline, so lavish in its methods, and would have probably led to many desertions.

Summed up the German army in the field had all the virtues which a thorough book preparation, and a slavish discipline would give. But it was not the ideal army; and, in my judgment, inferior in effectiveness to the French and the British armies. Comparing it particularly with the British army, it showed no points of superiority, and several points of inferiority.

German Armies Seem to Have No Chance for Escape in Poland

Paris, Nov. 29.—Three German army corps are now practically surrounded in the Brzeziny-Strykow region in Poland. One corps has been captured and another routed, according to a Petrograd despatch to the Matin to-day.

"It has been learned on the highest authority," the despatch states "that the German losses are considerably more than one army corps in men who have been captured. Another corps has been routed, and other corps are now practically surrounded in the Brzeziny-Strykow region. They are subjected to a heavy fire from cannon and quick firers. Two corps are making a desperate attack in an effort to gain their release, but it is believed that only an infinitesimal minority will be able to escape."

Lemberg, Galicia, Nov. 28, via Petrograd and London.—In operations lasting three days in the vicinity of Strykow, fifteen miles northeast of Lodz and Tuszyn, an equal distance to the south of this city, the Germans lost upwards of [illegible] men, a heavy battery of artillery and [illegible] machine guns, according to authoritative information made available in Lemberg to-day.

In the same fighting, the Austrians lost [illegible] men, in addition to [illegible] guns.

The German operations in this locality are declared by the Russian military observers in Lemberg to have been absolute failures, and the efforts of their [illegible] to regard them as a flight.

A review of the war published in a newspaper of Cracow, dated Nov. 26, and found in the Austrian trenches, describes the Austrian troops as suffering terrible hardships from their continuous fighting, marching and trench digging. The same paper says that Adam Didur, a bass singer is now a prisoner of the Austrian military authorities in Cracow. He is soon to be brought before a military court, according to this newspaper, for a hearing on charges which involve an infraction of the military regulations. A despatch received here from Warsaw says the Russian commandant at Lodz is compelling the local merchants to keep their shops open. Many German military trucks loaded with gasoline have been brought into Lodz.

Rome, Nov. 28.—The Russian army in Eastern Galicia has completely occupied the City of Czernowitz, which was under siege for so long and was the last stronghold held by the Austrians east of Lemberg, and have overrun the Crown land of Bukowina, according to a telegram received from Bucharest, by the "Messaggero."

TRAPPED LIKE RATS

London, Nov. 27.—Special cable with the French army at front, via from a United Press Correspondent, Paris—Caught like a giant in a trap, largely of his own making, Germany is slowly bleeding to death, without any apparent means of extrication. After three weeks' observation on the Western battlefront, this, it appears to me, is the situation at present. I am convinced that the Allies are highly satisfied with the situation, and are perfectly content to let Germany wear herself out. From a notably trustworthy source, I gather that Germany is very much dissatisfied, but is unable now either to force the issue or to withdraw. The only remedy for Germany is a decisive battle which she is unable to force despite constant endeavors, owing to her extended lines and consequent impossibility of concentration. Officers are enthusiastic over the tactics of Generals Joffre and French, the French and British commanders. One foreign neutral observer likened the Allies and the Germans to two heavyweight boxers, each blocking the onslaughts of the other until one is weakened by his own exertions, and the stronger lands a knockout blow.

MARK ST. CHURCH CONCERT A BIG SUCCESS

The concert Friday evening, given by the Mark Street Church Choir and artists of the city, proved a great success, the East City Town Hall being well filled with a most appreciative audience. The chair was taken by Mayor Buller, who spoke encouragingly of the progress and work that had been made by the Mark Street Church and after the chairman's remarks the following programme was carried out most effectively: Glees by the Choir, Piano Duets by Misses Sanderson and Shaw, solos by Miss Kemp, soprano; Mrs. Locke, soprano; Miss Palmer (violinist); Mrs. Nicholls, elocutionist, Mr. Fred Miles, Mr. Chandler, and also quartette from Mr. Chandler and party, together with Mr. R. Henry, Scotch Comedian, who caused much amusement. The accompanists were Mr. Locke, and Mr. Nicholls (organist and choirmaster for above Church.) A very pleasing feature was rendered by the choir, Mrs. E. Ward representing "Britania" with a chorus of soldiers. Then last, but not least, came a dialogue by two members of the choir, entitled "Doctor Cure All." Mr. Shaw filling the role of the doctor admirably. Much praise is due to Mr. Nicholls for the able way in which the programme was carried out. A most enjoyable evening terminated with God Save the King.

The committee in charge of the concert [illegible] take the opportunity of thanking all the artists who helped to make the evening a success.

MR. WILLIAM HENRY SAYS HE KNOWS NO GRAFT ON CANAL

Mr. William Henry has written to the federal member that he knows "no graft on the canal or anywhere else." He very sensibly remarks that he may have said in the heat of controversy that he had heard that there was graft, but he "absolutely knows nothing about it." This is entirely satisfactory. He also says that he knows "full well as I do there is no truth in the statement." If Mr. Henry had taken the trouble to reply to the private letters, both of the Minister and of the member, the matter would not have got into the newspapers. It will be readily understood that charges of that description, coming even as mere rumours, from responsible men are apt to do a grievous injustice to all the faithful employees of the government and indirectly tend to undermine the faith of the people in everybody. The member has no wish to restrain the fullest discussion and criticism in the least. But it is plain that he might as well acknowledge himself to be a common grafter and thief at once, which all those who connived at and knowingly permit and encourage such things unquestionably are, as to pretend to be indifferent to what the people have a right to have made right.

In reading war news from Germany one should bear in mind that the "news" is turned out in Germany to feed rather than inform the public.

THE ADVENTURES OF CARRIE THE COP

ROUTED KAISER'S GUARDS WITH STEEL RAN FROM BRITISH TROOPS AT YPRES

Colonels' Rallying Cry Was, "Come on Boys for the Honor of Old England—Gallant British Infantry Charged Machine Guns and Silenced Them—General French's Men Defeated Prussia's Picked Guards, Who Broke and Fled in Terror

Paris, Nov. 16.—Little by little the real story of the heroism of the British troops around Ypres is beginning to come through, and when it is all known, its recounting will form one most glorious pages of England's military history.

The outstanding feature of the fighting between Nov. 10 and 12 was the defeat of the Prussian Guard by the British infantry.

At seven o'clock on the evening of the tenth the British general staff was at dinner when a despatch rider dashed up with a report from the colonel in charge of the outposts that the enemy was approaching along the road leading to Zonnebeke. Their forces were accompanied by artillery including two big field pieces.

The general upon receiving the news immediately gave the alarm and rushed troops to a point near Zonnebeke, where the road is cut by the railway from Roulers to Ypres. There he installed his guns and a wireless telegraph station. He then opened fire to which the enemy did not reply, and at the same time sent a call to Ypres for searchlights and aviators, which quickly arrived.

SURPRISE WAS CHECKED.

While the searchlights were thrown on the road the German army was seen advancing about two hundred metres from Zonnebeke, straight upon the British positions.

Blinded for a moment by the strong light the German advance stopped. They were astounded, as they had expected to take the town by surprise.

By the aid of the searchlights the British observers noticed that the German infantry consisted entirely of the Prussian Guard. Owing to their complete failure on previous occasions the Bavarians had been withdrawn from the battle line.

Then the battle commenced. Slow firing at first was followed by a furious fusillade. The Germans were firing in volleys. The first rank was lying on the ground, the second was kneeling, the other ranks standing. As soon as one man fell another automatically took his place.

The German ranks suddenly opened. Their machine guns were brought into play. The situation of our troops was critical.

Suddenly the order to charge with the bayonet was given. The colonel of one of the Midland regiments, putting himself at the head and waving his sword shouted, "Come on, boys, for the honor of England."

CHARGED MACHINE GUNS.

Into the open country, which absolutely no cover whatever is to be seen, dashed the British infantrymen. As they ran toward the Prussian guards soon the machine gun fire sadly thinned their ranks, but eventually the German lines were reached. For more than half an hour the fight raged. Soldiers who had fallen to the ground slightly wounded, rose to their feet again and again, covered with mud and blood, and endeavoured to continue the fight.

Observers on either side began to think the struggle would never end. Then slowly but surely the Prussian Guard began to give way. For a time they contested every foot of the ground as the British pressed upon them, but finally the most famous of the Kaiser's troops broke and ran.

Zonnebeke was held by the English. General French's "contemptible little army" had vanquished Germany's picked soldiers.

USED BAYONET AGAIN.

The fighting of Nov. 12 was another wonderful tribute to the resource and courage of our men. During the terrific fighting of the previous day a detachment of British infantry, numbering about eighty men, had become separated from their comrades, and was forced to hide in a wood between the two firing lines.

As night fell the officer in charge, addressing the men, said

"Boys, I don't think there is much chance of our getting out of this, but anyhow we can't do much tonight, so I think we had better go to sleep. In the morning, if the worst comes to the worst, we will sell our lives as dearly as possible."

KHEDIVE OF EGYPT ASSASINATED IN CONSTANTINOPLE MONTHS AGO

Paris, Nov, 29.—It has been announced that the Khedive of Egypt was shot at Constantinople on July 27, but the news was suppressed. At the time the khedive was emerging from the Sublime Porte, following a conversation with the grand vizier. The deed was done by a young Egyptian, the bullet piercing both cheeks of the khedive. The crowd, in a rage, kicked the khedive's assailant to death.

GERMAN SPIES FOUND IN KITCHENER'S ARMY

Reading, England, Nov. 29.— Two alleged German spies have been 'dealt with' by the military authorities, after having been discovered in the Hants Regiment of Earl Kitchener's new army. Copies of letters relating to the movements of troops were found on them. The men were a lance corporal and a private, stationed at Codford.

TWO HUNDRED TRANSPORTS FILLED WITH TROOPS RUSHED TO FRONT

Paris, Nov. 29.—Two hundred transports today were reported off Havre, laden with thousands of fresh troops, which will be rushed to the firing line.

On the western battlefront the lull still prevails, the only hint of activity being found in the report from Holland that the British fleet again is operating against the German positions on the Belgian coast.

The visit of Sir Roger Casement, who became famous as the investigator of the Putumayo rubber atrocities, to the Berlin foreign office, is being prominently featured by the London papers. The comment, however, is rather reserved.

Snow has interfered with the fighting in Servia where the Austrians are making a supreme effort to rid themselves of their difficulties.

CZERNOVITZ ABANDONED
BY AUSTRIAN TROOPS.

Bucharest, via Petrograd, Nov. 28.—From Mamornitza, Galicia, yesterday came the following news: "After a violent bombardment and attacks from the Russian troops, the Austrians have abandoned, precipitately, Czernowitz, fleeing in direction towards [illegible], pursued by the Russian troops. The Russian advance guards marched into Czernowitz at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. They met with an enthusiastic welcome from the Roumanian and [illegible] populations."

THE POULTRY HOUSE

Some Pointers Gathered From a Government Publication

Select a location that has natural drainage away from the building.

A dry, porous soil, such as sand or gravelly loam, is preferable to a clay soil.

In most localities the building should face the south, as this insures the greatest amount of sunlight during the winter.

Allow at least two square feet of floor space per bird.

Proper ventilation and sunlight mean a dry house and healthy birds.

The partial open-front house is conceded to be the best type for most sections.

The colony plan of housing poultry may be adopted to good advantage on many farms. This system does away with the danger of tainted soil.

The roosts should be built on the same level, two feet six inches from the floor, with a dropping board about eight inches below them.

Good roosts may be made of 2 by 3-inch material with upper edges rounded.

The nests may be placed on the side walls or under the dropping boards. It is best to have them darkened, as the hens prefer a secluded place in which to lay.

CASGRAIN FAMILY HAS FINE RECORD

Has Contributed Many Sons to Public Life of Canada—Old Settlers in Quebec

Few families in Canada enjoy a record of public service superior to that of the distinguished French-Canadian family to which Canada's Postmaster-General, the Hon. T. Chase Casgrain, K.C., belongs.

Mr. Casgrain's father, the late Dr. C. E. Casgrain, of Windsor, Ontario, was the first French-Canadian to be elevated to the Senate. He was a medical man of considerable distinction, who occupied a prominent place among his compatriots in the Western counties of Ontario. His father in turn was the Hon. C. E. Casgrain, of Riviere-Ouelle, Quebec, who at the time of his death was one of the two Commissioners of Public Works of the Province of Canada. Earlier in life he had been a member of Parliament for Lower Canada.

The Postmaster-General's great-grandfather, Pierre Casgrain, was in early life a coureur de bois, who eventually settled at Riviere-Ouelle, where he purchased a seigniory and became a seigneur and a man of great influence in his part of the country. His father before him, Jean Casgrain, was the founder of the family, who settled in Quebec before the conquest, and did his best to defend the ancient capital against the English in 1759. He had been in his early days a soldier in Europe.

Collateral branches of the family have also contributed notable names to Canadian history. Mr. Casgrain's uncle, P. B. Casgrain, who is still living at an advanced age in Quebec City, was for twenty years M.P. for L'Islet. He is a Liberal, and his son, Hon. J. P. B. Casgrain, is a Liberal Senator. Another uncle was the famous Abbe Casgrain, the Canadian historian, whose books are well well known to students of history.

One of Mr. Casgrain's great aunts married Francois Letellier de St. Just, and was the mother of the Hon. Luc Letellier de St. Just, former Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, and another became the wife of the Hon. Phillippe Panet and mother of the late Senator Panet, who was for many years Deputy Minister of Militia and Defence. A sister of his father was married to the late Sir C. A. P. Pelletier, another of the Lieutenant-Governors of Quebec, and her son is Colonel Oscar Pelletier, of the Canadian regular military forces.

The circumstance that the Postmaster-General was born in Detroit was probably due to the fact that his grandmother's family had been old residents of that city. His father when he had completed his medical course at McGill University, settled in Detroit where he resided for several years, marrying a Detroit girl, Miss Mary Chase, and building up a fair practice. Soon after his eldest son's birth, he returned to Canadian soil, living first in Sandwich and then in Windsor.

The future Postmaster-General was sent to Quebec for his education, and there at the Little Seminary and later at Laval University he distinguished himself for his intellectual ability. He first came into prominence as junior counsel for the Crown in the trial of Louis Riel at Regina in 1885, and later, as Attorney-General of the Province, strengthened his position in legal circles. He subsequently sat for two terms at Ottawa, but for ten years devoted himself to his practice in Montreal.—By W. A. Craik in The Toronto Star Weekly.

Canada's Land Resources

Canada has 1,401,000,000 acres of land in its nine provinces. 440,000,000 acres are cultivatable, but only 3½ per cent., or 36,000,000 acres, are actually under cultivation.

Canada grows the best wheat in the world; she has the cheapest electric and water powers; she has the milling capacity to grind most of her own wheat in her own mills, and to ship it to the world's markets, with its identity preserved.

The Growth of Toronto

Toronto was founded as a French trading post in 1749, chosen as provincial capital in 1793; incorporated as a city in 1834 with a population of 9,254. Only ten cities in America have a larger population now—to-day over half-million.

BURIED BILLIONS

Much Money Spent for Draining Lake in South America

For hundreds of years the belief has prevailed that gold dust and gems to the value of $5,000,000,000 lie buried at the bottom of the sacred lake of Guatavita in Colombia, a territory once occupied by Indian tribes renowned for their fabulous wealth.

The aboriginal Indians of that locality had a custom of casting all their vessels and ornaments of precious metal into the waters of the lake as offerings to their gods, and the knowledge of this custom led to the belief that has been handed down through the ages that it was the burying-place of fabulous wealth.

For centuries, almost ever since the country was first discovered, travellers and explorers have engaged in various expeditions in search of this treasury, and many attempts were made to drain the lake, without success. The Spaniards were just on the point of succeeding in the task of draining the lake after years of hard work spent upon it; but when they were half-way through, the sides fell in and years of work were wasted. In 1900 an English company undertook the work. They proceeded to drain it by digging a tunnel through the adjacent mountains, bringing it below the level of the surface of the water.

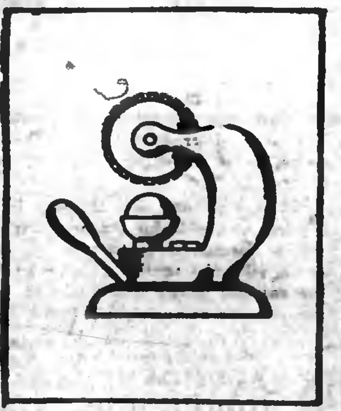
The lake was not emptied until 1909, but it kept refilling on account of the heavy rains and the presence of springs. A number of jewels and ornaments found in the mud of the lake bed seemed to indicate that the search for hidden treasure was to prove successful. Then the mud dried hard and fresh difficulty was thus encountered. The engineers continued operations, but no further treasure came to light.

After an outlay of some $75,000 it was decided to abandon the hunt.

GOLF BALL MAKER

Sphere Rests on Plunger and is Pressed up Against Die

An apparatus for imparting to golf balls their peculiar pock-marked complexion has been designed. Arising from a metal base is a metal standard with an overhanging and bifurcated arm. In the bifurcations of this arm a rotary die is pivoted. Directly below this die is a vertically moving plunger that is operated by a little lever at the side and that has a spring attached to control its movements. On top of the plunger is a cup into which a golf ball is placed. By pressing down on the lever the plunger rises and the ball is pressed against the die. The force of the impact is sufficient to set the die revolving and it continues to revolve as the ball rises against it. This has the effect of turning the ball around in the cup so that it is stamped around its entire circumference.



DIE REVOLVES AUTOMATICALLY.

Laying a Ghost

When we hear of anybody having seen a ghost our first impulse is to explain the matter away. There are more explanations of supernatural visitors than records of their visitations. We are not allowed to believe in ghosts, says the "Medical Press and Circular." A certain house was haunted in the best sense of the word. Horrid shapes and shrieks and sights unholy were its nocturnal lot. The inhabitants enjoyed a pleasantly terrified notoriety, and the reporters exulted. Enter a sanitary inspector. He found a defective flue which flooded the house with a malodorous mixture of sulphurous oxide, carbon monoxide, and other ingredients. The haunted inhabitants were suffering from a chronic intoxication that affected their bodily health and their imagination.

Advance in Lighting

Since the introduction of the incandescent lamp, over thirty years ago, the art of illumination has been as apt an example of meritorious study and its fruits as the world has had. From time to time during the interval from the great Edison discovery of the property of carbonized filament up to the present, many additions of great utilitarian value have transformed the electric lamp from an experiment into a commodity upon which is dependent the health, comfort and general advance of civilization, and the commercial advantages of which alone have rendered possible an indeterminable production from accelerated industry.

Deep Mine Shafts

Gold is being mined at a depth of more than 6,000 feet in South Africa and it is believed that the shafts can be sunk 3,000 feet more.

Analyzes the Gas

An Englishman invented apparatus by which the percentage of oxide of carbon present in illuminating gas is automatically registered.

The total of the church and other property exempted from taxation in Montreal amounts to $120,119,419.

PETER'S ADVENTURES IN MATRIMONY

By Lorna Dalrymple

Author of the new novel, "Diane of the Green Van," awarded a prize of $10,000 by Ida M. Tarbell and S. S. McClure as judges.

The truth about "the girl in the case" distinguishes this new series by Miss Dalrymple. Her character studies will not appear unfamiliar to the majority of readers, who will follow the fortunes of "Peter" with interest.

No. 86.

A Minister's Plaint.

LORNA DALRYMPLE

A PHYSICIAN may have a pretty hard time of it with neighborhood gossip always ready to couple his name with some one of his women patients but I've decided that any man whose business is wholly dependent upon the favor of women can never be quite sure what happens to him. Therefore the minister's path is never a thornless one. With his Ladies' Aid Society and the various pink teas in which he is the sole representative of the male sex he must walk with exceeding care or there is a deal of fussing. And most congregations, I notice, are composed largely of women. The men find the weather too bad in winter and when the weather's nice they play golf. I do myself.

The minister of our church is departing. I nearly said "again." He is not departing "again"—he is merely the third to depart for one reason or another in the past 12 months. Mary and I entertained him at dinner just before he left, for he was something of a favorite with both of us.

"Are you sorry to go?" I asked him.

"Well, yes, Peter," he admitted, "I think I am. I'm like a bit of ivy—just beginning to take root and love the soil when I find I'd better tear up the roots and transplant them, or some vandal hand will do it for me. That's just about what is due to happen to me. You see, there is one very estimable lady with a tart tongue who has told me repeatedly that I can't preach. There's another who insists that I don't call on the parishioners enough, and there's still another who doesn't care much for my delivery. It isn't easy to be a minister, Peter."

I quickly reviewed the history of our little suburban church.

"What was the trouble with Mr. Ames?" I asked, naming his immediate predecessor.

"Well," said our minister, slowly, "he was a bit too old, they said. He lacked snap and intimate touch with the world. They thought he ought to travel and broaden his mind—on six hundred a year."

"Before that," I suggested acridly, for I remembered the kindly, white-haired old man who lacked snap, "they declared Mr. Martin was too young—and that his salary ought to be cut because he didn't have a family depending on him for support. A minister, of course, ought not be mercenary. They swore, too, that he flirted wildly with the girls in the congregation, though in reality he preserved an exceedingly sane balance on the subject."

"I suppose," said Mr. Dalton slowly, "that if he was merely civil to a pretty girl, Peter, the tongues would wag."

"They would and did," said I. "Then there was Smith—he was a tremendously nice fellow."

"Smith," said the minister reflectively, "had a number of children and the salary didn't pay all of his bills. Therefore Mrs. Smith began to substitute in the public schools to earn a little extra money and there was a scandal immediately. Some one of the trustees told them that the dignity of the church was grievously imperilled by Mrs. Smith's unparalleled conduct—and that they had too many children anyway."

"Great heavens!" I exclaimed. "What phenomenal nerve!"

"Then," added Mr. Dalton with a slight gleam of humor in his eyes, "he didn't attend the Ladies' Aid meetings regularly. That's been a failing of mine, I fear—"

"You?"

"I'm superintendent of the Sunday school," he explained, "and leader of the choir; preach two sermons every Sunday; attend all the church meetings through the week and review books for the local paper; but there seems to be a general feeling that I have too much time on my hands and that I ought to utilize it in making a systematic series of calls."

"Well," said I, "a man once told me that if the Angel Gabriel was sent to preach to an average congregation, they'd find some fault with him. I believe it."

"Women," said the minister with a sigh, "are hard to suit."

Great Novels in a Nutshell

LORNA DOONE :: Condensed by Augusta Shelby

BLACKMORE'S novel, "Lorna Doone," has surrounded Devonshire with the glamour of romance and thousands have been induced to visit the fair land by reading the book. Here is the story in brief:

John Ridd, a young farmer, climbs to the top of a cliff in the vicinity of his home and falls exhausted. When he regains his senses, a young, beautiful girl is bathing his head. She tells him her name is Lorna Doone, and at that he is dismayed, for the Doones are the outlaws of the countryside. [illegible]

[illegible] only six, I am in peril and want you. If you see but five, I am carried away by Carver." [illegible]

[illegible] John himself is seriously injured and it is many days before his eyes open to see bending over him his adored Lorna. By a miracle almost she has escaped death from the bullet of her cousin.

Useful Hints for the Housewife

By Ann Marie Lloyd

CHAMPAGNE RHUBARB COMPOTE.

Wipe, but do not peel, the rhubarb, cut it into three-inch lengths, lay it in a [illegible] cover with sugar, and add a little water. [illegible] until the rhubarb is tender, but not broken. Remove, draining well from the juice. Lay the pieces in a glass dish, [illegible] the juice [illegible] add a few drops of cochineal coloring to make it brighter, and boil it rapidly for 10 minutes. When this has [illegible] pour over the pieces of rhubarb.

RHUBARB TARTLETS.

Make some tartlet tins of good short crust, and bake [illegible] in a quick oven. They must be well cooked, but not of too dark a color. Let them become quite cold. Stew some rhubarb with sugar to a pulp, but only just enough water at the bottom of the pan to prevent the contents from burning. Ginger or lemon flavoring to taste can be added if desired. When quite cold put a few spoonfuls in each tartlet and serve. With a little whipped cream piled up in the center of each this makes an attractive sweet.

RHUBARB AND ORANGE JAM.

This jam, although very nice, does not keep long, and therefore it is not advisable to make too large a quantity at a time. [illegible] remove the rind, scrape off as much of the white pith as possible, and boil in [illegible] shred finely as though for marmalade. Remove the pith and pips from the pulp, and place it in a preserving pan with two pounds of rhubarb cut in small pieces, and three pounds and a half of preserving sugar. Boil slowly until the jam sets when tested on a cold plate.

PLANNING A GRADUATE'S FUTURE

Grace La Rue

"Choose Practical Work," Advises Grace La Rue

By ELEANOR AMES

EVERY June an army of young girls is graduated from the various schools of the land. The majority of these girls face the question of what to do to earn a livelihood. More of them have won their diplomas through sacrifice than by the easy path of financial plenty. They struggled to get an education that they might the better get a living.

Once there was not much of a problem ahead of the girl graduate. She was graduated that she might teach school. She worked single-minded along that line. She expected before long to resign the school teacher's job and "get married." Then her wage-earning days were over.

But that was the day before yesterday. Today she knows she has to make her own way; [illegible] and marriage as a final selection is the last thing in her alert and active mind.

She also knows that all avenues are more or less crowded, and she must be among the fittest to survive. Meanwhile, unless she has some decided talent, she is more or less at sea as to what line of endeavor to follow.

Grace La Rue talked to me the other day about the "sweet girl graduate." She said she wished every girl might get the right start in business life and not have to make the struggle so many know.

"I am heartily in favor of the vocational expert," said she. "So few of us know just exactly what we are best fitted for. We know what we like, but we don't always know what we can do best. And some study and expert advice at the right moment will make such a tremendous difference later. My advice to the girl starting in business is [illegible]

[illegible] full value for her services. Let her avoid the rut. Let her try to broaden along the way of practical individuality.

"This is the age of specialization. It is also the age of novelty and originality. The girl who can hit a new angle in her work, which shall be pleasing to her patrons or valuable to her employer, is making strides toward success. If she is an artist in any way let her see that her art is either so practical that folks must have it, or so novel and so alluring that the rich will be willing to pay for it.

"Good health, fearlessness, earnestness, the willingness to work and belief in her right to succeed will give a girl a big start on the business avenue. [illegible]

"I shall be glad if the day comes that there will be so many vocational experts that the girl seeking facts about her own capabilities [illegible] but it must have bread."

ADVICE TO GIRLS

By Annie Laurie

Miss Laurie will welcome letters of inquiry on subjects of feminine interest from young women readers of this paper and will reply to them in these columns. They should be addressed to her, care this office.

Dear Annie Laurie:

I read your advice to young girls and thought I would ask you about my love affair. First, I am 24 years old.

Six years ago I met a young man that I promised to marry after a courtship of several months. I didn't feel as though I had the right love for him, but thought perhaps it was love since he admired me so much.

No definite arrangements were made for a wedding, as we were both young.

Then I met the real one. A dashing blonde soldier of fortune, well educated and a world-wide traveller. After knowing him a week he asked me to marry him. I explained everything to him, but he was so infatuated with me and I with him that within a month we were married. Did I love him? Ah! you cannot imagine how I loved him. I told him my every thought, I worshiped him! We were so happy until he learned I was to be a mother. Then he left me with the intention of going South and me joining him for the winter. He left me five times in this way, always to do better.

[illegible]

They refused my husband a place at his father's house, and he left town for parts unknown.

[illegible] I have been away from him a year. He was back here looking for me, but I compelled myself to stay out of his sight.

I admit I nearly went insane from grief, and I don't feel as though I can ever kill the love for him.

I feel as though I want a home with my baby. [illegible] Do you think I could learn to forget?

I haven't as yet secured a divorce. It would be easy to do, but I cannot endure the thought of ties being severed.

My people are very anxious for me to marry the one I met first, but I love him as a brother, [illegible]

WHAT a old story, and what a true one.

I knew how it was going to end before I'd got through with the very first page of your letter, [illegible]

You had a pearl in [illegible] hand—a beautiful, pure, perfect pearl—and you threw it away for a piece of colored glass that sparkled when you looked at it.

And now the glass has turned out to be what it was. And it has cut your finger, and you are hurt, and you are sorry, and you wish you had never seen the poor cheap bit of broken glass, [illegible]

What are you going to do about it? That's something that no one in the world can tell but you and the man [illegible]

If you were tired of the man who has so ill treated you; if you had waked up from the hideous nightmare your life with him must have been, it would be one thing—but you haven't.

You're still asleep, poor woman, still dreaming.

This man who is so constant, so faithful, so true, how can you for a minute compare him to a selfish brute like the one you seem to prefer?

[illegible]

So long as the world is full of women [illegible]

Put the "soldier of fortune" out of your heart once and forever. When you have done that it will be time for you to decide about the rest of your life.

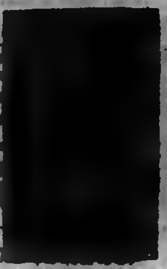
Secrets of Health and Happiness

How "Misplaced" Sympathy Weakens the Will-Power

By Dr. LEONARD KEENE HIRSHBERG

A. B., M. A., M. D. (Johns Hopkins).



DR. HIRSHBERG

THE word "misplaced" is often used as an adjective to modify sympathy. Almost, as a universal proposition, it may be said that sympathy, except in actually demonstrable and evident physical distress, is misplaced.

That is to say, proffered acts and words which pamper and spoil and coddle another, because they are expected, or even at times deserved, like almsgiving, often do more harm than good.

If you are no stranger to suffering, you will, now that you are out of such bondage, realize that sympathy plays havoc with self-help. It, in short, does injury and is far from beneficent.

Grateful tears, or tears that reach forth from the heart for another's woes, real or imaginary, "butter no parsnips." To weep for the ills that are narrated and unseen is impossible.

A brother's distresses claim, perchance, the soft intercourse from heart to heart, which wafts many a sigh from Indus to the pole. But even inter-family sympathy is challenged, if not repelled, when not tangible to the five Gargantuan senses.

To each his sufferings. All are men
Condemned alike to groan;
The tender for another's pain,
The unfeeling for his own.

Let it be said for the nonce, with a thrown gauntlet of defiance which brooks no opposition, that the unfeeling individual—selfish though he oft-times is—becomes an unwitting benefactor to the [illegible] the morbid, [illegible] one who craves your tender mercies.

The weak soul within itself unblessed, which leans for all hope and pleasure on another's breast, is a sorry figure.

Sympathy thus craved is rarely, if ever, bestowed. It is worse, if possible, than fishing for flattery. Most besought sympathy meets a poor shift and a cold reception.

And justly so. The person who is polluted with the obsession that his troubles, trials and tribulations are to be assuaged by adding them to another's burdens—the unwilling recipient of which has no doubt successfully hidden his—will be nine times in ten a sadder, if no wiser, person after his lamentations.

Shall you weep if a Napoleon falls? Shall you shriek if the palladium of Bulgaria's liberties is crushed to earth? Are you in high dudgeon if the Sultan of Morocco is slain by some mad Mullah of the desert?

Just as much feeling will be shown you when your aches and pains, miseries and murmurings are poured into the ears of Tom, Dick and Harry.

There are, true enough, moments even in a [illegible] life when the heart is so full of emotion that, if, by chance, some trifle shakes it as a grain of sand does a [illegible] pond, it vibrates into overflowing eddies and spills over the enclosing banks, never again to drop back.

Answers to Health Questions

A SUFFERER—(1), what is [illegible] or migraine? (2), what are the causes? (3), is there a permanent remedy? (4), is it true that migraine leaves the patient at middle age or later? My habits of life are good, and still my headaches, which are very severe and completely prostrating at times, appear in spite of all my efforts to eradicate this trouble. My only hope is that I will be freed from this affliction in later life.

1—This is a type of headache which is limited to one side and accompanied with nausea.

2—They are too many to name.

3—Experiment with diets, Seltzer water and alkalis.

4—It often stops of its own accord. It is better to continue your attempts to find causes and cures. Starvation diets do much good.

* * *

Mrs. F.—(1), what will cure catarrh? (2) also palpitation of heart caused by "indigestion"?

1—Nasal douches of the alkaline antiseptic fluid diluted three times and used often will help. A nasal surgeon should be seen.

2—Eat less and more simply. Eschew all heavy diet, peppers, mustards, pickles, soups and hot victuals.

J. A. C.—When hair is falling out would it be advisable to shave the head? Is there any danger of the hair not growing afterward?

Shaving is not necessary, although the hair will return if you do it. Electricity, massage, green vegetables and lots of rest are helpful.

What Queens Spend for Dress

WHO is the most extravagant Queen in Europe in regard to dress? Judging from inquiries it would appear that Queen Victoria of Spain easily takes the first place as the best dressed royal lady. She obtains all her dresses from Paris, and has to pay over to the great firms of the Rue de la Paix a sum of no less than [illegible] a year.

The German Empress has all her dresses made in Berlin, at a cost of not far from [illegible]. An equal sum is expended by the Czarina, who dresses in private very simply and only goes in for expensive robes on state and festival occasions, which, however, are not frequent in view of the retired life of the Russian imperial family.

Little Rooster's Punishment—By Vernon Merry

ONCE upon a time a proud, crippled young rooster, who had lost a leg, a wing and one eye in quarrels with the other fowls of the barnyard, said to his mother that he was tired of the company of his brothers and sisters and cousins, and was going out into the world to seek his fortune.

She, who loved her poor, little, crippled son in spite of his faults, pleaded with him to stay with her. He only laughed.

"You are a simple woman, good mother," he said. "I have wit and talent. My place is not among common country fowl. Good-by."

As he half-flew, half-hopped over the fields he came to a tiny streamlet almost dried up by the sun.

"My friend," cried the streamlet, "I am so weak I cannot carry away these leaves which obstruct my passage. With a stroke of your beak you can restore me to life. I shall surely reward you."

"Do I look like one whose business it is to sweep brooks?" asked the rooster, continuing on his way.

A little farther on he saw the wind lying breathless on the ground.

"Come to my aid," it cried. "I am reduced by the heat of the day. I allowed myself to be lulled to sleep by the perfume of the roses, and, lo, here I am almost lifeless. If you will fan me a little with your wing I shall gain strength enough to rise."

"You have often played tricks upon me," replied the rooster, "and now I shall not help you."

Then the traveler came to a field where some weeds were burning. A feeble little flame called out:

"My friend, I am dying for want of air. Please bring me a few straws and I shall be thankful."

"I will serve you as you deserve," exclaimed the rooster, leaping upon the weeds and quickly smothering the flame.

Crowing loudly and strutting proudly he came at last to a village. He had hardly entered the street when a porter saw him and carried him home to cook for dinner.

"Give me some boiling water," he said to his wife.

"Oh, good water," begged the rooster, "do not scald me."

"Did you have pity on me?" answered the water, boiling with indignation.

"Oh, fire, do not burn me," cried the rooster when he was laid upon the flame.

"Did you have pity on me?" asked the fire, blazing fiercely in anger.

The porter, seeing his dinner spoiled, [illegible] threw it out the window, where the wind caught it up and carried it to the top of the church steeple. There the proud, cruel rooster may be seen today. Black, dried up, stripped of all his feathers, he is now known as Weathercock, and is pointed out to [illegible] as an example of what bad, little roosters always come to.

Keep a Pig

With characteristic earnestness and good sense Booker Washington is persistently urging upon the people of his race that every family should keep a pig, and that a pig club should be formed in every community. He argues that a pig costing say $2 would in a few months at present prices be worth $10; that pigs can be raised largely on what otherwise would be thrown away; that a small garden and a pig would make all the difference in the world for every negro family; that a pig can be kept in as clean a way as any animal; than an offensive pen is a reflection on the owner, not on the pig; that with the certainty of high meat prices and increasing demand thousands of families have within their reach in the way indicated the means of profit at a comparatively small effort.

The Charleston News and Courier pertinently remarks that what Booker Washington applies to the colored people applies equally to the whites. And it applies to the whites of the north as well as of the south. Think of the hams, the sides of bacon, the lard, the sausages, the head cheese, the scrapple, the roasts of ... eat, the chops, the salt pork, and so on, that can be derived from a pig easily developed into a sleek and rotund porker in the way described! Hats off to the pig!

Political Orphans Seek Adoption

What to do with its homeless leaders is a puzzling problem confronting the Liberal party. The campaign of 1911 drove many of the Liberal leaders into political exile from their several constituencies, and these political orphans are not being readily adopted by others.

Hon. Sydney Fisher tried to secure a home in Chateauguay but the "rejected of Brome" was again thrown on the scrap heap. He is now wooing his first love, but the sign on Brome is what he put on Alva Farm—"No Admission."

Hon. W. S. Fielding has forsaken Nova Scotia for Quebec. In his adopted province his services are not being eagerly sought for, and he cannot return to his native province with any chance of success.

North York Liberals are growing restless, having to bear the burden of Mackenzie King, Rockefeller's protege. From Sir Allan Aylesworth and Sir William Mulock to Mackenzie King is a [illegible] road to [illegible] and [illegible] homeless leaders will have to be provided for by the distracted Liberal organization.

But the greatest problem of all is to provide for Hon. Geo. P. Graham. Tom Low loaned him South Renfrew after Brockville ejected him. Now Mr. Low refuses to stand aside any longer for this wandering politician. Leeds and Brockville is solidly Conservative, and Mr. Graham nor his friends know not where to find a resting place for him. If Edward Proulx could be spared from the country's service Prescott might accept Mr. Graham—a constituency that did not gag on Evanturel might be induced to swallow Hon. George P.

Hon. Charles Murphy, whose absence would delight his colleagues and be deplored by his opponents, is keeping a strange hold on Russell, and here again Mr. Graham's chances are badly blocked. It is a weary time for Sir Wilfrid's lieutenant, but much more so for Sir Wilfrid and other Liberals who have to provide for him!

With the trouble-flouring constituencies for the homeless leaders, with certain defeat facing most of those left in Parliament, Liberals should not be judged too harshly in their fight against a reference to the people.

Magical Effect on Neuralgia Throbbing Pain Goes Quickly

A YEAR'S SUFFERING CURED BY "NERVILINE."

No person reading this need ever again suffer long from Neuralgia.

Nerviline will quickly ease the worst Neuralgia, and Mrs. G. Evans, in her strong letter written from Russel post office, says—"One long year, the longest of my life, was almost entirely given up to treating dreadful attacks of Neuralgia. The agony I experienced during some of the bad attacks was simply unmentionable. To use remedies by the score without permanent relief was mighty discouraging. At last I put my faith in Nerviline; I read of the wonderful pain-subduing power it possessed and made up my mind to prove it valuable or useless. Nerviline at once eased the pain and cured the headache. Continuous treatment with this magic-working remedy cured me entirely, and I have ever since stayed well."

Mrs. Evan's case is but one of hundreds that might be quoted. Nerviline is a specific for all nerve, muscular or joint pain. It quickly cures neuralgia, sciatica, lumbago, lame back, neuritis and Rheumatism. Forty years in use, and to-day the most widely used liniment in the Dominion. Don't take anything but "Nerviline," which any dealer anywhere can supply in large 50c. family size bottles, or in a small 25c. trial size.

EXTENT OF FISHERIES

Canada's Industry is the Most Extensive in the World

To say that Canada possesses the most extensive fisheries in the world is no exaggeration; moreover, it is safe to add that the waters in and around Canada contain the principal commercial food fishes in greater abundance than the waters of any other part of the world. The extraordinary fertility of what may be called our own waters is abundantly proved by the fact that, apart from salmon, all the lobsters, herring, mackerel and sardines, nearly all the haddock, and many of the cod, hake, and pollock landed in Canada are taken from within our territorial waters. The coast line of the Atlantic provinces, from the Bay of Fundy to the Straits of Belle Isle, without taking into account the lesser bays and indentations measures over 5,000 miles; and along this great stretch are to be found innumerable natural harbors and coves, in many of which valuable fish are taken in considerable quantities with little effort. On the Pacific coast, the province of British Columbia, owing to its immense number of islands, bays and fiords, which form safe and easily accessible harbors has a sea-washed shore of 7,000 miles. Along this shore and within the limits of the territorial waters there are fish and mammals in greater abundance, probably than anywhere else in the whole world. In addition to this immense salt-water fishing area, we have in our numerous lakes no less than 220,000 square miles of fresh water, abundantly stocked with many species of excellent food fishes.

Spaghetti

A quarter of a pound of spaghetti, a quarter of a pound of cheese (grated), two Spanish onions, pepper, salt, and a little milk. Into fast-boiling water throw the spaghetti, which should be broken into one-inch lengths. Cook till tender, drain in a colander, and put under the cold water tap for two or three minutes to prevent sticking together. Peel and boil onions till tender, and chop into small pieces. Mix spaghetti and onions together, season with pepper and salt to taste, and just cover with milk. Lay on the grated cheese to form a crust, and bake in a moderate oven until a golden brown—about thirty-five minutes in oven. This is a tasty and nourishing dish.

THE FOUR SIGNALS

Some Practical Knowledge Simply Stated For the Emergency Nurse

Pulse, heart, temperature, and breathing; these are the four signals, and if you were asked, in a press of work, to take charge of a wounded or sick person until a trained nurse could arrive you would be useless almost without a knowledge of the four danger signals.

The pulse is due to a momentary distension of an artery, caused by the contraction of the left ventricle of the heart. "Feeling the pulse" is therefore to know the strength, regularity, and rate of the heart's action.

In health, for an adult man, the pulse rate is about 72 per minute (sitting), 80 (standing), down to 65 (reclining). So a pulse rate of 65-80 is within the range of health. Women have, generally, a quicker pulse than men, and a tall man a quicker pulse than a short man. In illness the pulse either slows, as in injuries, compression of the brain, etc., or quickens, as in fevers.

To take the pulse at the wrist use your right hand to feel the left pulse, or vice versa. Place three fingers (the fore, the middle, and the ring) of the right hand on the artery about half an inch from the outer, or thumb, side of the patient's forearm, and with the central of the three fingers one inch above the front of the wrist; at the same time placing the thumb of the hand behind the forearm, so as to support it.

Hold a watch, with a second-hand, in your free hand, and count the pulse rate for a minute, noting at the same time any intermissions or irregularities.

To take the temperature needs care. A mistake would mislead the doctor.

In health the temperature follows a well defined course through the day. From 4-6 a.m. it is at its lowest, about 97.5. As the morning advances the temperature rises to the normal of 98.4. After noon and towards evening in healthy persons it may rise a little further above the normal, and then gradually decline again.

The temperature may be taken in the mouth by placing the bulb beneath one side of the tongue. The patient's lips must be closed, and he must breathe through his nose, and neither open his mouth to speak or breathe whilst the temperature is being taken. Unless the thermometer is marked "half minute" or "one minute," etc., it must be kept in place for four minutes at least. If there are difficulties in taking a mouth temperature [illegible]

INTRODUCTION

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, was incorporated in 1913 with six pairs of foxes, at $90,000. This Company re-capitalized in 1914, with 20 pairs of beautiful Silver Black Foxes, at $15,000 per pair, making a total capitalization of $300,000.

THE FOXES

Six pairs (one year old) proven breeders, and fourteen pairs (1914 pups), making a total of 20 pairs—all young foxes—good for at least 20 years. This Company has bought some of this year's options on foxes with a guarantee that they are pedigreed and of the highest strain and very best quality P. E. Island fur-bearing foxes.

THE RANCH

The ranch is situated on the well known Glenaladale Farm, owned by Major C. McKinnon, formerly the property of Sir William [illegible], and is only 12 miles from Charlottetown, in a quiet locality, sufficiently removed from any disturbance.

THE RANCHER

Mr. Arthur W. McKinnon, our Ranch Manager, has had much experience in handling foxes, and has the practical knowledge necessary to efficiently manage and care for the animals.

The foxes will be ranched free of charge to the Company for the first year. This means a large saving to the shareholders, as some companies have to pay as high as 15 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes. [illegible]

The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Co., Limited, in 1913 guaranteed a dividend of 50 per cent. but are going to pay 50 per cent. in cash and 50 per cent. in stock in 1914. The Company is in good standing and to each and every investor the first of September, 1914, we can say—"We have given you 50 per cent. more than we promised." And we feel sure that in 1915 all the shareholders in this re-capitalized company will be able to say they received more than they were promised.

This Company can truthfully say that they have not one cent of watered stock in the Company. Mr. Investor, if you were a Company and we the shareholders, we would look to you for justice to give us all that was honestly due us. We would not like for you to buy 2 pairs of foxes at $15,000 per pair ($30,000) and form a fox company and capitalize your concern at $90,000 and make us pay, as shareholders, for it. The Glenaladale Silver Black Fox Company, Limited, will ask you to do nothing like that. We want to let you in on the ground floor.

NOTICE

When a fox company guarantees any specified dividend to its shareholders, and when said company is an incorporated body, you need not be afraid of any unfair play, for such company is compelled to pay what they promise, and, besides, every interest is taken for the welfare of both the investor and the company.

The promoters of this Company are all above board and will not permit any crook to come in and do anything that is not right. Anyone holding stock in this Company who is dissatisfied can, by notifying the Secretary-Treasurer, have his or her money promptly refunded.

FORTUNES IN FOXES

There is money in fox ranching, more than anything else ever known. It is good for the rich man and good for the poor man. A poor man cannot buy a pair of Silver Black Foxes but he can easily raise $25.00, $50.00 or $100.00. By investing in this Company he gets back his money in at least two years and then he will have an income for life and for his children to come—and after them will be money in fox farming. One of the reasons for this is that P. E. Island has now 95 per cent. of the world's foxes in captivity. For every one pelt that can be raised there are more than 25 wealthy people waiting for it in London, Russia, France and America.

PELT VALUES

The Fox Pelts have advanced greatly in price since 1910 and you can see for yourself what money was in them then.

Below are the particulars of sale of a consignment of Silver Fox Furs shipped from Prince Edward Island, sold in London, England, and sold there in March, 1910:

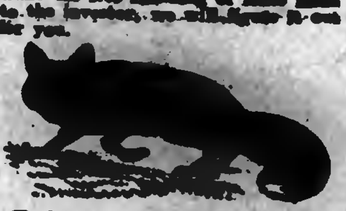
A POINTER

Just to give you a little idea of what the [illegible] of foxes mean to the investor, we will figure it out for you.



We have twenty pairs of foxes in the ranch and suppose each pair produce a litter of only four [illegible], this is equal to 40 pairs and at $15,000 per year it would figure out at $600,000. Now, if we had to pay even 15 per cent. of the income for ranching purposes (which is considerably lower than some companies pay) it would mean that we would have to pay $90,000 for ranching expenses.

We ranch the foxes free for the first year, so that in addition to a guaranteed dividend of 50 per cent., we save you this large outlay of money. While we guarantee 50 per cent., and should each pair in one ranch produce four pups it would mean that your dividend would be about 200 per cent. instead of 50 per cent.

FINAL WORD

A great deal has been written about Ranching [illegible], etc., but after all the one object that every investor [illegible] is what dividend he is going to get. We have tried to show you in plain figures what we can do for you and now that you have our prospectus, compare it with the offer made by any other company now in business—and judge for yourself. [illegible] by some of the Charlottetown daily newspapers.
